"Monroe Doctrine Is Dead in All Latin America; We've Grown Too Big," Says Argentina's President

Calls It 'Gutta Percha Message' Which We Stretch as We Choose

In a New Edition of His Complete Literary Works, He Accuses Us of Flagrant Inconsistencies, Declares That We Seek Trade Only and Argues That Our Demand That Europe Keep Out of This Hemisphere Is Due Solely to Our Selfish Desire to Protect Ourselves With Never a Real Thought of the Welfare of South American Countries.

> Yet it was not geography that created this; it was due to the races that divide among themselves the rule of the world—the races that engender insulting aloofness and antagonisms. The Latin race, it must be confessed, goes through periods of obscurity and depression, which form a contrast to its former historical greatness, but such eclipses are temporary, and the race that ruled over the world will some day recover the energies, initiative, enterprises, glories and will power that are the attributes of that soul which Edmond Demolins wished to exchange for some other, without remembering that it has inspired heroism, glory, greatness, explorations, inventions, arts and sciences which are not the heritage of the Anglo-Saxon, but the rich possession of the Latin race.
> Whether it be due to race, geography or history, the isolation in which the Americans live is an incontrovertible fact. The Isthmus does not bind us together; on the contrary, it separates us from the Colossus whose frontiers touch upon Canada. Whereas the sea is a tie which unites us to the civilization of the Old World, which has aggrandized and complemented us in our historical evolution, we have only unwelcome memories of our friends of the North. It is Monroe's fault.—PRESIDENT PENA.

The sea unites South America to Europe, the Isthmus of Panama separates it from North America.

THIS geographical epigram is found in a bitter indictment of the Monroe Doctrine and of the American nation in general that appears in a new edition of the complete literary works of Dr. Roque Saenz Pena, President of the Argentine republic.

The publication of these works is strikingly coincident with the fact that President Pena, who is as distinguished a literateur in his country as President Wilson is in the United States, but recently, on the ground of the great friendship of his country for us, put himself at the head of the so-called A B C mediators to bring about peace between the United States and Mexico.

His vigorous utterances and his criticism are highly interesting at this time as indicating what is undoubtedly a general opinion throughout South America.

"The Gutta Percha Message" is one characterization of the doctrine. Dr. Pena feels justified in calling it that because, he says, the "United States stretches it to suit its convenience."

President Pena admits that the Monroe Doctrine had a very important mission to fill in the early part of the last century, but he says that the Latin-American republics have grown so great now they resent the effort of "the Colossus of North America" to hold a protecting aegis over the South American nations.

He accuses us of inconsistency in our interpretation of the doctrine, since, though announcing that we shall oppose attempts of foreign nations to intervene in the affairs of the American continent, we by no means exclude ourselves from such intervention. He furthermore points out that time and again South American countries have been attacked by Europeans without getting any protection from us or even eliciting a protest.

United States Wants Commerce.

IN making his charges of inconsistency against us, President Saenz Pena says:

> Not a few of our public men in South America consider the Monroe Doctrine the foundation of public law in America, and every time that the Cabinet at Washington invokes it in behalf of its own transitory interests it awakens warm approval in Central and South America, just as if it were the fiat of national independence in the political evolution of the South American republics.
> This, to my way of thinking, is to commit a mistake and persist in being anarchistic. Brought into relief in these days of ours by the political acts which it has engendered, the Monroe Doctrine shows the scars left by time and private interests on its moral physiognomy, significance and legal form, from the days of Polk to those of Cleveland.
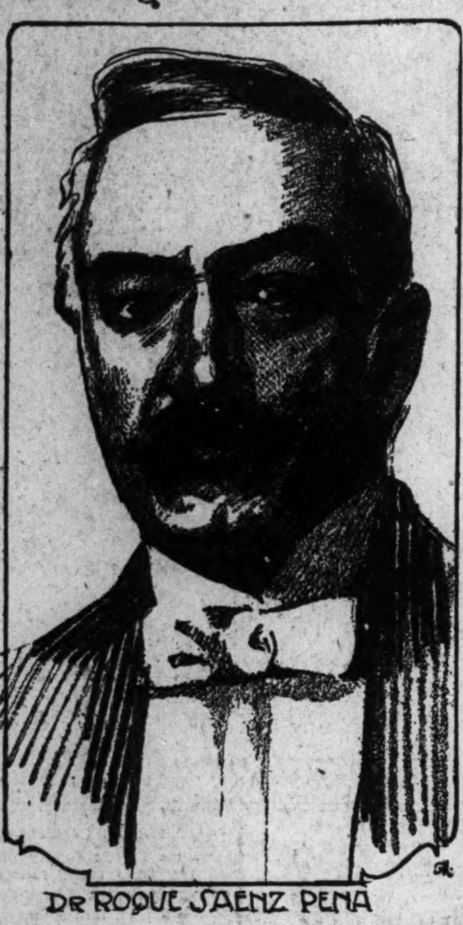
> As a supplement to the policy of Great Britain, inspired by the wisdom of Canning, the doctrine had its day, fulfilled its mission and accomplished its historical purpose in the first third of the last century. An opportunist declaration, it was appropriate to its time, but became untenable toward the end of the century that saw its birth.

Senor Saenz Pena declares that, whenever South American nations have banded together for mutual benefit, the United States has held aloof—as in 1825, at the Congress of Panama, and later at that of Tacubaya. Later still, at the Pan-American Congress of 1889, the delegates from South American countries who thought that something like a brotherly union was to result were disillusioned, according to Senor Saenz Pena, by finding that the United States was interested simply and solely in getting the South American markets for her commerce to the detriment of the European merchants who already occupied the field.

Not only that, continues the Argentine statesman—the United States wished to accomplish this result without granting South America reciprocal favors. She wished to get advantages in the Southern markets, while keeping up her high protective tariff against merchandise imported from South America.



DR ROQUE SAENZ PENA

Turning once more to the Monroe Doctrine, he takes up that part of it in which its author says that the United States cannot tolerate any attempt of European nations to impose their forms of Government on any part of the New World. On this he visits his severe displeasure. He writes:

> This fragment of Monroe's message shows him as passionately attached to the political system of the United States, which is understandable in view of the success of that country's institutions and the wisdom of its organic structure. This was right so far as it applied to the territory of the United States, but ceased being so when it trespassed upon the form of government of nations no less independent than those of Europe.
> His words regarding the political system of the nations of America could not have been of graver importance. They imply a restriction of the autonomous power of those nations to give themselves the form of government best suited to their character and sociological conditions; they imply forcing them into the mould of a nation which, in adopting its form of government, exercised the identical right demanded and exercised by other nations. * * *
> In the name of what principle can this interference for the purpose of directing and constituting the political organization of the new republics be justified? Were these republics ever consulted? Was there a plebiscite representing the whole continent which sanctioned the extension of the institutions of the northern republic to the whole hemisphere? * * *
> Surely it would be more protecting and generous to impose upon us not only the American Constitution, but American laws. Why not have the Capitol at Washington the seat of the great Assembly which would make us South Americans Republicans with Harrison and McKinley or Democrats with Cleveland? * * *
> National happiness is not monopolized by the Yankees. England also may point to her happiness and to her liberties, since her economic future is surer, her material power stronger, and her financial organization wiser. Nevertheless, we have not heard that England has served upon France a prohibition of the republican form of government, nor that she has notified the European continent that she will not tolerate any system that is not her system from which she has derived happiness and good fortune.
> England, like the United States, owes her political prosperity to an essentially free regime; she bases her guarantees, her preservation and her rights more on custom and tradition than on the form of her institutions. From this it is evident that national happiness and prosperity are rooted in liberty and not in the system serving it.
> The Yankees talk about a psychology which may be considered all their own, but for that very reason it should not be forced upon other nations which do not possess it. Desjardins has refuted the predominance of any one psychology in these words as eloquent as they are true:
> "Every nation has her psychology. The Roman republic had hers which impelled her to subjugate the world by force. The successors of Mahomet had theirs, which impelled them to preach the Koran by means of an implacable war and to conquer Syria, Egypt, Persia, Africa and Spain for the Prophet. England, in her turn, had her 'fixed and immovable state of mind' in accordance with which she insisted for centuries on the right of search of ships, fictitious blockades, and the appropriation of the enemy's merchandise conveyed under a neutral flag.
> "International law has been founded on the ruins of all these special psychologies. Its function is to replace as far as possible the caprices and prejudices of each people by a set of common rules. To attempt to destroy this is to force humanity back."

Continuing his analysis of Monroe's famous pronouncement, Senor Saenz Pena falls afoul of the passage from it to the effect that the voluntary acceptance of foreign intervention by the Southern republics is unimaginable. He says:

> This is the first time in all the lengthy document that there is any mention of the will of the Southern republics, whose destiny has been decided without consultation and contrary to custom by the mapping out of forms of government for them.

Senor Saenz Pena gives a number of instances of critical happenings in the history of this hemisphere when we have failed to intervene to protect South American republics as might have been expected had we interpreted the Monroe Doctrine according to the letter.

Says Monroeism Was Forgotten.

IN 1835, he points out, the British and French became aggressive against the Government of the Argentine without arousing any protest from the United States. "The United States completely forgot Monroe and his high regulating mission of the Governments and the rights of America," says the South American.

In that same year, he continues, the republic of Guatemala tried to prevent England from founding colonies in Belize, reminding the American Government of the Monroe Doctrine and of its constant opposition to European colonies. But President Jackson refused to intervene, and the doctrine was again shown to be inefficacious.

In 1846 the United States divided up Oregon and recognized the sovereignty of England over a part of that territory, in spite of the fact that President Polk had declared that the rights of the Union to it was inalienable and beyond all discussion.

"In this way," writes Senor Saenz Pena, "the United States undoubtedly assured peace and cordial relations with England, but impugned the Monroe Doctrine once more in that they allowed the establishment of colonies on American territory."

He goes on to cite further inconsistencies in our procedure. In 1844, he points out, Great Britain blockaded the port of San Juan in Nicaragua without protest on our part; in 1863 she captured Brazilian ships in Brazilian waters. In 1838 France blockaded Argentine ports. In 1865 Spain bombarded Valparaiso. On all these occasions none of the aggressors, we learn, received the slightest protest from the land of Monroe.

In view of these flagrant instances of the ineffectiveness of the doctrine, continues its critic, one must acknowledge that it is dead so far as Latin America is concerned.

In further proof of this he quotes the following opinion on the subject from Miguel Cane, formerly Minister of the Argentine to France:

Calls Us Unscrupulous.

IN conclusion, the President of the Argentine Republic says:

> The acts and relations of the Government of the United States toward weak governments show a certain unscrupulousness and always savor of might.
> Its recent conflicts with Chile, its breaking off of relations with the Peruvian Government, simply because the latter backed up the jurisdiction of its own courts, its frequent acts of violence in Central America and the West Indies, where it presents claims not aggregating as much as $100,000 with a show of naval force and sometimes even with actual bombardments, are political acts hardly calculated to promote the cordial intimacy which the nations of this continent should develop and maintain.
> The United States prolongs nowadays a state of isolation which grows in proportion to her tariffs and a selfishness that increases in proportion to her power. If from our times we go back to the days of our struggle for independence we shall find the same nation exhibiting the same traits and the same character, and showing complete and systematic aloofness from our destiny.
> Men bearing names illustrious in nobility, arms and politics came from all over the world to share the hazards of our fight for freedom, attracted by the principles of a cause born of the French revolution and the declaration of rights. 'Poor Custom-Ridden Man Must Be Freed as Well as Woman'

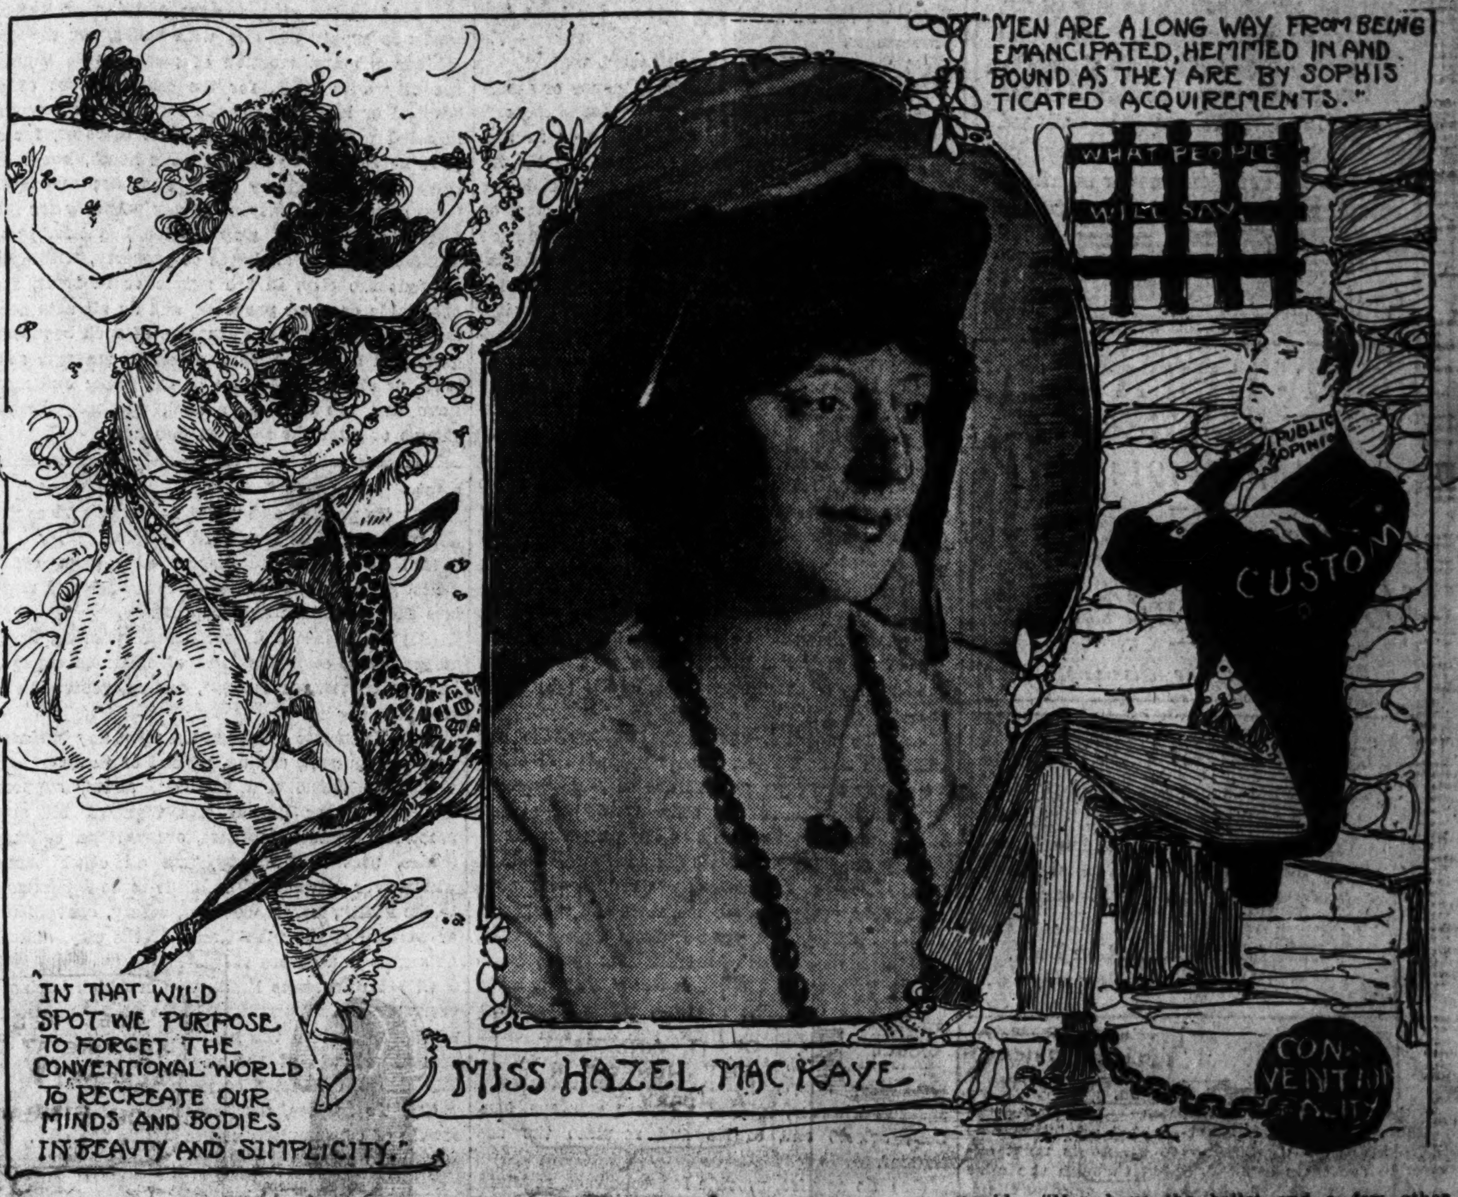
Hazel MacKaye (Masque Creator's Clever Sister) Tells Marguerite Martyn



"MEN ARE A LONG WAY FROM BEING EMANCIPATED, HEMMED IN AND BOUND AS THEY ARE BY SOPHISTICATED ACQUIREMENTS."

"IN THAT WILD SPOT WE PURPOSE TO FORGET THE CONVENTIONAL WORLD TO RECREATE OUR MINDS AND BODIES IN BEAUTY AND SIMPLICITY."

MISS HAZEL MAC KAYE

A Particularly Charming and Unusual Type of Equal Suffragist, She Sees the Conventional Woes of the Sterner Sex With Even More Pitying Eyes Than Those With Which She Looks Upon Feminine Wrongs—She's a Successful Pageant Writer, Too.

By MARGUERITE MARTYN.

AN avowed Feminist, who does not bewail the wrongs of her sex, a suffragette who does not prate of the down-trodden, unemancipated, subservient position imposed upon womankind and who harbors not the least misgivings over the outcome of The Cause, is refreshing. And such is Miss Hazel MacKaye.

Oh, but hear how she goes to the other extremity and sheds pity upon poor, timid, befettered, custom-ridden, convention-bound man!

The sister of our author, Percy MacKaye—certainly we may call him ours, since wasn't it of St. Louis' own romance that he wrought The Masque, the latest, and for the moment, the crowning effort of his career?—the sister had come on from the East to witness the triumphant achievement. We met at a gathering at the Wednesday Club and were casting about for a subject of an interview when she made the remark, "I should like to write you a thesis on the thralldom of man."

Left to my own choice the personality of the young woman herself would afford me ample subject matter. Frank and fearless and free in her every expression, Miss MacKaye is refreshing in more ways than one. Not pretty in any petty ways, she is brilliant, radiant, rather. It is something to scintillate upon a morning after so great a night as Thursday was to the MacKayes and our withering heat has its effect upon New England exotics. But once launched upon a favorite topic, Miss MacKaye's ardor glowed and gleamed.

Daughter of Steele MacKaye.

A DAUGHTER of the late Steele MacKaye, dramatist, teacher and theater director, and coming of a family of distinguished thinkers along sociological lines, she must have imbibed early in life independent views. Unlike the usual cultivated Bostonese she doesn't take it all out in theorizing. Five years on the professional stage and later some notable achievements in the producing and directing phase of dramatic art, are to her credit. She hated the stage during her experience under its present commercial domination, so she told me. It is pageantry, with its great combination of civic and artistic uses, helping to the evolution of the civic theater, Miss MacKaye has decided, wherein lies her best opportunity to express her ideals, artistic and sociological.

As a pageant mistress or pageantiste—pageantry is such a new profession for women, how should I know how to designate her?—anyway, her success in this field already has been scarcely less than her brother's.

The Allegory on the Treasury Steps, a part of the Washington suffrage parade, her own original design and production, was but one of a dozen or so spectacles she has "put on" in other important cities.

A vivid impression of the beauty and effectiveness of the Treasury Building picture remains with me as a spectator to this day, and Miss MacKaye, with the usual simplicity of the truly great, was as pleased as a child when I said so. That for all her large undertakings she remains so girlish is the amazing thing about her.

Given a few more years in which to play-write and poetize and she may catch up with her distinguished brother. Her sex is not a handicap but an advantage to her, she maintains. Yes, I have said I could go on indefinitely expatiating upon the various moods of Miss MacKaye's personality and not run short of material, but I know how you usually skip the descriptive passages on down to the "quotes."

Taking Pupils Back to Nature.

WELL, we were discussing her venture next to come, the school in which she is to be associated with Mrs. Florence Fleming Noyes at Petersborough, N. H.

"Mrs. Noyes' work is known broadly as esthetic dancing or rythmic expression, but we are more fundamental than that," explained Miss MacKaye. "We go to this beautiful spot in the hills to get back to nature, to forget the conventional world. We remain there during the month of June, but our purpose is not merely the temporary pleasure of a month's enjoyment. It is to recreate our minds and bodies in simplicity and beauty, to free ourselves permanently as far as may be of the confused and perverted ideas in which cultivated modishness and sophisticated acquirements have entoiled society.

"We will live out of doors if we choose and wear the Grecian garment and sandals. The Greeks were perhaps the only perfectly free race and in resuming their way of life we can do no less than adopt their costumes."

"Will you wear such robes upon the street when you come back?" I interposed.

"We do not desire to be conspicuous. No more do we desire to be inconspicuous. Our efforts are more fundamental than that," she replied.

"And do you expect men to join your school?" I inquired timidly, although she had assured me her ideals of freedom knew no limit.

She laughed heartily at such a conjecture, but not, I was soon to find, at my presumptuousness.

"Oh, no," she replied, "we don't expect men to join us in anything so spontaneous and self-forgetful.

"Why, what would their friends say about them? Men must always stop to think of that. No, men are not prepared for that sort of thing yet. Their emancipation is a long way off."

It was here she assumed her attitude of pity for the stronger sex.

Pictures Man as an Abject Slave.

"A GREAT deal is being said on behalf of the liberation of women. I am an ardent suffragist and active in the movement. But I think there is less cause for worry over woman's freedom than man's," she said. "Men have the ballot and a few other trifling liberties women have not yet gained. Otherwise is there a slave more abject than a man and to fetters of his own forging? Men are slaves to custom, hide-bound in conventions and persecuted by their own self-consciousness when they try to break bonds. What is more to be pitied than the average man's smallest effort to be individual? The man who would wear a different collar or dispense with the tortuous things altogether; the man who wears a straw hat before the first of May or would choose rather to adorn his brow with a becoming Greek filet, imagine what such a man would have to contend with among his fellows. Why, he would be a 'freak,' that is all. Many men in their hearts favor woman's independence, but the man who will line up in a woman's suffrage parade is brave indeed.

"Women are foolish, frivolous, faddy, and our present style of dress seems to argue we haven't logic enough to vote. At that I think our costume not so foolish as the heavy worsted, stuffy tailored garments men wear in season and out.

"In other words, woman's laws are mutable and in change there is hope for improvement and the development of individuality. Man's existence is circumscribed. He is hemmed about by his regard for appearances, his fears of what people will say.

"It is rarely that men forget themselves long enough for any spontaneous effort. One of those rare occasions is at baseball games. A man who would never make himself conspicuous elsewhere, seems completely oblivious to what others may think of him here. He sheds his coat and gives free expression to his feelings and opinions. But, then, that is what everybody else is doing at the ball game, you see."

"Did you observe much hesitation or bashfulness on the part of the men who are taking part in the Pageant and Masque?" I inquired.

"Not in the final performance, and I daresay that from the beginning there were in all St. Louis a few citizens confident in their histrionic ability or possessed of an exceptional desire to show off. But I am speaking of men in general and you know there were a hundred women volunteer actors to one man. At the end there was complete self-forgetfulness in the sense of vast co-operation.

"Ah, and here we get to the great purpose of pageantry. That is what these great co-operative efforts do for men and women—they give opportunity to the individual to express himself, to offer his personal assistance to a great project, but at the same time to realize that he is merely a unit until he outgrows the bug-a-boo, self-consciousness.

Good That Civic Plays Do.

"THERE is no surer means of making converts to a great cause than by involving a populace in one of these great civic plays," Miss MacKaye added. "In Cleveland where I put on my suffrage allegory we had this demonstrated.

"Many of our actors were antis, asked to take part because of some special ability or peculiarly blessed with the taste for being conspicuous. With object lessons in truth, justice, liberty and all the other undisputable claims of the cause

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Emotional Religion.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The well-meaning, short-sighted ministers who have invited Billy Sunday to St. Louis must expect to see their cause dragged through the mire of a spectacular appeal to religious emotionalism, through shrewd understanding of mob psychology.

The revival evangelist is giving way to the patient, plodding minister whose studied and careful efforts result in permanent gains. The revival is a mechanical aid, a short cut, an attempt to outwit nature by appealing to the emotions instead of the intelligence, and progressive Americans are demanding a rational explanation of the seeming mysteries of life and death that evangelists cannot give. America has been called the melting pot of nations and it has been added that Christianity is also in the melting pot, from which will emerge the purified teaching of the great Master, Jesus, whose life will shine "clearer, grander as an ideal type of man."

Let us have in pulpit, Sunday school and classroom more of the great Light which St. John says is "the Light that ligheth every man that cometh into the world * * * for as many as believed gave he power to become the sons of God."

"SUNDAY OPEN COURT."

The Intemperate Prohibitionists.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I have read with interest the communication of the W. C. T. U. signed by Fannie D. Robb, secretary, presented to and read before the members of the Ministerial Alliance, of St. Louis, Monday, at the Central Library Building. I have perused with equal interest the statement made by H. H. Simmons, Scout Commissioner of Boys' League, in re the insulting mouthings of Mr. Cheever, who, it seems, while claiming, yet abusing, the constitutional right of free speech, would deny that right to Mr. Simmons, who, it occurs to me, conducted himself as a gentleman should, in his own office.

Nothing in the comments of Mr. Simmons could be construed as in any manner reflecting upon Secretary Daniels, R. P. Hobson, and the late Col. Fred D. Grant, by any normal minded man or woman.

I hold no brief for Mr. Simmons, the breweries, the distilleries, nor the saloon keepers, nor either Mr. Simmons, Mr. Cheever or any member of the W. C. T. U. nor any member of the Ministerial Alliance, yet I always advocate free speech and make no denial of the right given all of us to uphold any views each may entertain on any proposition under discussion.

I may add that I am a temperance man, but am not a prohibitionist. I not only preach, but practice temperance, not only in drinking spirituous, vinous and malt liquors, but in eating and drinking all foods and liquids served on our dining table daily. I have preached temperance from the pulpit, from the rostrum, in legislative halls and from the back of the bar, as well as in front of same, and, from my varied experience, I am every day the more thoroughly convinced that the best way to control the liquor business is by a well-regulated license system, and the best way to secure ultimate results towards temperance, or prohibition, if you prefer is by teachings at the mother's knee, in the Sunday school, at our firesides in our home, in our daily pursuits, and not by trying to force same by the enactment of legislation against the manufacture and sale of liquor.

H. C. NOLLAC.

The British Troubles.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Before we speak harshly of the militant British women, let us consider these hard facts:

The British law of inheritance excludes woman, in every instance, in favor of some male member of the family, often leaving her a penniless dependent upon the male relatives to whom her due share has gone, and that further deprives her of right to her own children unless they are born out of wedlock; she has neither dower rights nor rights as a mother. By English law no married woman exists as the mother of the child she brings into the world. The child, according to English marriage laws, has only one parent, and that parent is the father; while out of marriage the law recognises the only one parent and that parent is—the mother.

Shame on the British laws. More power to the British woman's elbow.

NEW CHARTER COMPARED AND EXPLAINED

By FREDERICK D. GARDNER
Of the Board of Freeholders.

NEW CHARTER.
ARTICLE I.—Corporate Powers.

Section 1. The inhabitants of the City of St Louis, as its limits now are or may hereafter be, shall be and continue a body corporate by name "The City of St. Louis," and as such shall have perpetual succession, may have a corporate seal, and sue and be sued. It shall have power:

(1) To assess, levy and collect taxes for all general and special purposes on all subjects or objects of taxation.

(2) To adopt such classifications of the subjects and objects of taxation as may not be contrary to law.

(3) To make special assessments for local improvements.

(4) To contract and be contracted with.

(5) To incur debt by borrowing money or otherwise, and to give any appropriate evidence thereof.

(6) To issue and give, sell, pledge or in any manner dispose of, negotiable or non-negotiable, interest-bearing or non-interest-bearing bonds or notes of the city, upon the credit of the city, or solely upon the credit of specific property owned by the city, or solely upon the credit of income derived from and property used in connection with any public utility owned or operated by the city, or solely upon the credit of the proceeds of special assessments for local improvements, or upon any two or more of such credits.

(7) To expend the money of the city for all lawful purposes.

(8) To acquire or receive and hold, maintain, improve, sell, lease, mortgage, pledge or otherwise dispose of property, real or personal, and any estate or interest therein, within or without the city or State.

(9) To condemn private property, real or personal, or any easement or use therein for public use within or without the city or State.

(10) To take and hold property within or without the city or State upon trust; and to administer trusts.

(11) To acquire, construct, own, operate and maintain or sell, lease, mortgage, pledge or otherwise dispose of public utilities or any estate or interest therein, or any other utility of service to the city, its inhabitants or any part thereof.

(12) To grant franchises for public utilities.

(13) To regulate the construction, maintenance, equipment, operation, service, rates and charges of public utilities, and compel, from time to time, reasonable extensions of facilities for such service.

(14) To establish, open, re-locate, vacate, alter, widen, extend, grade, improve, repair, construct, reconstruct, maintain, light, sprinkle and clean public highways, streets, boulevards, parkways, sidewalks, alleys, parks, public grounds and squares, wharves, bridges, viaducts, subways, tunnels, sewers and drains and regulate the use thereof.

(15) To acquire, provide for, construct, regulate and maintain and do all things relating to all kinds of public buildings, structures, markets, places, works and improvements.

(16) To provide and maintain a harbor and wharves and regulate the use thereof, and impose wharfage and other charges therefor; license and regulate ferries and other boats; grant ferry privileges and regulate ferry charges; rent or lease for not exceeding twenty-five years portions of the wharf for any purpose tending to facilitate the trade of the city.

(17) To improve water courses and regulate the use thereof.

(18) To establish, impose and enforce water rates and rates and charges for public utilities or other service, products or conveniences operated, rendered or furnished by the city.

(19) To provide and maintain a sanitary system.

(20) To provide and maintain a fire department.

(21) To provide and maintain police and excise departments when permitted by law.

(22) To collect and dispose of sewage, offal, ashes, garbage and refuse, or to license and regulate such collection and disposal.

(23) To license and regulate all persons, firms, corporations, companies and associations engaged in any business, occupation, calling, profession or trade.

(24) To impose a license tax upon any business, vocation, pursuit, calling, animal or thing.

(25) To define and prohibit, abate, suppress and prevent or license and regulate, all acts, practices, conduct, business, occupations, callings, trades, uses of property, and all other things whatsoever detrimental or liable to be detrimental to the health, morals, comfort, safety, convenience or welfare of the inhabitants of the city, and all nuisances and causes thereof.

(26) To prescribe limits within which business, occupations and practices liable to be nuisances or detrimental to the health, morals, security or general welfare of the people may lawfully be established, conducted or maintained.

(27) To inspect, test, measure and weigh any article of consumption or use within the city.

(28) To establish, regulate, license and inspect weights and measures.

(29) To regulate the construction and materials of all buildings and structures; and to inspect all buildings, lands and places as to their condition for health, cleanliness and safety, and when necessary prevent the use thereof and require any alterations or changes necessary to make them healthful, clean or safe.

(30) To abolish or prevent grade crossings and provide for safe crossings and compel any street, steam, electric railroad or other transportation company or companies affected thereby to pay all or a part of the cost thereof.

(31) To provide for the support, maintenance and care of children and sick, aged or insane, poor persons and paupers.

(32) To provide and maintain charitable, educational, recreative, curative, corrective, detentive or penal institutions, departments, functions, facilities, instrumentalities, conveniences and services.

OLD CHARTER.
ARTICLE I.—Corporate Powers.

Section 1. The inhabitants of all that district of country embraced within the limits prescribed in the next succeeding section, shall be and continue a body corporate by the name and style of "The City of St. Louis," and by that name shall have perpetual succession, shall sue and be sued, implead and be impleaded, defend and be defended in all courts of law and equity, and in all actions, whatsoever; may purchase, receive and hold property, real or personal, within said city, and beyond the limits of the city, to be used for the burial of the dead of the city, for the erection of waterworks to supply the city with water, for the establishment and erection of gasworks to supply the city with light, for the establishment of a hospital or hospitals for the reception of persons infected with contagious or other diseases, for a poor house or poor houses, work house, house of correction, or for any other purposes; may sell, lease or otherwise dispose of any property for the benefit of the city; may receive bequests, gifts and donations, of all kinds of property, within or without the city, in fee simple or in trust, for charitable or other purposes, and do all acts necessary to carry out the purposes of such bequests, gifts and donations, with power to manage, sell, lease or otherwise dispose of the same; and may have and use a common seal, and may break, change or alter the same at pleasure.

COMMENTS ON THE PROVISIONS OF ARTICLE 1.

It must be mentioned that in addition to the powers granted the city by the old charter in Article I, there are sprinkled in Articles III and XIV and in others, additional powers relating to the administration of the city's affairs, but not covering the points in the proposed new charter considered in this analysis.

It will be observed that the old charter provides for the ownership of waterworks, provides for the establishment of "gas works to supply the city with light" and by reason of setting out these two items it precludes the acquirement and ownership of other public utilities or public service to be rendered by the city to its inhabitants. The city now owns the waterworks and successfully operates them. There is no demand for the ownership of gas works for the purpose of city lighting. Further power of the city governing the usual functions of municipal government and such part of same as touch upon franchises will be considered in its proper place. It follows from the foregoing that the activities of the city are extremely limited under the old charter. IN FACT, IT HAS NO POWERS THAT HAVE NOT BEEN EXHAUSTED.

It will be noted that under clause 11 of the new charter the city may acquire, construct, own and operate any public utility or other utility of service to the city. This is a new power and is in response to public demands to be exercised, of course, only when desired by the people.

Clause 13 is important in that it looks to the regulation of the service and rates of public utilities and to the reasonable extension of the facilities of such service. This provision is particularly necessary inasmuch as the transportation utilities of the city are now in the hands of one corporation and therefore not subject to the influence and rivalries of competition.

Attention is also invited to clause 5 of the new charter providing that the city may issue bonds "SOLELY UPON THE CREDIT OF SPECIFIC PROPERTY OWNED BY THE CITY OR SOLELY UPON THE CREDIT OF INCOME DERIVED FROM ANY PROPERTY USED IN CONNECTION WITH ANY PUBLIC UTILITY OWNED OR OPERATED BY THE CITY." This is an extremely important provision, because its intent and result obviate taxation.

Under the present charter no such powers are granted and the acquirement of any utility would necessitate the taxing of the people to obtain the necessary funds. This provision relieves the people of such burden and places the city in the same position as that of any corporation undertaking to operate a public utility which would necessarily secure its debts upon the property and its income, unsupported by the right of taxation. This provision will empower the city to go forward in many activities whenever it chooses to do so, without involving or burdening the city's credit or tax limit under the Constitution.

In this clause (6) occurs a sentence: "SOLELY UPON THE CREDIT OF THE PROCEEDS OF SPECIAL ASSESSMENTS FOR LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS." This simple sentence might go unnoticed by the general public, but it affects every property owner in the city. Under the present charter, special tax bills are issued for local improvements and contractors bidding for the work do so on the basis of these special tax bills, which are to be collected at a future time by the contractors. Under the present system it is estimated that the individual property owner pays about 20 per cent more for public improvements than should be paid, in consequence of the contractor finding it difficult to borrow money upon the security of the special tax bills. Under the provision mentioned it is contemplated that the city might issue short-time bonds, secured by special assessments for local improvements, sell these bonds, obtain bids from contractors for such improvements upon a cash basis, payable out of the proceeds of the bonds, and afterwards the city will itself collect the special tax bills and pay off the bonds. This plan will undoubtedly be a great saving to property owners. This progressive plan has been tried out with success in other states.

The provisions in clause 11 for "ANY OTHER UTILITY OR SERVICE TO THE CITY" was insisted upon by one member of the Board of Freeholders and has already attracted attention and has been considerably discussed by an important body of voters with approval as in the future giving the city the privilege of doing many things that it might want to do, but which would not come under the provisions for "public utilities." This is entirely new and, of course, is in no way included in the old charter.

Under clause 21 the police and excise department powers of the city are established whenever permitted by State law. Under the old charter these powers are lacking under any conditions, and it has always been deemed impossible of operation without an amendment of the charter. As the city may obtain what is called "home rule," this provision is of great value and should be seriously regarded.

The provisions of clause 22, in regard to the collection and disposal of garbage contemplate the city's handling garbage at an advantage to itself instead of contracting it out at a loss to the city, as suffered under the present charter.

The regulation and inspection of all buildings in consequence of clause 29 will protect the city against such grave disasters as the M. A. C. fire which powers seem to be lacking under the present charter.

Especial attention is called to clause 30, covering grade crossings, which authorizes the city to require transportation companies to pay all or a part of the cost of safe crossings.

St. Louis is particularly in need of power to provide for charitable, educational and recreative departments, functions and facilities. These are provided for by clause 32. We are noticeably lacking as a municipality in attracting desirable people to the city by want of provisions for making St. Louis "a better place to live in," and this provision of the new charter will both induce and empower the city to fulfill this obligation to itself and the people.

SOCRATES ON THE NEW MEXICO.

Glaucon: Ah, Socrates! Thinking again?

Socrates: Yes. How would you like to think a while?

Glaucon: I would like it, I fancy.

Socrates: Very well. Think what a great opportunity we have to do something for the Mexican people.

Glaucon: In just what way do you mean, Socrates?

Socrates: In a big twentieth century way. I read the other day that whereas Mexico is one-fourth as large as the United States, is enormously rich in natural resources, and has a university older than Harvard, only one Mexican in a hundred can read and write.

Glaucon: That is terrible.

Socrates: Isn't it, though? A mere boundary line between that country and this makes a difference of several centuries of human progress. On our side are public schools and excellent colleges. Virtually nobody but the illiterate emigrant is without a common school education. We are freed from the shackles of ignorance in a thousand ways. On the other side the great mass of the people is without any of the civilizing influences and faciliites we have in the United States, and the twentieth century means virtually nothing.

Glaucon: No doubt.

Socrates: That is what I was thinking about when you happened along. I was wondering if the President's conception of our opportunity there is understood, or if the American people see in that unpleasant controversy only what appears on the surface.

Polemarchus: Probably very few people see as deeply as you do, Socrates.

Socrates: That is sweet of you, Polemarchus, but I do not think it is just. I think that as the people of our own country come to understand more and more what the condition of the people of Mexico is, they realize more and more what our own duty as a civilized nation is.

Glaucon: I think that is so.

Socrates: That is, the American people want the Mexican people to have a chance, and they know they won't get it unless we see to it. They want to see them delivered from ignorance, and freed from the clutches of those who, in both a political and a material way, continually exploit them.

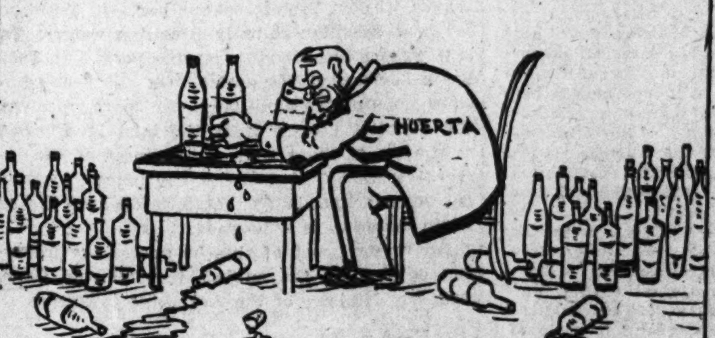
Polemarchus: Amen!

Socrates: Don't you think if the President knew just how we do feel about it, he would go right ahead with a little more courage?

Glaucon: I think he would.

Socrates: Very well. Now let us rest our wits talking about Roosevelt's river.

THE REAL ELIMINATOR.



ROMANCE IN TITLE PAPERS.

From the Detroit Sunday Tribune.

Away up on the fourth floor of the county building, where the light is poor and the men and women stenographers struggle to get the positions nearest the window, Ernest Mack sits and explores and translates the records in the original French of real estate transfers. Sometimes the records mean nothing; other times they tell the history of two families, as where a marriage portion is arranged for in a transfer of property. There are many deeds showing that a man profited not only in gaining a helpmeet, but in worldly wealth by marrying the daughter of a household. There are many others where fathers of either bride or groom have mortgaged their property to help the struggling young couple with funds.

Mr. Mack is a man of imagination. He speaks several languages, but of all that he speaks French is the best beloved. That is why he is translating the French books from the office of the Register of Deeds into English. His imagination leads him to read between the lines, and this was the result yesterday of his imaginings:

Jacques de Larmour deeded 60 acres of land in 1803 in what is now Grosse Pointe Farms to Pierre Futrelle as a marriage settlement when Pierre married Jacques' daughter, Marie. The marriage was completed, and in 1846, Pierre, by will, left the 60 acres to his son, Jean.

"I can see them as plainly as if they stood before me now," said Mr. Mack. "I can see the old, white-haired father giving to the young son-in-law the 60 acres and admonishing him to look well to the tilling of the soil that he be not backward in providing for Marie. I can see old Jacques, weather-beaten, hard of visage, sinewy, as he looks on Pierre, stripling, though wise in the ways of the chase, or husbandry, and wondering how his daughter could ever have selected him. And then I can see Pierre, 43 years later, making his will and blessing his son, Jean, and hoping that the boy could do as well as he had done.

"No poetry in the simple work of copying abstracts of property? The man who can get no poetry from it has no poetry in his soul."

THE AGE OF DRESS.

From the Ohio State Journal.

The world is all running to clothes. We are made to believe that the great thing about a woman is her clothes. But this is for the women. Men don't care a snap about what the women wear, so it is decent. The masculine eye has not been gifted with those powers that can discern the grace and delicate intricacy in the lines and folds of a gown. The man sees the woman and not the clothes, and don't you forget it—the brightness of mind, the gentility of temper, the unselfishness of life, and the cordial good will he sees through the dress and under the millinery.

The dress may be costly and beautiful, but it does not impress him if the wearer is full of conceit and vanity. Sorry, indeed, will be the day when a man makes his estimate of a woman from the clothes she has on, and fails to see those immortal qualities of mind and heart which constitute the true woman. The mere expression of vanity in a woman is not hopeful, is not prophetic of happy homes or a noble citizenship.

Post-Convention Vote.

From the Baltimore Sun.

The Democratic national convention has repealed the tolls exemption clause by a three-fourths vote. The United States Senate is the only body in the country that is still debating the question.

Another Chance for Cole.

From the Springfield Republican.

One of Gov. Blease's staff has been killed in a political quarrel. The Governor will now have a chance to pardon the murderer.

Mail queries for Sunday a week beforehand, marked "Sunday." Business addresses not given. Bets not decided. Address "Answers Post-Dispatch," using postal card if convenient. Write but one question.

DATES.

SUBSCRIBER.—State Senator Thomas E. Kinney died of tuberculosis at [illegible] Wednesday, May 15, 1912, in the [illegible] bungalow near Kirkwood to which friends had removed him from his home at 1720 Carr street. His contest for Dyer's seat in Congress was pending when he died.

BEAUTY CULTURE.

RED HANDS.—Try wearing very loose sleeves and belt [illegible]. There is always something wrong with the circulation when the hands are a beefy red. A tight band, even a garter, will affect the hands. Wear old kid gloves at night with the fingers clipped off and line them with an emollient paste. Somebody writes: When all through with washing, in fact, after every application of soap, soda or other alkali cleanser, rinse the hands well with vinegar. Keep a bottle on the washstand and pour a little into the hands if chapped or cracked with the cold and wind; it will cleanse them, heal the sore places and make them soft and white. A mixture of lemon juice, oatmeal and glycerin is excellent for keeping hands soft and white. Somebody says: To relieve hands of redness, lift arms above head and give them a circular motion until there is a sense of weariness. This takes away an unnatural flow of blood to the hands. Avoid, too, extremes of temperature. Either heat or cold affects the circulation unfavorably.

ETIQUETTE.

H. M. W.—Escorting two women a man takes the outside of the sidewalk. Passing a throng he steps to the rear.

IGNORANT.—No written declination or acceptance is necessary on receipt of any type of reception cards. The invited guest accepts by attending the function. If it is impossible to put in an appearance at the hour signified in the invitation, the proper course is to send by mail or messenger a visiting card in an envelope, so that it will reach the hostess, if possible, while the reception is in progress.

HEALTH HINTS.

X.—Unless current is put on too strong, electricity does not affect the bones.

K.—Garlic possesses stimulant and stomachic properties, and was of old, as still sometimes now, employed as a medicinal remedy. Pliny gives an exceedingly long list of complaints in which it was considered beneficial. Dr. T. Sydenham valued it as an application in confluent smallpox, and Cullen found some dropsies cured by it alone. In the United States the bulb is given in doses of ½-2 drams in cases of bronchiectasis and phthisis pulmonalis. Garlic may also be prescribed as an extract consisting of the inspissated juice, in doses of 5-10 grains, and as the syrups allii aceticus, in doses of ¼ drams. This last preparation has recently been much extolled in the treatment of pulmonary tuberculosis and phthisis.

WORRIED.—A well-known physician doubts whether anybody can say what is catarrh of the stomach. Of overcoming catarrhal conditions, Dr. T. J. Allen, food specialist, writes: "Gastro-intestinal, as well as nasal and other forms of catarrh, are much more common than is generally supposed. It cannot be cured by local treatment, but only by treating it as a disease of malnutrition, through diet, exercise, improved breathing (which comes largely through exercise), improved elimination, in which copious water drinking is important, vibration and other hygienic means. The ordinary local treatments frequently do more harm than good, although they may be used judiciously by way of palliation."

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

GREATLY PERPLEXED.—Lazy people can never be rid of roaches or other insects. Persistent fighting, every day, is necessary. A housekeeper writes: We had roaches for years fighting all the time, as our house is big and old with a wainscoting in kitchen and dining room. They were about to take the place. The piano was even full of them. We used gasoline with little success. As coal oil is my remedy for all things, I thought I'd try it and it worked like magic. I used it by the gallons, poured it all over the wainscoting, safe, dishes, pots, pans, then put them through hot suds. I used several five-gallon cans, and we are now rid of them, but what a time we had with the creepy things. Coal oil will instantly kill roaches and the eggs. Another says: A very good way of getting rid of roaches is to keep a toad around the room. You will soon notice that not one of these pests can be found. See that toad gets plenty of water.

MISCELLANEOUS.

E. Z. P.—If no arrows at date, 1853 half dollar is worth $15.

MRS. Z. C.—We do not advise as to land investments in any state.

CIVIL WAR.—Try writing Adjutant General, Albany, N. Y., or War Department, Washington, D. C., for New York regimental records.

F. N.—Canvas that is not to be rolled up may be made waterproof and fireproof by coating with 2 parts cement mixed with 1 part sand and thinned with water.

MISS QUESTIONS.—Unless you are ready to meet the obligation at date stated, holder of mortgage can proceed to foreclosure, which may mean the loss of your farm unless you act promptly to redeem it. You may expect the costs to amount to quite an item. Why not see a bank or real estate man in the town, or one nearest thereto, and arrange now to take up this loan and borrow a little more to pay expenses of such.

LIGHTNER.—The ground on which Dorris Row was built was won by Thomas Dorris in a game of poker with James Lucas. It was on Olive, between Tenth and Eleventh. Dorris built on it a row of fine residences, which in after years became boarding houses, and these were succeeded by buildings for business. At one time Dorris was a candidate for U. S. Senator. He took an active part in the election of U. S. Senator Louis V. Bogy. One of his daughters was the belle of St. Louis, but her life was not a happy one. Her son, crazed by drink, killed his grandmother and was sent to prison for 10 years. He escaped and died in Canada. The other Dorris daughters married well.

BUCHANAN.—Nickel-plating without battery: Into porcelain or copper vessel place concentrated solution of zinc chloride, dilute with from one to two volumes of water and heat to boiling. If any precipitate separates it is to be redissolved by adding a few drops of hydrochloric acid. As much powdered zinc as can be taken on the point of a knife is thrown in, which covers the vessel internally with a coating of zinc. The nickel salt, for which purpose either the chloride or sulphate may be used, is added until the liquid is distinctly green; then put in the articles to be plated, previously thoroughly cleaned, together with some zinc fragments. Continue boiling 15 minutes, when the nickel coating is completed. Well wash the articles with water and clean with chalk. If a thicker coating is desired repeat.

M. B.—There are two ways of training for library work. One is to enter a regular library school, requiring a two-year's attendance; or to give one's services in a public library for a year without compensation, at which time one takes the first examination open to all applicants who wish to become paid assistants. Two more years' work, but with pay increasing, are necessary before the passing of a final examination enables one to become a head librarian. Many of the smaller cities train a few assistants yearly in their public library, and to one who can live at home and learn the profession this way the course presents many advantages. To go away to a library school requires about the same outlay of expense as if one went to college. While the tuition is not high, about $75 a year, including incidentals, there are board and additional living expenses for which one should set aside from $5 to $10. (See the librarian.)

ENGLAND GRANTS HOME RULE IN IRELAND FIRST HOME RULE BILL

SHADE OF GLADSTONE —"AT LAST!"
—BOARDMAN ROBINSON IN THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE—

Home Rule for Ireland at Last

FIRST STEP TO FEDERAL UNION.

Philadelphia Record: It is the first step toward introducing the federal system in Great Britain, with local Parliaments for both Ireland and Scotland. It will be the earnest hope of all those interested in England and Ireland that the momentous departure may be made peacefully. If this hope is disappointed and the hotheads of Ulster take up arms in opposition to the Government, sympathy, in America at least, will be strongly with those who have exercised the right of a majority to rule and who refuse to surrender to a rebellious minority.

LET ULSTER MEDIATE.

New York Herald: This is a period of mediation. Mediators of three great countries of South America are sitting at Niagara Falls to prevent the outbreak of war between the United States and Mexico. There is plenty of time and plenty of opportunity for all elements still to get together and avoid bloodshed in Ulster. Let such men as Lord Dunraven, Sir Edward Carson, John E. Redmond, William O'Brien and all other leaders of widely different views meet on common ground. Concession is better than civil war.

AN AMENDING BILL NECESSARY.

Philadelphia Inquirer: On June 16, 1912, the bill passed the House of Commons, 367 to 257. Its second passage took place on July 7, 1913, 352 to 243; and the third is now recorded. Just how soon Irish home rule will become a fact accomplished is conjectural. Several months of preparation would in any case have been required and the situation has now been complicated by the implacable opposition and threatening attitude of the Ulster malcontents. There is little reason to expect that the amending bill to be introduced by the Government will achieve an amicable settlement, and it is rather more than likely that an appeal to the country through the medium of a general election will be taken before an enforcement of the new law is seriously undertaken.

WHAT WILL ULSTER DO?

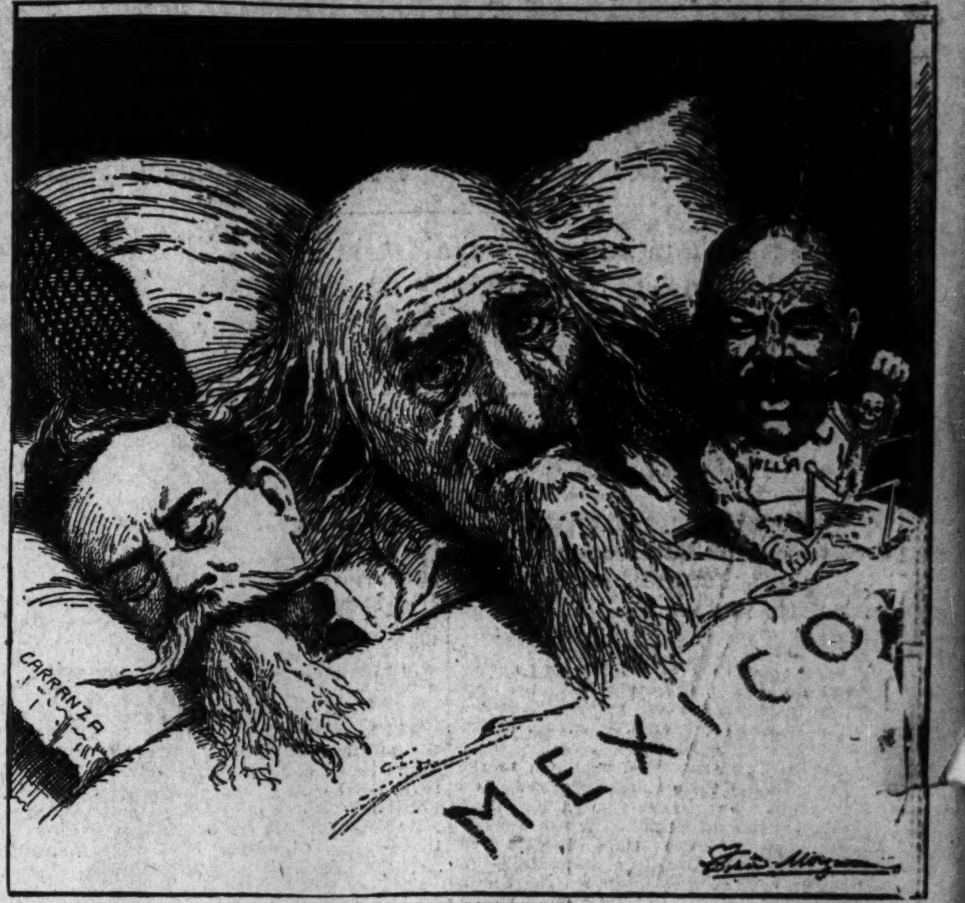
Philadelphia Public Ledger: Ulster, however, has refused any compromise, and the critical feature of the situation is Ulster itself. The Covenanters of Ulster have laid a mine which a spark may explode at any moment, and the British Government may be forced to apply force upon the recalcitrant province, with all the possible consequences in fratricidal strife. The Ulstermen insist on unconditional exclusion; the Nationalists upon a time limit. Between these alternatives there seems to be small room for an agreement, but the peril of civil war is so imminent and is so sincerely dreaded that even the uncompromising Covenanters may at the eleventh hour listen to reason and submit to conditions which defend their rights. An amending bill which Unionists and Ulstermen will be willing to accept would clarify the situation and relieve the King of a terribly difficult situation, and it is this for which the people of Great Britain are anxiously looking.

CARSON'S POWER.

Detroit Free Press: Sir Edward Carson seems to have his followers pretty well in hand. He is nearer to being a despot today than any other man in the two islands, but it is doubtful how long even he will be able to keep his forces quiet, or whether indeed he will dare remain passive for another two-thirds of a year. If the Ulstermen intend to fight they are as well prepared for battle as ever they will be, and so far as enthusiasm is concerned they probably are in better shape than they will be eight months hence.

HOME RULE LIMITED.

Cleveland Leader: The long fight for home rule is virtually ended. The machinery for giving full effect to the new order of things in Ireland will soon be created and set in motion. It is one of the epochal triumphs of the great principle of self-government. But there is one important limitation, a condition which has not yet taken legal form, but is everywhere believed to be certain. That is the exclusion of certain counties in Ulster from the scope of the home rule law. They may remain apart from the great bulk of Ireland, in respect to government, for six years, or the period may be undetermined. It may be ended by the Imperial Parliament or it may be terminated by the vote of these Ulster counties. There remains the possibility that hot-headed factionists in Ulster may stir up enough trouble, in their bitter opposition to any form of compromise on the home rule issue, to bring about the forcible suppression of Unionist resistance and the inclusion of all Ulster in the territory covered by the home rule law.



STRANGE BEDFELLOWS
—FRED MORGAN IN THE PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER. ©1914.

Britain's "Wild Women"

"THE WILD WOMEN."

New York Herald: "The wild women" are abusing their privileges to get their "rights." What an exhibition of feminine logic and ability to govern they are making!—for it is well known that only those who obey authority well know how to wield it. The latest news seems to show that the English Queen is at last aroused to take a strong stand in the matter. Here is a gleam of hope, for this is woman's, not man's, problem. It is well recognized that men cannot manage women, above all when in tantrums. Only women can do that effectively.

BRUTALITY INEXCUSABLE.

Philadelphia Evening Star: It is certain that the brutality which occurred on Constitution Hill, when women were beaten with clubs and fists and ridden down until they lay all over the ground unconscious and bleeding and some of them so seriously injured that they will die, will result in bringing recruits to the cause and in flaming its adherents, until fresh and greater outrages will result. Already we have had the scene in the theater when the King and Queen appeared—such as no reigning monarch of England has had to witness in many years—and where women, hurling insults and demands at the King, were dragged and beaten, while one woman was knocked down by men and so badly beaten right under the eyes of the King that she would have been killed had not the authorities rescued her. The authorities in England have done nothing to improve this situation and they seem to have no program which may be expected to make it better. Is it not time for the statesmen of the country to formulate some plan which is feasible and which may be expected to produce results? Will they go on beating and bludgeoning until they get out the machine guns?

"DEPORT THEM."

Philadelphia Public Ledger: If extant laws do not permit of wholesale deportation, let the laws be changed so that these ravening furies can be sent to parts of the empire where universal adult suffrage obtains—namely, to any one of the federation of self-governing states comprising the Commonwealth of Australia or to the self-governing Dominion of New Zealand—if these states do not strenuously object. Of course, Mrs. Pankhurst and her rabble, if they got their suffrage, would find something else to fight about, and if they could not quarrel with the Government they would belabor and heckle each other. But at least they would be deprived of any suspicious pretext of an exalted cause.

Roosevelt's Busy Week

"AS A LITERARY MAN."

New York World: Not being a boss, of course, it is the Colonel's privilege to select Oscar S. Straus for the Progressive candidate for the United States Senate, to designate the candidates for the Progressives to renominate Gov. Johnson, his old running mate, and to inform the Illinois Progressives in detail as to their duty. Having forsworn politics for some weeks, naturally the Colonel performs these congenial tasks in the discharge of his daily labors as a literary man. The political pilgrims who gather at Oyster Bay are merely taking lessons in grammar and style and picking up casual orders from their leader in the course of discussions on poetry and the uplift of the South American stage.

NEEDED IN OREGON.

Memphis Commercial-Appeal: During his absence things went wrong with the Progressives and many returned to the rank and file of the senior party. The Oregon vote shows this conclusively. While only a few Progressives have registered, when Col. Roosevelt launches his bolts of thunder through the State there will be an army of deserters who will enlist under the Moose banner and will march with the Colonel on to glory.

It will no doubt be a keen disappointment to Col. Roosevelt to know that the women of Oregon forgot their past allegiance and gave their votes to the Republicans and the Democrats. This will never do. The Colonel will do well to give his early attention to affairs in Oregon.

PLENTY TO DO.

Washington Times: Mr. Roosevelt has the eyes of the country on him, with a unanimity hardly ever exceeded in the past. The time is come when the forces must line up for the political battles of the coming autumn and of the Presidential campaign for which this year's contest will be an opening gun. In what transpires politically from this time forth there will be no larger part than that which Col. Roosevelt will play. The whole country will be keenly concerned about his goings and comings, his sayings and writings, his speeches and his silences; and nowhere will there be greater or more friendly interest than will be manifested in Washington, where without regard to political opinions the former President has been so widely popular. Washington has the especial reason of long-established neighborly relations and personal acquaintance, for being glad that Mr. Roosevelt is back in this country, his return to health assured, and his interest in affairs as keen as it ever was.

Week's Changes in Mexican Situation

WE CAN ONLY ADVISE.

Milwaukee Journal: The President realizes that he cannot actually institute the reforms that Mexico needs, but he will go as far as he can to urge them, and he makes it plain that he will give his moral support, which is the moral support of the American people, to such leaders of Mexico who have the desire and the ability to lead the common people of that country out of misery, out of bondage, and up into the paths of democratic civilization. His faith in them will help to give them faith in themselves. We are blessed, and they are blessed, in view of the situation, that he is where he can guide both aright.

A QUEER MIXUP.

Philadelphia Inquirer: The administration does not recognize Huerta. From a man not recognized it demands an apology by way of an official salute over the Tampico incident. The A B C countries step in and extend their "good offices." Huerta—the man that we do not recognize as of official existence—sends delegates to Niagara Falls and meets there representatives of the administration. We are thus treating officially with the agents of an unofficial person. And meanwhile Garranza and Villa are murdering their way into the City of Mexico. It's a queer mix-up, isn't it?

WILL IT BE FUTILE?

Philadelphia Evening Star: One of the parties to this mediation at present going on is the United States, which, according to the stand taken by the administration, really has little to do with the matter at all. The other is a fast disappearing faction of the Mexicans which is being whipped out of its boots and which cannot be expected to endure scarcely long enough for the mediation plans to be consummated. What then does such mediation amount to? The strong factor in the case, the faction which is winning and which bids fair to hold the Government of Mexico within its grasp in a few days or weeks, does not recognize the mediators and will not accept their plans. It would seem that all being done, therefore, at Niagara Falls is futile and that it will attain in no wise to bringing about peace and lawful government in Mexico.

FORCE THE FINAL RESORT.

Washington Post: Even if Huerta, Villa, Carranza, Zapata, and all the other bandits, murderers, robbers, cutthroats and grafters in Mexico should agree to a pacification plan evolved by the A B C mediators, the plan can only be put into effect and made permanent by the United States army and navy.

CONSTITUTIONALISTS' INSOLENCE.

Philadelphia Evening Times: As clear as sunshine is the fact that for us Huerta is no longer the problem. He will not last a great while, though his lingering backers and party will remain a powerful sentiment and force with which we or anybody must reckon. But, as Huerta's once grim figure fades out of the central setting, more ominous yet for us looms the bravado of the so-called Constitutionalists. Compared with their insolence, Huerta's scorn of us has been vinegar to sulphuric acid. He has mocked us; from the time they defied our State Department about Benton, the British citizen murdered by the hand of Villa, up to now, when they threaten, if we really get serious with our mediation, to rebuff the United States as incontinently as the A B C mediators, they have been baiting us with increasing abandon. All this does not mean that we necessarily are plunging into war with Mexico despite our almost pitiable effort to keep out of it. It does mean beyond peradventure that our Bryanized statecraft not only is utterly incompetent to deal with, but has not the faintest comprehension of, the real Mexican problem.

Albania Tottering

GREEKS DEFIED "KING WILLIE."

Chicago Daily Journal: The Greeks of northern Epirus have won their brave fight against being turned into Albanians. Little King Willie of Wied has made a virtue of necessity and granted nearly all the demands of a people whom he could not conquer. Nominally, these Greeks remain within the Albanian monarchy. Actually, they are independent in everything but name. The Greek language is to be used in their schools. They choose their own officials; retain their own military organization. Northern Epirus is now virtually an independent Greek republic, under the presidency of that able revolutionary chieftain, Zographos.

This complete surrender by the Albanian King proves that the Journal was right in branding the stories of Epirote "atrocities" as Austrian falsehoods, designed to pave the way for Austrian intervention.

TOO ARTIFICIAL TO LAST.

New York Tribune: Albania is a thoroughly artficial political entity. It contains elements at odds with one another over questions of race and religion, untrained in agriculture or industry and unused to the restraints of modern civilized government. Its life and institutions are much the same as they were four or five centuries ago. Austria-Hungary and Italy forced the creation of the kingdom in order to keep its territory from being divided among the Balkan States. They are its political sponsors and they will have to finance it, police it and keep it from drifting into anarchy. They will have their hands full doing this for the next quarter of a century.

FUTURE IN GRAVE DOUBT.

New York Evening Post: A third Balkan war, over Albania, is not among the probabilities of the immediate future; but within the borders of the newly constituted state the outlook is for a continuous play at civil strife and diplomatic intrigue. Unrest is what the protecting Powers—Austria and Italy—most desire. The erection of a strong Government would mean a postponement of hopes cherished at Vienna and Rome. So we are justified in regarding the unfortunate beginning of Prince William's reign as the first of a succession of episodes which will keep the pot boiling without actually causing it to spill over for some time to come. There will be small uprisings and civil wars, plots and counterplots, until the time seems ripe for a decisive stroke either from the north or from across the Adriatic. The elements of possible confusion are almost countless in Albania.

Labor in Trust Bills

THE RIGHT TO COMBINE.

Boston Globe: Both employer and employ should be treated fairly in any supplementary legislation which may be written into the statute books by the present Congress to narrow the so-called twilight zone of the Sherman act.

Unions have come to stay. Collective bargaining is recognized more widely every day as the modern method of doing business. It would be retrogression, under existing conditions, to revive industrial individualism.

But if the workers of six factories, for example, are permitted to combine to settle a question of wages or hours, the half-dozen manufacturers concerned should not be restrained from uniting for the same purpose.

Equal rights for all! "What is sauce for the goose," says an old proverb which Swift so often quoted, "is sauce for the gander."

SHERMAN LAW SUFFICIENT.

Washington Post: The Sherman law is sufficient for all purposes. There is no need for new legislation. If the leaders in Congress feel that there must be additional law on the subject of trusts, such law must be impartial and make no distinctions between the so-called classes. This is as much in the interest of the workingman, who always has the chance of becoming a proprietor, as it is in the interest of the American spi[illegible] justice. The President shows that he intends to uphold the law of equality when he makes known that he will not put his signature to an antitrust act which seeks to set up among the people of the United States undemocratic and un-American classes.

PLAY NO FAVORITES.

Boston Transcript: When Congress begins to play favorites, whether individuals or classes, it is departing widely from our fundamental professions with respect to forms of law and government and it should take the full responsibility and also be made to go on record for treachery to those standards which govern just and sound legislation. The very fact that the labor element is making such a determined stand for an extraordinary privilege is an exhibition of arrogance that argues its unfitness to be treated with such sweeping immunity for any excesses of which it might be guilty, and the experiences of every year show that these are more or less frequent. In vetoing a bill of that vicious character the President might put himself at odds with his party, but that would be far better for the country and even for himself than to give validity to such an undemocratic and indefensible piece of legislation.

Duchess of Marlborough Gives a Magnificent Ball

Mrs. Cecil Bingham and Lady Waldstein Give Brilliant Parties the Same Evening, to Some Extent Changing Guests With Sunderland House—Lady Cheylesmore's Dinner and Cotillon a Grand Success.

LONDON, May 30.—Her long-standing promise to pay a summer visit to Newport is about to be fulfilled by the Duchess of Marlborough, who was Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt of New York. She will go next month to be a guest of her mother, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, who has made a solemn vow not to set foot in England again until the English women get votes.

Society here hates to lose the Duchess during the height of the season, especially after the brilliant ball she gave this week, but she promises to give at least two more entertainments before she sails.

This ball was magnificently done down to the smallest detail, perfect taste being displayed in all the arrangements. The house looked beautiful, adorned with a mass of vivid blue hydrangeas. The dinner supper tables (five large round ones) were done in vari-colored Malmaisons in gold and silver bowls. The dining room was lighted with real wax candles in rock crystal candlebra overhead. Small rose-colored lamps were on the tables. In the drawing rooms were hundreds of roses and lilies.

After supper there was the fancy dancing, which was very pretty and amusing. Some women were quite proficient in the tatao, the latest craze from Paris. Although the balancing is difficult in some movements it was done perfectly by such pretty graceful girls as Nancy Cunard and Alice Chauncey, who, although large, are very light on their feet and beautiful dancers. Lady Diana Manners, Miss Butler, Irene Curzon and the beautiful daughter of Lady de Trafford danced exquisitely.

The Duchess of Marlborough wore a beautiful gown of oyster satin, partly veiled in old Mechlin lace and caught at the waist with rose ribbons and deep crimson roses. On her bodice were the celebrated Vanderbilt ropes of pearls. As a headdress she wore a small, round diamond and pearl-tipped crown.

Mrs. Astor Much Admired.

Mrs. John Astor, who returned from Paris Sunday, had on rose brocade, the bodice sewn with pearls outlined on pale blue chiffon with pink roses in her hair on one side and on the other a flashing diamond crescent and star, one of the latest gifts from her son. She was greatly admired and much sought after as usual. She looked somewhat tired and did not dance much.

The Duchess of Roxburghe (Miss May Goelet) wore pale lilac satin with lilies worked in silver down the front of the skirt, a large diamond tiara, a necklace of gorgeous jewels and plain ropes of diamonds strung from shoulder to shoulder.

Her sister-in-law, Lady Alastair Innes-Kerr (Miss Anne Breese) wore turquoise blue satin gown, narrow at the feet, but from the waist to the knees, full and fluffy, with draperies of turquoise chiffon. She was adorned with ropes of pearls and pink orchids.

Lady Deerhurst (Miss Virginia Bonynge) in black, with many diamonds and a twist of blue velvet around her throat.

Cora, Countess of Strafford (Mrs. Samuel Colgate) was regal in white, veiled with transparent silver net flecked with pearls. She had a high all-around diamond crown and massive diamond collar.

Lady Arthur Butler (Miss Ellen Stager) wore a handsome gown of gold brocade with emerald embroideries, a diamond collar and pearl ropes.

Lady Cunard (Miss Maud Burke) was like a brilliant firefly in a gown of all colors and a bouquet of roses and other flowers, the colors of which were selected to bring out the tones of her rich brocade gown. Her jewels were beautiful rubies, emerals and diamonds. She looks young to be out with her pretty daughter, Nancy, who is at least a half foot taller than her mother. The girl looked sweet in pale blue and pink roses. She is very like her mother with the same golden hair.

Mme. Domingues Flashing Diamonds.

Mme. Domingues was in black with blazing diamonds, almost covering her hair and her corsage a mass of diamonds. She talked a great deal with Lady Charles Beresford, whose bright golden hair was crossed and recrossed with gold ribbon and had a vivid Oriental sash around the waist of her black gown.

Mrs. Harry Higgins wore black with gorgeous diamonds. She sat for sometime with the Duchess of Westminster, who was a striking figure in gold, blue, green and red brocade, with a high diamond crown and rose shoes.

The girl beauty in the company was Lady Irene Curzon. She is very like her mother (Miss Mary Leiter of Chicago). She wore simple white satin, with an extraordinary wreath of up-standing yellow corn (quite a red Indian effect) around the front of her dark hair. Very self-possessed and dignified, she danced twice with Grand Duke Michael, who made much of her.

Another pretty Anglo-American girl was Lady Iris Capell, elder daughter of the Countess of Essex. She wore palest yellow satin with no ornament whatever. She is extraordinarily quiet. Her friends have been wondering if this season "Iris will talk." She is noted for her silence, although a wonderful speaker on the platform.

Lady Essex wore silver and blue brocade. Her jewels were turquoise and diamonds with blue orchids fastened at the waist with a turquoise belt.

Mr.s Cecil Bingham gave on the same evening a sort of interlocking party. It was a dinner that was attended, among others, by the Duchess of Marlborough and her guests, who did not leave for the Sunderland House ball until midnight. After dinner bridge was played, while in the study there was an amateur musical entertainment.

Mrs. Bingham was radiant in white veiled draperies and sea green chiffon embroidered heavily with gold and silver flowers and birds. A huge diamond crescent glittered from one side of her hair and she had a coronet of emeralds with diamonds in the front. Emeralds covered her corsage and fell in loops and tassels to the waist, which was encircled with a snake belt of the same stones.

Miss Chauncey (her daughter by her first husband, S. S. Chauncey of New York,) wore white with exquisite pearl traceries and embroideries on a silk net overdress. A bunch of lilies adorned one shoulder and a string of pearls was wound in and out of her masses of fair hair.

Jean Reid in Futurist Gown.

Mrs. John Ward (Miss Jean Reid) wore a futurist gown of black, white and yellow, which suited her style. In her hair she wore diamonds. The Countess of Craven (Miss Cornelia Martin) wore mauve satin with elaborate embroideries of silver. Her bodice was a dazzling mass of diamonds.

The Countess of Granard (Miss Beatrice Mills) wore a Russian tiara with a shell-pink gown edged with diamond trellis work and diamond-studded silver buckles on her shoes.

Mrs. George Keppel was magnificent in silver cloth worked with amethyst and diamonds, a high tiara of diamonds and a blazing corsage.

LANGHORNE KAISER'S GUEST AT DINNER AND OPERA

BERLIN, May 30.—Maj. George T. Langhorne, the military attache to the American Embassy, was a guest of Emperor William at dinner in the royal palace today, after the spring parade of the Potsdam Guards and at gala performance of opera.

Ambassador Gerard was prevented by a slight illness from witnessing the parade, which was a brilliant spectacle, in spite of bad weather.

Col. and Mrs E. M. House of New York were entertained by the Ambassador this week.

A number of Americans on automobile tours are hold up in Berlin by the bitter cold weather. Snow has fallen as for south as the Hartz Mountains.

MADRID, Spain, May 30.—The Pope having expressed his wish that all Catholic children should take their first communion at a much earlier age than they used to do, the King and Queen chose the seventh birthday of their first born, the Prince of the Asturias, for his first entry into the Catholic fold.

The little Prince of the Asturias looked very solemn as he received the sacrament from the Bishop of Sion, and one could see his little hands tremble with childlike emotion. He wore on his right arm a white satin bow on which, in raised gold, were embroidered his initials and the royal crown.

Lines of Sadness in Royal Faces.

All present remarked the very sad look of the Queen grandmother and how very tender the King and Queen were with her. The courtiers observed, too, that Prince Ferdinand of Bavaria, who married King Alfonso's younger sister, Infanta Maria Teresa, seemed much depressed and embarrassed; also that the members of the royal family treated him coldly. The King's usually bright, merry face had an unusually stern expression which he vainly tried to dissimulate.

It was obvious that a cloud had come over the usually cordial happy relations of all the members of the Spanish royal family.

Everyone also noticed the absence of Queen Christina's maid of honor, her daily companion for many years. But it was an open secret that two days before Queen Christina had requested Miss Maria Luisa Silva to resign her post at court and that King Alfonso had immediately signed a decree supporting the demand.

Like every other court in Europe, the Spanish court has an introducer of Ambassadors. For many years this high post has been occupied by Count Pie de Conchas. The Queens of Spain have many ladies-in-waiting, selected, of course, from the highest in the land, but each has also her own private maid of honor, who has to be daily in contact with her.

Queen's Maid Really Her Chum.

Some years ago Queen Christina selected from her many to be her "dama particular," Miss Maria Luisa Silva, daughter of Count Pie de Conchas. Miss Silva de Maria Luisa, as the royal family called her, was quite an acquisition. Dark and very handsome, though past the age when most girls marry, she was clever, discreet and gay and the Queen mother grew most attached to her. They were always together. She wrote for Her Majesty, drove out with her, read to her, in fact was a most devoted companion, especially so during those hard days of sorrow and mourning in September of 1910, when the already much-bereaved Queen mother lost her second daughter, Infanta Maria Teresa. This popular Spanish Infanta married, Jan. 12, 1906, her cousin, a son of Infanta Maria de la Pax of Spain, Prince Ferdinand of Bavaria, and passed away Sept. 23, 1912, a few days after her fourth child was born.

Day after day Queen Christina could be seen accompanied by Miss Silva, entering the little palace occupied by Prince Ferdinand on the Cuerta de las Vega on her motherly pilgrimage to console the young widower and see that the poor little motherless children were cared for.

A year later Prince Ferdinand was constantly at the royal palace. Queen Christina liked to have him dine quietly with her in her own apartments, often excusing herself from the royal evening meal to have her quietly with Miss Silva and Prince Ferdinand.

Her Majesty has never been selfish in her sorrow. After a certain time she advised her other son-in-law, Prince Charles of Bourbon-Sicily, to remarry, and she was the first to sanction his union with Princess Louise of Orleans, who has been the best of stepmothers. It is whispered that Queen Christina invited to the palace this winter a very good and beautiful young Archduchess, but Prince Ferdinand seemed to feel his loss more and more and one constantly heard of his going to the monastery of the Escurial to pray for the soul of his young wife.

King's Long Nose Smells a Mouse.

Now Alfonso XIII has not a long nose for nothing. What was the subject of very interesting conversations in the servants' halls and kitchens of the royal palace had not escaped him. Quietly asking his brother-in-law to smoke a good Havana with him, he said point blank:

"No nonsense now! What do you mean by carrying on with mother's maid of honor?"

Prince Ferdinand hesitated. But he could not deny when the King remarked that everybody except Queen Christina had noticed his meeting with Miss Silva in the halls and galleries of the palace, his talking apart with her, and then taking her home in his own carriage—in fact a regular courtship.

After a while the Prince confessed and asked the King's permission to marry Miss Silva.

His Majesty said he must see his mother first, and he forced Prince Ferdinand to tell Queen Christina, who naturally was much distressed and immediately requested the lady in question to resign her post. Neither Queen Christina nor King Alfonso would mind in the least if Prince Ferdinand should marry a lady from some of the noble houses, but the fact that the love-making had been going on behind their backs in a court which is an example of family life and union made them feel highly indignant. Moreover, Prince Ferdinand is only 30 and his future bride is dark, fat and more than 43.

This marriage is expected to take place in October.

MONTENEGRIN KING IS RULED BY PRINCESS.

Strong-Minded Daughter Is Menance to Liberties of the People and Advance of Nation.

CETTINJE, Montenegro, May 30.—Princess Xenia, the elder of King Nicholas' unmarried daughters, is the despair of the foreign legations here on account of her influence over him. Her ideas are despotic and she will not let any improvements be made in the Government.

When foreign Ministers get the King alone, he is amenable, but he always tells them he must have a day to think over any new proposals. This means he must talk it over with Princess Xenia. Ten to one, at the next meeting, he says "No" to their requests.

Xenia, they say, would rule the country splendidly if it was not for "newfangled ideas" imported by Montenegrins who have come back from America. They openly criticise her ways and her hatred of the Constitution. King and Princess both work to prevent emigration to America, and put a stop to the return of those who once get out there.

All of Xenia's sisters are masterful. Princess Helena, the Queen of Italy, is more widely known than the others, who are Grand Duchess Peter Nicholavitch of Russia, Grand Duchess Nicholas Nicholaivitch, Princess Francis Joseph of Battenberg and Princess Vera, the youngest, and as yet unmarried.

Dislikes Constitution but Loves Poker.

Old King Nicholas dislikes a constiution, but loves a game of poker, as Baron Kruiff, an Austrian aristocrat, has just found out.

Kruiff came here to organise a press bureau, had an audience with the King and was told he could go to work. Next day His Majesty met him in the streets of Cettinje and asked:

"Well, is the press bureau working yet?"

The Baron explained that he had not obtained the Government's sanction.

"I am the Government!" shouted the King, in a real Montenegrin rage. "When I tell you to do a thing, you can and must do it!"

The Baron made matters worse by remarking:

"I understood there was a Constitution here."

The King's rage grew wilder than ever and he rode off, storming and swearing at all Austrians. That afternoon Kruiff was summoned by M. Ramadamovitch, President of the Council, and reproved for mentioning the word constitution in the King's presence.

"I don't know if you will ever start your press bureau now," he added. "His Majesty is so furious that he cannot talk of anything else."

The poor Baron asked what he should do, as the Austrian Government would cover him with disgrace if he went home without having done his work. After much talk Ramadamovitch asked if the Baron played poker.

"Yes, but what has that to do with it?"

Then the courtier explained.

How Austria Pulls Wool Over His Eyes.

"His Majesty loves poker. When he is offended with any Power he stops asking that Power's Ambassador to play cards. Invite me and some of the other courtiers to play poker at your house. His Majesty will hear of it. He will then ask if you lose. We shall say you do. He likes to win and will ask you to play poker. You must not mind if he does not play well—not quite up to club ideas. But you must lose. Then you will get your bureau."

Baron Kruiff took the hint and is now a constant visitor at the royal poker table. He has his bureau and thus Austria controls the news of all that happens in the little state she covets so much.

Princess Jutta of Mecklenburg, the wife of Prince Danilo, the coming King of Montenegro, has been sent to Germany for a long cure in the sanitorium of Prof. Binswanger at Jena. It is reported that she has some brain affection as the result of her treatment at the Montenegrin court.

Unveiling of the Pierre de Laclede Statue Brings Together Women Who Were Belles When St. Louis Was a Village, and Who Recall Stage Coach Days.

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

THE unveiling of the statue yesterday of Pierre de Laclede Liguest, founder of St. Louis, was a notable occasion and brought together three generations of descendants whose names have been associated civically and socially with the city's history, for there is hardly a prominent family here that does not count in its forebears one of the descendants of Laclede.

In the front row of the seats set aside for the family were several women whose added ages would amount to more than 500 years, all handsome, vigorous women, beauties in their youth, and as attractive in their dowagerhood—women worthy of their pioneer ancestry.

There was Madam Virginia Sarpy Peugnet, the oldest living descendant of Laclede, in her eighty-seventh year, who can remember when the Indians came every autumn to camp on her uncle's place near what now is Laclede avenue and King's highway.

She remembers how the tinkling of bells on the ponies that were driven by the squaws and carried the tepees announced their coming.

They would pitch their camp near the maple sugar grove where the police corral now is or near the spring—the Wells spring—where there was a spring house.

When she went to boarding school in Cahokia she was driven in her uncle's coach, and the first time she went to New York it was in her Uncle Chouteau's coach as far as Harper's Ferry, W. Va., where she saw for the first time a train with its steam engine that looked to her like "a horrible monster."

Incidentally, it was one of the first engines built.

There were women at the unveiling of Laclede's statue who can remember when St. Louis extended only as far as Main street, and Sixth street "was in the country."

Women and men have lived to see Laclede's prophecy fulfilled—that he had chosen a place for a settlement that would some day be one of the most important cities in the Mississippi Valley.

It was an interesting occasion, with flags flying a band playing, and the Mayor to make an address.

THIS, the first week of June, will be marked by a number of notable weddings. They will begin tomorrow with Miss Mary Colt's marriage to F. Herbert Filley at 4:30 o'clock in St. Michael and All Angels' Episcopal Church, when the bride will be the first to cross its threshold.

The ceremony will be followed by a reception at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. John Dwight Filley, and Mr. Filley at 40 Westmoreland place.

At 5 o'clock the marriage of Miss Virginia Elliot and Dr. Walter Fischell will be solemnized in the Union Avenue Christian Church, and afterwards there will be a small reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Elliot.

An out-of-town marriage of interest Monday will be that of Miss Marguerite Sylvia Streaker and Sidney Baer which will take place in Boston at the Summerset Hotel where the bride and her parents Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Streaker reside. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sigmund Baer of Waterman avenue.

Miss Sarah Virginia Outten and Roy M. Culbertson will be married at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Martin Lammert Jr., 5143 Westminster place.

The marriage of Miss Adele Clifton, daughter of Frederick Clifton of 2630 East Union avenue, and Joseph C. Beaury took place last Saturday evening in the home of the bride's parents, 2630 East Union boulevard. George Beaury acted as best man and Miss Melvina Clifton, cousin of the bride, as bridemaid. The Rev. Martin S. Sommer of Grace Lutheran Church officiated. A reception and supper followed the ceremony.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM KOECHIG of 5122 Waterman avenue have sent out cards announcing the marriage of their daughter, Miss Irene Koechig, to Howard Silas Bergen, which took place Tuesday evening, in the Second Baptist Church, at 8:30 o'clock, the Rev. W. C. Bitting officiating. After the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Jessie Koechig, as maid of honor, and Misses Elizabeth Udell, Hilda Hellmich, Florence Maune and Irene Hoffmeister as bridemaids.

Little Florence Ludington was flower girl and Master Kenneth Koechig, the bride's litte brother, was ring bearer.

Paul Kessler was best man and the ushers were George Breaker, Ira Fisher, Otto Kortkamp and Elwood Bergen.

The bride was gowned in white brocaded satin, trimmed with the point duchess lace that was on her mother's wedding gown.

Her veil was of tulle and fell from beneath a coronet of the lace.

She carried a bouquet of bridal roses and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor wore a gown of pink charmeuse and carried pink roses.

The bridemaids' gowns were made with flounces of white lace, two over pink and two pale blue.

Those who wore blue carried bouquets of blue roses and sweet peas and those who wore pink carried pink roses and sweet peas.

After the reception Mr. Bergen and his bride departed for New York to spend the first days of their honeymoon and to attend the wedding of the bride's cousin, Miss Elsa Koechig, and William Heller, which will take place there, Tuesday.

Dr. T. FELIX GOURAUD'S
Oriental Cream
OR MAGICAL BEAUTIFIER

PURIFIES as well as Beautifies the Skin. No other cosmetic will do it.

Removes Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Moth Patches, Rash and Skin Diseases, and every blemish on beauty, and defies detection. It has stood the test of 66 years, and is so harmless we taste it to be sure it is properly made. Accept no counterfeit of similar name. Dr. L. A. Sayre said to a lady of the hautton (a patient): "As you ladies will use them, I recommend 'Gouraud's Cream' as the least harmful of all the skin preparations." At Druggists and Department stores.

FRECKLES

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With the Othine Prescription.

This prescription for the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by druggists under guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee. —ADV.

CLEAN HEADS A Confidential Talk.

Clean False Hair, Switches, Etc.

Some of the worst diseases have been contracted from False Hair Adornments. As a precaution all False Hair should be washed thoroughly with before it is ever worn, and also washed occasionally thereafter with this Soap to keep it always clean, soft and fluffy. Many ladies and gentlemen take the precaution to shampoo their hair regularly with this Soap, as it makes a thick, medicated lather, which thoroughly cleanses the hair and scalp of all dust, dirt and disease germs and parasites, if there are any there; will cure Itch, Dandruff and Disease of the Hair and Scalp, Prevent the Hair from Falling Out, Make it Soft and Fluffy, and Promote its Healthy, Luxuriant Growth. While millions use it to keep children's heads clean, many Older Heads have been saved from Baldness and a Healthy, Luxuriant Growth of Hair Produced by its use. It is used by many Hair Dressers and Masseurs for this purpose. Ladies employed in department stores, factories & large establishments, where dust and contagious disease germs are continuously flying around, & where they come in contact with all kinds of people, find this Soap absolutely indispensable.

CURES DANDRUFF.

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff. No matter how much you may have, this soap dissolves it and washes it out of the hair entirely. Always in a white tin box. Refuse all substitutes. Cost, only 15c; worth its weight in gold. At all druggists or by mail of Fitzgerald Soap Co., Collingswood, N. J., if your druggist will not supply you. Save this Notice.

DEATH MARCH IN CHICAGO

Sinclair Organizes Parade of Boys Past the Standard Oil Offices.

CHICAGO, May 30.—"A death march" of boys organized by Upton Sinclair marched up and down past the Standard Oil Co.'s offices here today. The boys were pledged to silence and on the arm of each was crepe in memory of the strikers killed in the Colorado mining struggle.

Sinclair arrived here yesterday and in announcing the plan said that "something must be done to keep the Colorado situation before the public." The police ignored the demonstration.

Makes Hairs Disappear Almost Like Magic (Toilet Talks)

The woman whose beauty is marred with superfluous hair or fuzz will gladly welcome the new home treatment for removing objectionable growths from the face, neck or arms, because this method is quick and certain in its action and so simple that anyone can use it in the privacy of her own home with entirely satisfactory results.

A paste is made with some powdered delatone and water, then spread over the hairy surface. In two or three minutes it is removed and with it comes every trace of hair. After the skin is washed and dried it will be clear, spotless and of a velvety softness. This is a safe, harmless method and unless the growth is very stubborn one application is sufficient; but to avoid disappointment be sure to get the delatone in an original package.—ADV.

HER ALLIGATOR CROSS, SO SHE SENT IT TO THE ZOO

Mrs. Louis Heinfelden of Belleville Feared Animal Was Becoming Dangerous.

Mrs. Louis Heinfelden of Belleville yesterday cleared a deep mystery by making it known that it was she who sent a fighting alligator 5½ feet long to George T. Dieckman, president of St. Louis Zoological Society, Friday. It was intended as a gift to the Forest Park Zoo.

When Dieckman received a package by express he opened it and found the alligator. It looked as if it would like to bite a piece out of him and he quickly put on the lid.

Mrs. Heinfelden's alligator is the battling saurian which killed a smaller alligator owned by her at her Belleville home a year ago. Recently, she says, the alligator has become so cross that she feared he might bite someone and she believed it would be safer to keep it in the St. Louis Zoo.

MISSOURI BAKERS TO MEET HERE WEDNESDAY

Mayor Kiel Will Welcome Delegates to Annual Convention at American Annex.

The Missouri Master Bakers' Association will open its annual convention in St. Louis at the American Annex Hotel, Wednesday. At this convention the commercial side of the baking industry will be discussed.

Mayor Kiel will welcome the bakers and their guests. George Warneke of Kansas City, president of the Association, will respond. Among the important subjects to be considered are: "Buying of Materials," B. Howard Smith, Kansas City, and discussion led by F. H. Hohengarten of St. Louis; "Operating Expenses of the Wholesaler," August Junge, Joplin, Mo., and discussion led by F. J. Schmieder of St. Louis; "Operating Expenses of the Retailer," E. H. Hohengarten, St. Louis, and discussion led by William Hoerr of St. Louis; "Selling and Delivery of Product by the Wholesaler," Fred S. Freund, St. Louis, and discussion by R. L. Nafziger, Kansas City; "Selling and Delivery of the Product by the Retailer," M. Hoffmann, St. Louis, and discussion led by E. H. Hohengarten; "True and False Economies," F. C. Stadelhofer, St. Louis, and discussion led by F. C. Schillig.

The "Salty Order of Pretzels" will install officers publicly at 5:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at 1508 Chouteau avenue, St. Louis Turner Hall, to which the women accompanying the delegates will be admitted. The installation ceremonies will be directed by R. L. Nafziger, Chief Salter. The delegates will remain at the St. Louis Turner Hall after the "Missouri Baking," the initiatory services of the "Salty Order of Pretzels," where a stag affair will be given. The women of the convention will return to the American Annex Hotel, where they will be banqueted.

SCHOOL BOYS ADVISED TO BE CITY MANAGERS

AMARILLO, Tex., May 30.—Mayor J. N. Beasley, in an address before the high school students, advised the boys to choose city management as their profession in life. Mayor Beasley said that during the past six months he has received 75 communications from other cities asking for information about where they could obtain a capable man for such work.

"The profession opens wonderful opportunities and the man who makes a success in a small town will soon be called to the larger cities," said he.

Amarillo has found the city manager plan a great success. The city has recently sent communications to other municipalities proposing a city managers meeting. This session, to be attended by all city managers of the cities having such a system will be held in Springfield, O., in August.

BEN BLEWETT INHERITS WIFE'S $50,000 ESTATE

Superintendent of St. Louis Schools Is Appointed to Administer It.

Ben Blewett, Superintendent of the St. Louis public schools, was appointed administrator of the estate of his wife, Mrs. Jessie Parsons Blewett, by Probate Judge Holtcamp, Friday.

Mrs. Blewett died May 7, at the home of her mother, Mrs. C. B. Parsons, in Riverside, Mo., where she had been taken three weeks before from her home at 3405 Hawthorne boulevard, in the belief the country air would restore her health. Her estate is valued at $50,000. She left no will and her husband is her only heir.

DIVORCE IS SET ASIDE

Judge Acts When Wife Explains Why She Wasn't Present.

On petition of Mrs. Annie Rippe, a decree of divorce obtained on April 7 by her husband, Charles W. Rippe, 1312 North Broadway, was set aside, Friday, by Circuit Judge Taylor, who granted the decree.

Rippe won the divorce on a cross-bill, his wife, who brought the suit, failing to appear at the trial. In her motion to vacate the order she said she was not aware the case was set for that time. She recites that on Feb. 14, 1913, Judge Jones dismissed a suit for divorce filed by Rippe.

Rippe is in the grocery and dry goods business. He and his wife were married Oct. 7, 1907, and separated June 29, 1912.

You are wondering what to give for a wedding present. Select a beautiful diamond ring, la vallière, bracelet watch, scarfpin or fine watch. Loftis Bros. & Co., the National Credit Jewelers, 2d floor, 308 N. Sixth

A Secret for Women

Cut this out.

Madame Moneaux, deceased beauty specialist, of New York, long possessed the greatest of all secrets pertaining to feminine charm. And what is this great secret, so much desired by women—the secret that has made a vast fortune for the madam's heirs, and that brought her all the famous actresses and society leaders for patrons?

It is a simple but sure method of developing the bust, arms and neck of women who through defect of nutrition and circulation, are humiliated by undeveloped arms, neck and bust. Ugly, deformed women are developed into charming personages, with well rounded arms and neck and full, normal bust of exquisite curve and proportion.

A rare compound of oils known to pharmacists as medicated venosol, put up in sealed tubes, is daily massaged on the parts needing development, and owing to improved circulation and nourishment rapid increase follows.

Apply morning and night regularly for several weeks and the most beautiful development will begin to reward the efforts. It is believed by experts to be the most necessary and effective prescription ever conceived.—ADVERTISEMENT.

BEWARE OF POISONOUS HAIR DYE

¶ The only people deceived by dyed hair are those whose heads it adorns. We all have seen cases almost pitiful to behold.

¶ The worst part of such a condition is that the poisonous dye gradually affects your eyes and entire system. If you are in good health, all the ill-effects are noticeable only after some months.

¶ It is a fact that nearly all the preparations contain one or more poisonous ingredients like lead, sulphur, copper, nitrate of silver or ammonia.

¶ There is only one absolutely sure way—use Empress—Imported Hair Color Restorer—for no other is attested by great chemists and professors in leading colleges of Europe and America to contain not a drop nor an atom of anything that can do even the slightest injury to your health.

¶ Ten beautiful natural shades impossible to detect that your hair was dyed. $2.00 per box.

¶ One application requires only 15 minutes.

¶ Sold by Famous-Barr Co., Kiefer Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson, B. Nugent & Bro. and all first-class department stores and hairdressers. Samples and additional information on receipt of 10c from Empress Mfg. Co., 16 East Seventeenth street, New York.—ADV.

Tango, and the Complexion

The strenuous exercise of the Tango has the effect of improving the general health and so naturally helps to improve complexions. It has also forced most women to discard face powders because they rub off too readily and fill the pores, making healthy skin-breathing impossible.

If pore-clogging powder were discarded for a plain spurmax lotion, there would be more beautiful complexions, and rough, blotchy, unlovely skins would rarely be seen. This lotion is easily prepared at home—just get from your druggist 4 ounces spurmax and dissolve in either ½ pint hot water or witch hazel, and add 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. The spurmax lotion is fine for hot days, as it will not spot nor streak, and one application lasts an entire day, relieving that shiny, oily appearance. This lotion blends so nicely with the skin that it cannot be detected, and it lends an exquisite charm to the daintiest complexion.—ADV.

The DOCTOR'S ADVICE

by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character; the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers should apply to any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Building, College-Ellwood streets, Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescription can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

"Distress" writes: "My hair is so oily and straggling I wish you could tell me something to make it soft and fluffy. It makes me positively homely. I also have a great deal of dandruff."

Answer: Many women would be more beautiful if they had soft, fluffy hair. I can tell you a very simple remedy, one that will make your hair soft and fluffy. It will overcome dandruff, itching scalp and lustreless and falling hair. Ask your druggist for a 4-oz. jar of plain yellow minyol and use according to directions, and you will be surprised to note the difference in your hair.

"Fred W." writes: "I suffer with headache, indigestion, nervous debility and am also thin almost to the danger point. What can be done for me?"

Answer: You can very readily overcome these difficulties by using 3-grain hypo-nuclane tablets. They are put up in sealed cartons, with full directions. These are highly recommended by physicians, and if used according to directions you will soon be rid of headache, your indigestion will be gone and you will gain from 10 to 30 pounds. These tablets should be taken regularly for several months and I am confident you will gain in flesh.

"Lee" writes: "I have tried so many remedies for rheumatism that I am almost afraid to try any more, but if you can tell me a sure remedy I will try it."

Answer: Do not be disheartened because you have not been able to find something that would overcome your rheumatism, for you can be relieved if you will take what I tell you. Get from the drug store: Iodide of potassium, 2 drams; sodium salicylate, 4 drams; wine of colchicum, ½ oz.; comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz.; comp. essence cardiol, 1 oz., and syrup sarsaparilla, 5 ozs. Mix and take a teaspoonful at meal time and again before going to bed.

"Fern" writes: "I have suffered with a bad cough for some time and I am also weak and tired most of the time, which I think is due to the severe coughing. Can you give me a remedy?"

Answer: Yes, your weakness is due to the coughing, but you should be well relieved by using the following: Get a 2½-oz. package of essence mentho-laxene and make according to directions on the bottle, then take a teaspoonful every hour or two until the cough is cured. This makes a full pint of the very best and safest cough syrup. If your druggist does not have mentho-laxene, have him order it for you of the wholesale firms.

"Doctor: What can I take for a bad case of indigestion? I have suffered with it for many years and nothing I take helps at all. I am also bothered with constipation."

Answer: You should not neglect indigestion and constipation, as it leads to more serious trouble; very frequently appendicitis is caused by this neglect. Begin at once and take tablets triopeptine. These are packed in sealed cartons with full directions for taking.

"Laura S." writes: "I am so tired and nervous all the time I can scarcely drag one foot after the other. It is very hard for me, as I have to work. My appetite is also very poor."

Answer: What you need is a good tonic restorative treatment. Take the tonic prescribed below and you should soon be strong and healthy and will not have that tired feeling. Your work will become a pleasure to you: Syrup of hypophosphites comp., 5 ozs.; tincture of cadomene, 1 oz.; mix, and take a teaspoonful before each meal. This should be continued for several weeks until you feel perfectly strong.

"Mrs. W. W. C." asks: "Can I take off 40 pounds of fat? I weigh 180 pounds; too much for my height."

Answer: Yes, you should by taking, as per the directions which accompany, 5-grain arbolene tablets, put up in sealed tubes and sold by well-stocked druggists. They are very good for any fleshy person to take.

"Anna R." writes: "I have taken medicine from several doctors for liver and kidney trouble and constipation, but it does not seem to help me at all. My skin is sallow. I have constant headaches and dizzy spells. What shall I do?"

Answer: The best remedy that I know for your trouble is 3-grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur tablets). These are packed in sealed tubes with full directions. Most of the remedies only aggravate, but if you take the sulpherb tablets regularly for a few weeks you should be well. This will purify the blood and your skin will lose that sallow look.

"Busy Mother": Children's weakness can be cured by giving them the following: Tincture cubebs, 1 dram; tincture rhus aromatic, 2 drams, and comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz. Give from 10 to 15 drops in water an hour before each meal.

"Doctor: I have a very bad case of catarrh of the head and my stomach, bowels and blood are affected. I suffer greatly and would like relief."

"A. G."—Local treatment should be used as follows: Get 2 ozs. of antiseptic vilane powder. Use a half teaspoonful to a pint of warm water, snuff the water from the palm of the hand through the nostrils two or three times a day. Then make a catarrh balm by mixing a level teaspoonful vilane powder with 1 oz. of vaseline or lard and apply to the nostrils as far up as possible. Also take a teaspoonful four times daily of the following: Syrup sarsaparilla comp., 4 ozs.; comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz.; fluid ext. buchu 1 oz. Mix and shake well.

"P. H. C." writes: "When a man is down and out with such symptoms as loss of appetite, insomnia, nervousness, irritability and a listless, tired feeling even after a night's rest, what can be done to restore oneself to good, vigorous health?

Answer: Right living and a powerful harmless invigorating tonic, such as three grain cadomene tablets should cause new life forces to accrue to your great benefit. Your recuperative forces will gradually improve and health return.

I. P. B. writes: "Can you please prescribe medicine which will relieve me of such distressing symptoms of kidney and bladder, as the following: Pains in small of back, soreness in region of bladder, puffing of limbs, etc.

Answer: Those seeking relief from kidney and bladder disorders should begin taking balmwort tablets, a very successful formula sold in sealed tubes with full directions.—ADVERTISEMENT.

People Who STAMMER

know the tragedy of being different from other people. Their affliction sets them aside from all others who are normal, and is a handicap which prevents their success in business or any active participation in social affairs.

I know this to be true, for I myself stammered for 20 years. It was my experience. Thousands of other stammerers have told me that it was their experience. One man said to me: "I am 61 years old and have failed in life because I stammered." Another said: "It always pushes me to one side when I am out in company."

It is true. It was that way with me and it is that way with every stammerer. I endured it through 20 years of misery and sorrow, and finally, after trying every known method of "cure," I cured myself. I was known as the worst stammerer in Indiana. I failed in everything and I was utterly wretched. Today I speak as well as anyone. No one would know or hardly believe that I had ever stammered.

What I have done for myself I can do for you. My method is simple and I guarantee to cure any stammerer of normal intelligence, eight years of age or over, provided my instructions are followed. I am devoting the remainder of my life to this work, carrying it on at the Bogue Institute for Stammerers, which I founded after I had cured myself.

I have just written a 68-page book which tells the complete story of my life. This story begins on page 5 and continues through eleven pages, detailing my failure in school, college and business, and explaining how I finally cured myself.

This book is free to you and will be sent if you will ask for it. When writing state your age and how long you have stammered, and in addition to the book I will send you valuable personal advice without charge. Write today.

Does Tango Reduce Flesh?

The violent movements of the modern dances naturally tend to keep flesh down, but they also tend to put an extra strain upon the vital organs, especially the heart, and so may damage the health more than assist it. Besides, many people do not dance, some people do not believe in dancing, and few people can afford the time to dance enough to really accomplish much reduction. A better way to dissolve fatty tissue easily and quickly without dieting is by taking the parnotis treatment, made at home as follows: Put 4 ounces parnotis (from your druggist's) in 1½ pints hot water and strain when cool. Take a tablespoonful before meals until weight is where you want it. No harm results from the use of the parnotis treatment, and the flesh is left solid and the skin soft and smooth.—ADV.

SENATE INCREASES MISSISSIPPI RIVER FUND $1,000,000

Central Water Way Is Given $8,000,000 in Bill Reading Total of $53,500,000.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Work on the rivers and harbors bill was completed today by the Senate Commerce Committee and the measure will be reported next week, carrying appropriations aggregating $53,500,000. This is an increase of about $10,000,000 over the total of the House bill and of $1,094,000 over last year's total.

The Senate committee cut out several small items in the House bill and reduced others, but added new ones.

The new appropriations include $300,000 for the Narrows of Lake Champlain, $400,000 for Boston harbor, $11,300 for Bridgeport, Conn., $50,000 for the intercoastal waterway between Pensacola and Mobile, $200,000 for the Los Angeles, harbor, $112,500 for the Siusalaw River in Oregon, $100,000 intercoastal waterway, Mississippi River to Bayou Texpe, $125,000 Red River, $400,000 San Juan harbor, Porto Rico.

The committee increased the following House items: Black Warrior River (Alabama), from $250,000 to $750,000; Ouchito River (Arkansas), from $194,000 to $664,000; Chesapeake and Delaware Canal, from $1,300,000 to $2,225,000; Tennessee River, from $55,000 to $930,000; Mississippi River, from $7,000,000 to $8,000,000. Delaware River, $1,000,000 to $2,000,000; Harbor of Refuge, Cape Lookout, N. C., to $1,826,600.

The committee cut the House item of $800,000 for the waterway from Norfolk to Beaufort, N. C., to $600,000, and that for Galveston Channel from $1,185,000 to $100,000.

chard, Salvigny, Wult, Monroy and many more covered themselves with honor in the history of South America.

But our brothers of the North did not give us an opportunity to see the make of their swords. Not even a single specimen of the free American came to enroll himself in the armies of our wars for independence. Not a single matchlock gun came to us from the ports of North America.

The North Americans knew how to make use of Lafayette, but among 20,000,000 of them there was not one who wished to imitate him, in spite of the fact that our war was for a cause similar to theirs, and was fought on the same continent under a similar banner. It would seem that geography created a difference which community of interests, aspirations, systems and mutual happiness could not erase.

Dr. Pena concludes his indictment by attributing what he calls our indifference to the welfare of the Latin-American republics to deep racial differences. But he warns us that while the Latin peoples may be abused now, their glory will revive and they again shall claim the world for their own. His remarks on this point are quoted elsewhere in this paper.

made as plain as A B C and with many of their ideals visualized before them as never before, the audience just poured up afterward to sign the petition. The actors who had not succumbed to reason in the effort to make the acting of their parts convincing, when they beheld the devotion and felt the co-operation of the audience outside, were so impressed that the most rabid antis among them signed.

"And that will be the effect of the St. Louis Pageant," she concluded. "Many who attended absorbed only an inkling of what it was all about. But that inkling was vital. It will not vanish overnight as so much tinsel and paint of the commercial theater."

FACE POWDER CAUSED PARALYSIS, DOCTOR SAYS

Miss Emily Fuller, 21 years old, of 4150 Chouteau avenue, a patient at the city hospital, suffering from paralysis, was told by doctors Saturday she must quit using a face powder which has been her favorite brand if she wants to get well. An analysis of the powder was made Saturday, and it was found to contain lead.

This, the doctors, said, had caused Miss Fuller to have "drop wrist," which is the same thing as paralysis. She said she has used the preparation for several years, and in that time she received treatment from various doctors for paralysis, but none of them told her the trouble was due to the powder preparation.

She was admitted to the hospital a week ago.

Famous Dancer Gives Complexion Secrets

I've learned the secret of Dolores' entrancing beauty—the wondrous charm that has dazzled the courts of Europe and captivated vast audiences everywhere. The famous dancer abhors rouges and cosmetics. Yet, despite the strenuosity of her life, she retains the incomparable complexion best described as "indescribable." An intimate friend tells me the senorita regularly uses on her face what druggists know as mercolized wax. This is applied at night in the manner cold cream is used and washed off in the morning. It absorbs the dead particles of skin which daily appear, and a fair, soft, fresh, girlish complexion is always in evidence.

Dolores' skin is not marred by a single wrinkle, not even the finest line. She wards these off by daily bathing the face in a solution made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half-pint witch hazel. As your drug stores keep these ingredients, as well as mercolized wax (one ounce of the wax is sufficient), no doubt your readers will welcome this information.—Aileen Moore in Beauty's Mirror.—ADV.

Alfred Sutro's "The Clever Ones" Is Big Hit of London Theatrical Season

Nevertheless, This New Satirical Comedy Is Said to Be Anything but Sutro's Best Work, Its Distinction Being Due to Dullness of Competing Plays—"The Wynmartens" and Other New English Productions.

By RIPLEY D. SAUNDERS.

WITH the London theatrical season now apparently gaining full headway, the credit for scoring the biggest play success of the moment is given to Alfred Sutro, whose new satirical comedy, "The Clever Ones," is on at Sir Charles Wyndham's Theater and drawing crowded houses.

The fact, however, that the leading honors thus far go to "The Clever Ones" is said to be more significant of a lack of really notable plays than of genuine worthiness on the part of this lucky production. The truth seems to be that the new Sutro comedy is not by any means the best of Sutro's work to date. There is occasional point and sting to its shafts of ridicule aimed at Socialists and suffragists, but, according to the London play reviewers, the dramatic appeal of the play's story is very faint indeed and much of its alleged "fun," especially that at the expense of the suffragettes, is declared to be in bad taste. Its favorite target, giving the play its title, is seen in "the clever women who never find their equals," and who, according to Sutro, are nurtured on "Russian novelists, Swedish novelists and Cochin China novelists," this characterization being quoted as one of the "smartest" epigrams of the play's voicing.

Thus pillorying a significant feminine group, the story of "The Clever Ones" runs somewhat along the lines of a cure of one or two of the most lovable of these modern women. In bringing this about the characters introduced include a real and a make-believe anarchist, an over-educated Girton Girl, her hop-merchant father, a valet posing as a Socialist to aid his mock-anarchist young master in winning the love of one of the suffragette group, a London tramp who "orates" fiercely against wealth and culture for a fee of 5 shillings for each performance, a would-be "advanced" author and certain other more or less fantastic characters of theatric unreality. The play's story ends happily with the reformation of the "clever ones" and their marriages to the plotting young men who have helped to effect their cure.

Marie Lohr as Rose, the daughter of the really truly anarchist in the play's cast, seems to have scored the leading individual success of the production, and the happy termination of Rose's romance with Wilfred Callender, the make-believe anarchist, brings down the play's last curtain.

Marie Tempest, in "The Wynmartens," a comedy by Richard Henry Powell, which recently received its premiere production at the Playhouse in the British capital, is said to have brought this piece to a point of box-office prosperity that would have been extremely doubtful of attainment but for her effective playing.

Miss Tempest has the role of the Countess of Wynmarten, a young widow, who had endured six years of purgatory as the wife of a drunken husband, and who, in the play, still is suffering the tyrannical rule of a dreadful old mother-in-law, the Dowager Countess, who finds unceasing delight in baiting her deceased son's young widow. It so happens, however, that the naturally joyous and light-hearted widow has a temper of her own and, finally, she determines to "get even" with the hectoring Dowager by creating a seeming scandal that casts shame on the Wynmarten escutcheon. She accomplishes this by so shaping affairs one night that she is believed to have permitted herself to be compromised by an old sweetheart, with whom she had gone to dinner, theater, supper and a Covent Garden ball on the one evening left to him in London before he sailed from England to carry out a big engineering contract. The scandal develops all right. The name of Wynmarten is more or less damaged. The terrible old Dowager is shocked to a degree that delights the vengeful young widowed Countess immensely. But, unexpectedly, the latter's sweetheart loses his position as a result of the escapade and, apparently, the skylarking widow is destined to find her own plot a destructive boomerang. Pluckily, nevertheless, she faces the music, and, at the last, successfully exerts her feminine charm to win back his position for her engineer sweetheart, whereupon the play reaches its close with the Dowager Countess alone a sufferer by her rebellious daughter-in-law's prank.

Graham Browne played the role of the engineer sweetheart successfully. Miss Agnes Thomas as the old Dowager Countess is said to be a close second to Marie Tempest in the favor of audiences.

At the Vaudeville Theater in London the current offering is a new comedy by Henry V. Esmond, entitled "The Dangerous Age" and telling a somewhat strained and, in its climax, a distinctly unpleasant story.

The two principal characters are Mrs Betty Dunbar, an ardent widow nearing 40, and Sir Egbert Englefield, a middle-aged bachelor, who is urging Mistress Betty to marry him. She has two sons and no money and is dependent upon her gruff old maid of a sister for her maintenance; therefore, she is not averse to becoming Lady Englefield. But, haplessly, she is too fond of a certain Cecil, a winning chap of 22, and, on his last night in England before sailing for Africa, she pretends that she is going to pass the night with a woman friend, but goes to meet Cecil instead. On that same night her little son meets with an accident resulting in concussion of the brain. A surgical operation is necessary. Sir Egbert telegraphs to Mistress Betty's woman friend, urging Betty's immediate return home—and just then the woman friend herself puts in an appearance, knowing absolutely nothing of Betty's whereabouts. The surgical operation is performed, the injured boy recovers, but Mistress Betty is, of course, involved in an ugly scandal. The sister who supports her is about to be married. A second sister will provide for her if she "redeems" herself by marrying Cecil. The latter is willing, but, suddenly, Mistress Betty feels all the weight of her 40 years and turns to the middle-aged Sir Egbert for rescue. Quite obligingly, all things considered, he still is willing to make her his wife. And so the story ends.

Mr. Esmond himself plays the role of Sir Egbert, whom he is said to make a very kindly and genial philisopher. Miss Eva Moore is Mrs. Betty Dunbar and is credited with playing the lighter moments quite prettily and the more emotional scenes, showing the mother's remorse, with sincerity and power. It is declared, however, that the play doesn't seem at all real and that it is impossible for the audience to become sympathetically interested in Mistress Betty, the "heroine" of the story.

Among other plays recently presented on London stages are "The Patience of the Sea," a Socialist drama by Conal O'Riordan, so curiously shaped that the reviewers seem in doubt as to whether it should be taken seriously or as a bti of Gilbertian parody; "Uncle Vanya," a five-act drama by Auton Tchekhof, telling a depressing Russian story overburdened with "atmosphere;" "Account Rendered," an English political comedy by Robert Elson; "Married for Love," a melodrama by Jack Denton, and "Fallen by the Wayside," also a melodrama—and of the old-fashioned "thrill" variety from start to finish—which is delighting its audiences at the Empire Theater, second only to Drury Lane in the production of plays of this type.

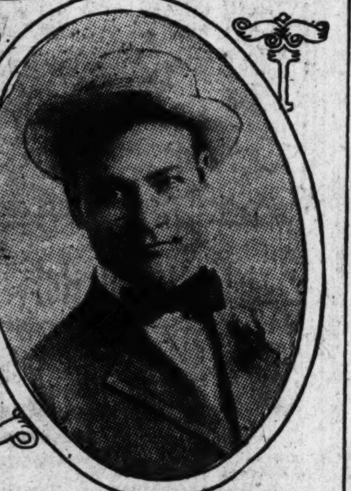
It is quite generally agreed that the present London theatrical season is anything but brilliant in the matter of the plays thus far produced.

Jean Theslof, a Finnish baritone, has been engaged to sing the roles of Alyerado in "Natoma" and Petronius in "Quo Vadis" at the Century Opera House in New York City next season. He is said to be the only grand opera singer born in the Polar region. His father, Governor of a Finnish province, was sent to investigate gold discoveries in Lapland, and Jean was born there in 1885.

Four Stars of Summer Opera Season Now Begun in St. Louis

MABEL McCANE and JOS. E. HOWARD—SUBURBAN GARDEN.

MAUD WILLIAMS—PARK.



JOHN E. YOUNG—PARK.

MUSICAL COMEDY SEASON NOW OPEN AT SUBURBAN PARK

McCane and Howard in "Love and Politics" the Attraction—Other Playbills.

"LOVE AND POLITICS," starring Mabel McCane and Joseph E. Howard. Suburban Park Theater. Opening week of musical comedy season. New lyrics by Joseph E. Howard and Musical Director Herbert Strothard, also a new song by Mr. Howard entitled "St. Louis" and written as a contribution to the Pageant and Masque festival spirit.

Alma Youlin is one of the leading singers of the new Suburban Park musical comedy company and others among its members are True Powers, Queenie Truman, Ike Oliver, Al Denier, Harry Dickerson, George Fox and Ed Anderson. A tuneful and attractive chorus is promised.

"TIME, PLACE AND GIRL," starring John E. Young. Park Theater. Second week of summer opera season. "Johnny" Young will appear in his successful role of Johnny Hicks, the intensely humorous and slangy young hero of the play's story, a part which Young played for several years with a high-priced touring company on the legitimate stage. Others who will appear in the new offering are Maud Williams, prima donna; Carl Haydn, tenor; Billy Kent, light comedian; Clara Gibson, soubrette; Bert Young, juvenile; Charles Huntington, William Fabian and Gypsy Lawrence. Many pleasing song numbers and dances by the chorus are announced.

VAUDEVILLE, Cavallo's band concerts and amusement concessions. Forest Park Highlands. Vaudeville bill headed by the Marvelous Millers, whirlwind dancers, with several other entertaining acts. Swimming pool now open.

KAHNSKY'S Hungarian Band, the rides, new Pike concessions and the villa. Delmar Garden. The bathing beach opens June 1 and, as in past seasons, will become a leading attraction. Dancing in the dance hall also is an especially popular feature. The Press Club of St. Louis will hold its annual frolic at Delmar on June 26.

"OLD CURIOSITY SHOP." Columbia. Hepworth's Pictorial Revival of Charles Dickens' novel, shown in five parts. A graphic photoplay, with all the story's famous characters well acted. Also, as an added attraction, Florence Turner in a two-reel comedy feature entitled "The Rose of Surrey," in which Jean, the wonderful vitagraph dog, is featured.

VAUDEVILLE. Grand. Bill headed by Jack Trainor and company in "Henpecked Henry," a farce-comedy with music.

"THE DRUG TERROR." Hippodrome. Photoplay showing evils of the secret traffic in habit-forming drugs.

"CALL OF THE WOODS." Mannion Park. Heart-interest drama, presented by Stanley Stock Company. Vaudeville specialties between the acts. Band concerts and cabaret performance in park every evening.

VAUDEVILLE, cabaret and moving pictures. Priester's Park. Cottage restaurant open. Sunday afternoon, baseball game between the Moose team and a selected nine in the motordrome arena. The German Evangelical St. Luke's Church held its annual summer festival in Priester's Park yesterday.

MUSICAL COMEDY. Shenandoah. Company includes Hal Skelley, Don (Billiken) Barclay, Eldrie Gilmore, Totsie marks, Jack Patton and others.

MOVING PICTURES. Juniata. All first-run films and kept up to a high standard.

"THE MASTER MIND." New Grand Central. Thrilling photoplay by Daniel H. Carter. Musical numbers.

"Marie Antoinette," a play founded on the life of the luckless wife of Louis XVI of France, by Desider Szymory, a young Hungarian dramatist, is said to have scored a big success in Vienna. The big "novelty" of its story shows Louis and Marie Antoinette playing like two children with a small model of a guillotine, in their park at Versailles, while a mob of the Revolution is shouting threats outside the gates. The last scene presents Marie Antoinette in her cell awaiting execution.

Charles Frohman is arranging for a revival of "Diplomacy" in London next fall. William Gillette will play the role of Henry Beauclerc, Blanche Bates that of the Countess Zicka, and Marie Doro that of Dora.

Holbrook Blinn, director of the Princess Theater in New York City, announces his discovery that the American playgoing public does not care for "horror" plays. His policy next season, he declares, will be the presentation of "plays of happiness."

Oliver Morosco has bought the American rights of the latest Viennese musical success, "Der Tolle Therese" ("The Madcap Therese"), which he will produce in this country next fall. Its score is based on an original manuscript by Johann Strauss, adapted to modern requirements. The music is described as "wonderful."

Pauline Frederick will be starred by A. H. Woods next season in the title role of "Innocent," a new play adapted from the Hungarian of Arpad Pasztor. Her most recent hit was as Potiphar's wife in "Joseph and His Brethren"—quite a contrast to her new venture as now announced.

Elsie Janus has scored a big personal success in "The Passing Show" at the Palace Theater in London.

"LE TALION" BY BARON ROTHSCHILD IS DISAPPOINTING

Young Millionaire Dramatist's New Play Fails to Interest Parisian Public.

"Le Talion," a new play by Baron Henri de Rothschild, who devotes his spare time to the writing of drama, recently was produced at the Marigny Theater in Paris, but seems to have proved something of a disappointment.

The two leading roles are those of Raymond, a painter, and Irene, an actress, who have been married for several years and who seem to love one another devotedly. Also are they deeply attached to their little daughter, Charlotte.

Raymond, who cherishes a horror of the stage, leaves home, telling his wife that he is going to a house in the country where he has a commission to paint a ceiling. Little Charlotte suddenly is taken ill. Irene telegraphs to Raymond to return at once. The telegram does not reach him, for the simple reason that he is holidaying somewhere else in the company of a beautiful model.

When he returns there is a stormy scene with Irene, who, to revenge herself, tells him that she has been untrue to him since the very day of their wedding. She even hints that Charlotte is not his daughter, and the shock of this announcement slightly unbalances Raymond's mind.

Irene herself lives up to her new "reputation" by engaging in an "affair" with a tempter who presents her with a costly pearl necklace. Then, wearying of her assumed role of a faithless wife, she tells Raymond the truth that she always has been loyal to him, whereupon a reconciliation follows and the play ends happily.

The thin quality of the plot's fabric and the weak drawing of the play's characters are unfavorably commented upon by the Parisian critics.

With his production of Justin Huntley's McCarthy's "Charlemagne" during the second week of his Chicago engagement, E. H. Sothern announces that this play, together with "Lord Dundreary" and "If I Were King," will constitute his repertoire until he retires from the stage at the close of next season. He is 54 years old, has been on the stage since 1879, and, though still vigorous, declares that his weariness of life without any social phases, together with the fact of the ill health of his wife, Julia Marlowe, has led to his determination upon retirement.

Annie Russell has leased the Little Theater in Philadelphia, and will establish there the Annie Russell Comedy Company for the presentation of cleverly entertaining plays calculated to gain popular favor.

At the National Theater in Washington, on Oct. 12 next, Otis Skinner will appear as the Charles Frohman star of John Galsworthy's latest play, "The Mob," which pleads for universal peace, the abolishment of armies and the substitution of reason for physical force.

Richard Bennett next season will star jointly with Edith Wynne Matthison in Charles Rann Kennedy's "The Idol Breaker" and Brieux's "Maternity" and "Damaged Goods." They will open their season at the Fulton Theater in New York early next fall.

William Collier is now a musical comedy star under Cohan & Harris' management in "Forward March!" the book and lyrics by Winchell Smith, John Golden and Frank Craven, the music by John Golden. The piece will receive a New York presentation next fall, following this spring's tour of other American cities.

"THE MIRACLE" IS TO BE PRODUCED IN NEW YORK CITY

Great Wordless Mystery Spectacle Will Be Presented in Madison Square Garden.

"The Miracle," Max Reinhardt's great production of Karl Vollmoeller's wordless mystery spectacle, which has scored such a tremendous success in London and on the Continent, is to be produced in Madison Square Garden, New York, its American engagement beginning the first week in December.

The special music for this impressive production was composed by Engelbert Humperdinck, composer of "Hansel and Gretel" and "Koenigskinder," the two fairy operas that have been so brilliantly presented at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York. Over 2000 persons will take part in the performance of "The Miracle," which will be under the personal direction of Dr. Vollmoeller, the author. A distinguished group of New York women and men united to bring the spectacle to this country.

It will be necessary for the interior of Madison Square Garden to be transformed into the majestic nave of a Gothic cathedral for this production. The entire action of the great spectacle takes place in the center of the edifice. No curtain is used. But by an arrangement of lighting devised by himself, Max Reinhardt effects the eight necessary changes of scene, among these scenes being a soldiers' camp in winter and the banquet hall of a medieval robber baron.

The original cast of principals, headed by Maria Carmi, and the original costumes and mechanical production, costing $100,000, will be brought over for the New York engagement.

Church Closed by Flies.

LONDON, May 30.—St. Mark's Church, Tunbridge Wells, has been reopened after having been closed for a week for the purpose of fumigation to rid it of a plague of flies. "The insects," a member of the congregation "paid special attention to those who had but little hair to protect their heads, and their activity always seemed greatest at the most solemn moments.

"THE HOLY CITY" BIBLICAL DRAMA ON LONDON STAGE

It Tells Story of the Resurrection and Is Perilously Daring.

It seems to be agreed that the London success of Louis N. Parker's Biblical drama, "Joseph and His Brethren," is responsible for "The Holy City," a too-daring drama of the Resurrection, written by Thomas W. Broadhurst and now being presented on the stage of the Comedy Theater to English audiences who are not sure that the production should receive their approval.

As in "Ben Hur," which, however, possesses a more sincere majesty and reverential atmosphere, the figure of the Savior is not visually shown in the play's action. The story of the crucifixion is told, but, necessarily, its actual scenes are described by spectators in view on the stage. Mary Magdalen is made the leading character, the first act showing her as a "scarlet woman," surrounded by boon companions. Second in dramatic importance is Barabbas whom Playwright Broadhurst sees fit to present as Mary Magdalen's would-be lover, and who offers to marry her, but is laughed to scorn by the Magdalen, who prefers her lawless freedom. Barabbas turns from her in disgust, the so-called "love interest" of the drama here reaching its climax. Among the characters introduced are the sisters, Mary and Martha; their brother, Lazarus; Zacharias, Caiaphas, the high priest; Judas, Peter, Pilate and many others. The play's scenes include the abode of Mary Magdalen, the home of Mary and Martha, the portico of the Hall of Judgment in Pilate's palace, and the tomb of Christ, the play's action ending with the joy of the faithful when the resurrection is announced.

Miss Nancy Price is cast as Mary Magdalen, but it is said that the part does not fully suit her, although it is conceded that she plays it earnestly and gives it one or two moments of genuine impressiveness. The role of Barabbas is entrusted to Mr. C. M. Hallard, by whom it is said to be played with strength and authority.

JEAN GILBERT'S NEW MUSICAL PLAY A HI

All Berlin Said to Be Hummin Song From "When the Spring Comes."

A new musical comedy by Je Gilbert, entitled "Wenn der Fru Kommt" ("When the Spring Comes" has been produced in the Thal Theater in Berlin and is credited wi having scored a tremendous succe

The play's plot concerns a you Count, with the rank of Lieutena in the German Army, who is trying marry a rich girl in order to pay debts. It so happens that he loves pretty maiden of lowly birth, and, order that the wealthy young wom whom he is wooing shall not learn this, he leads a double life, visitin the girl whom he loves in the chara ter of a young railway official.

There is much confusion and com plication as a result. Finally the comes a complete exposure of t young nobleman's duplicity. Th suddenly, matters so shape them selves that he finds he can marry t lowly maiden whom he loves, a thus, with a touch of pretty sentime at the close, the play's last curta falls.

The musical hit of the piece is plaintive folksong sung by the pea ant-girl sweetheart, which all Berli now is said to be whistling or sin ing. Jean Kren, George Okonkowsk and Alfred Schoenfeld, in a triple all ance, wrote the book of the play.

Had Lung Trouble and Expected to Die

The many recoveries brought about by Eckman's Alterative are attracting wide attention. Read about this case:—

33 B St., Keyser, W. Va.

"Gentlemen:—I was taken sick in November, 1908. I grew steadily worse. Had two consultations. The verdict was the fever had affected my lungs and that my case was hopeless; only gave me two months to live. My physician had tried most all kinds of treatment and none did me any good, so he asked my husband if he objected to him trying a proprietary medicine. I began your Alterative. I was in bed from November 30, 1908, until February 25, 1909, and was thought dying several times. Today I am healthier and stronger than ever." (Abbreviated).

Edison's Diamond-Disc Phonograph

A Musical Instrument of the Highest Type

MUSIC lovers do not need to be told of the limitations and imperfections of the various kinds of talking machines and sound-reproducing devices. You have been tolerant of them because you have realized that even though imperfectly done, the reproduction of a great voice or a great orchestra contributes at least a little to the public's knowledge and appreciation of music.

The Edison Diamond-Disc reproduces the quality of the original music. The virtuoso's art is not distorted. In solo work every note is reproduced with a fidelity to the human quality of the voice that leaves little to differentiate it from its original. In the reproduction of violin and 'cello solos every trill and run is brought out with delicacy, and the technique of the player is given back so perfectly that eminent violinists have freely approved of the Edison Disc in violin instruction In compositions played by a full band or orchestra each instrument is clearly heard, perfectly blended with and balanced against all other instruments Whether it is a harp, a piano, a cornet, a piccolo, or some other instrument, there is such a close approximation to the original that those who listen to their favorite instrument are delighted.

Edison Diamond-Disc from $60 to $450.

All interested in having an abundance of music in the home are urged to accept Mr. Edison's personal invitation to hear this instrument. To each one who accepts there is a pleasure beyond his fondest expectation awaiting you at our parlors.

195 OF THE 200 AT CONFERENCE OF CITIES ARE WOMEN

One Feminine Attendant Complains Several Pageant Delegates Went to a Brewery.

OPPOSE PERMANENT STAGE

Philadelphian Declares Forest Park Structure Cannot Withstand Elements for 3 Years.

The second meeting of the conference of cities, to which the envoys of other cities were invited to offer suggestions for municipal improvements, was held yesterday morning in the Wednesday Club, Taylor avenue and Westminster place. About 200 persons attended. Of that number all except five were women.

The women complained that although there were many men envoys from other cities they were not attending the conferences. One woman said she understood that several had gone to inspect a brewery.

The program, yesterday, was devoted to municipal festivals, the speakers being Miss Charlotte Rumbold of St. Louis, Hamlin Garland of Chicago, Henry Bruere of New York and Charles L. Burrill of Boston.

Miss Charlotte Rumbold Speaks.

Miss Rumbold, secretary of the Public Recreation Commission, talked on municipal recreation. She told of the success of playgrounds in St. Louis and of the efforts of the St. Louis commission to arouse a greater democratic interest in all features of civic improvement work. She said the tendency of men and women was to leave all such matters to officials and that they did not take the personal interest they should take.

Garland was enthusiastic in his praise of the Pageant and urged that it should be extended to the smaller towns of the country.

He said that every town should have a municipal stage on which dramas depicting the history of the town, State and country, with children and parents as actors, could be given. The children, he said, should be taught history in this practical way. Productions of this character would more quickly teach the children of immigrants the theories and history of the Government, he said.

Explains New York's Methods.

Bruere described briefly the system of government in New York City, discussing "Humanizing City Government." He told of the efforts to interest all classes of citizens in the details of all plans for the betterment of the city.

Burrill said that Boston had felt for many years that it was the leader in entertainments similar to the Pageant, having celebrated many holidays in that manner. He congratulated St. Louis on the success of the Pageant and predicted that it would lead to the giving of future entertainments of the kind.

William Chauncy Langdon of New York, who was to have spoken on "The Pageant and the People," was not present.

Several envoys talked for a few minutes after the close of the regular program. George D. Porter, director in the Department of Public Safety in Philadelphia, advised against the plan urged by John H. Gundlach and others, who have been active in promoting the Pageant, to preserve the stage in Forest Park for three years.

Tells of Philadelphia Failure.

Porter said that Philadelphia once had preserved a building erected for a special entertainment and that it had been found to be a "whtie elephant." He said the stage in Forest Park would rot quickly and that if a permanent stage was wanted it should be built of steel and concrete.

Arthur E. Bostwick will preside at today's session, which opens at 3 p. m. The general topic will be "Municipal Music and the Pageant."

The speakers will be Thomas Wood Stevens, Frederick S. Converse, Arthur Farwell, Peter W. Dykema and J. E. O. Pridmore.

DEAR MAX: Let's begin right by getting the diamond engagement ring at Loftis Bros. & Co., The National Credit Jewelers, 2d floor, 308 N. Sixth st. Open every evening.

28 IN COURT HAVE MINDS OF 11-YEAR-OLD

Tests Applied to Chicago Women Show Their Average Mental Age Is Between 7 1-2 and 11.

CHICAGO, May 30.—Tests by the psychological laboratory of the Chicago Municipal Court, applied to 28 persons last week, demonstrated that none of them was more than 11 years old mentally and that the average was between 7½ and 11 years. The report was made by Miss Mary Campbell, assistant psychologist.

"There was nothing in the appearance of these women to indicate their mental status," said Judge Goodnow. "Moral delinquency brought them into court and the laboratory has shown the cause of their delinquency. It is nonsensical to fine such persons and free them to offend again. They should be placed in an institute for at least a year and given proper care and training."

Judge Goodnow said he would ask the Legislature to provide such an institution.

WIRELESS PROVES VALUE IN SAVING PERSONS AT SEA

Accident to Empress of Ireland Emphasizes Its Help in Quickly Calling Aid.

LIST OF RESCUED LONG

Titanic Alone Surpasses Disaster to Empress in Number of Lives Lost.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 30.—Although the Empress of Ireland sank so quickly off Father Point, in the St. Lawrence River, that rescue work was hampered, the disaster has served to emphasize the important part that the wireless telegraph is playing in the work of saving life at sea.

Reports agree that the Empress went down in 14 minutes after she was struck, yet in that brief interval, her wireless was able to communicate with the shore and get rescue ships under way. Without the wireless it is believed that many of those who were saved would have perished.

Where Wireless Has Helped.

Here are some of the disasters in which the wireless has figured since 1909:

Jan. 23, 1909—Republic sank after a collision with the Florida off Nantucket. Seven hundred lives saved by the Baltic, summoned by wireless. Six were killed in the collision.

June 12, 1909—Slavonia struck the rocks off Flores Island. Passengers and crew rescued by the Prinzess Irene and Batavia, summoned by wireless.

Aug. 27, 1909—Ohio struck the rocks off Steep Point, Alaska, and foundered. Two hundred passengers and crew were rescued by the Humboldt and the Rupert, summoned by wireless. Five lives were lost.

Feb. 6, 1910—S. S. Kentucky sprang a leak off Hatteras. All on board were rescued by the Alamo, summoned by wireless.

April 14, 1912—Titanic collided with an iceberg and sank four hours later. Seven hundred and three survivors were rescued by the Carpathia, summoned by wireless. One thousand five hundred and three lives were lost.

Oct. 2, 1912—Banes went down, 40 miles off Hatteras. Navy collier Arethusa, summoned by wireless, rescued the entire crew.

Nov. 2, 1912—Norvega collided with the Glenlui, 95 miles off Hatteras. The Onondaga and the battleship Minnesota, summoned by wireless, took off the crews and afterward succeeded in towing both ships to Norfolk.

Jan. 7, 1913—Cheslake went ashore off Vananda, north of Vancouver, B. C. Four lost. All others on board rescued by the Camoran, summoned by wireless.

March 10, 1913—Lugano wrecked off Ajax Reef. Three lives were lost. The survivors were rescued by wireless.

May 15, 1913—Nippon wrecked in typhoon on the coast of Luzon, Philippine Islands; passengers and crew were rescued by wireless.

June 9, 1913—Olinda wrecked on Frying Shoals, off Virginia Capes; all hands were rescued by U. S. S. Nashville, summoned by wireless.

June 11, 1913—Yukon sank after striking reef on Sannak Island, B. C.; crew and passengers taken off my revenue cutter Tahoma, summoned by wireless.

Sept. 1, 1913—Galaico abandoned afire in Bay of Biscay; all hands saved by wireless call for help.

Sept. 27, 1913—Templemore abandoned on fire in mid-Atlantic; all hands saved by the Arcadia, summoned by wireless.

Oct. 19, 1913—Volturno abandoned on fire in mid-Atlantic; 331 lives lost; 521 saved by the Carmania, summoned by wireless.

Jan. 13, 1914—Cobequid wrecked on the rocks near Halifax, N. S.; all hands saved by the use of wireless.

Jan. 26, 1914—Princes Sophia wrecked on Mountain Point, B. C.; all hands saved by the Al-ki, summoned by wireless.

Other Great Disasters.

The loss of life on the Empress of Ireland has been approached or exceeded by only four marine disasters in the last century. These were the loss of the Rhone, Wye and other vessels at St. Thomas in the great hurricane of October 29, 1867, when 1000 persons perished; the burning of the excursion boat General Slocum in the East River, New York, on June 15, 1904, with an approximated loss of 1000 lives; that most terrible of all marine disasters of modern times, the loss of the Titanic, April 14, 1912, and the loss of the Kickemaru off the Japanese coast, Sept. 28, 1912, with a loss of 1000 lives.

Other disasters that approximated in loss of life the fatality list of the Empress of Ireland were the Princess Alice, sunk in collision in the Thames River Sept. 3, 1878, with a loss of 700; the Ertogrul, foundered off the Japanese coast Sept. 19, 1890, loss 540; the Utopia, sunk off Gibraltar in collision March 17, 1871, with a loss of 574,; the Norge, stranded off Rockall reef June 25, 1894, with a loss of 600; La Bourgogne, lost in collision in the North Atlantic July 4, 1898, with a loss of 571; the Japanese battleship Mikasa, blown up Sept. 12, 1905, with a loss of 599.

Here Is One of the Greatest Offerings of the Entire Season

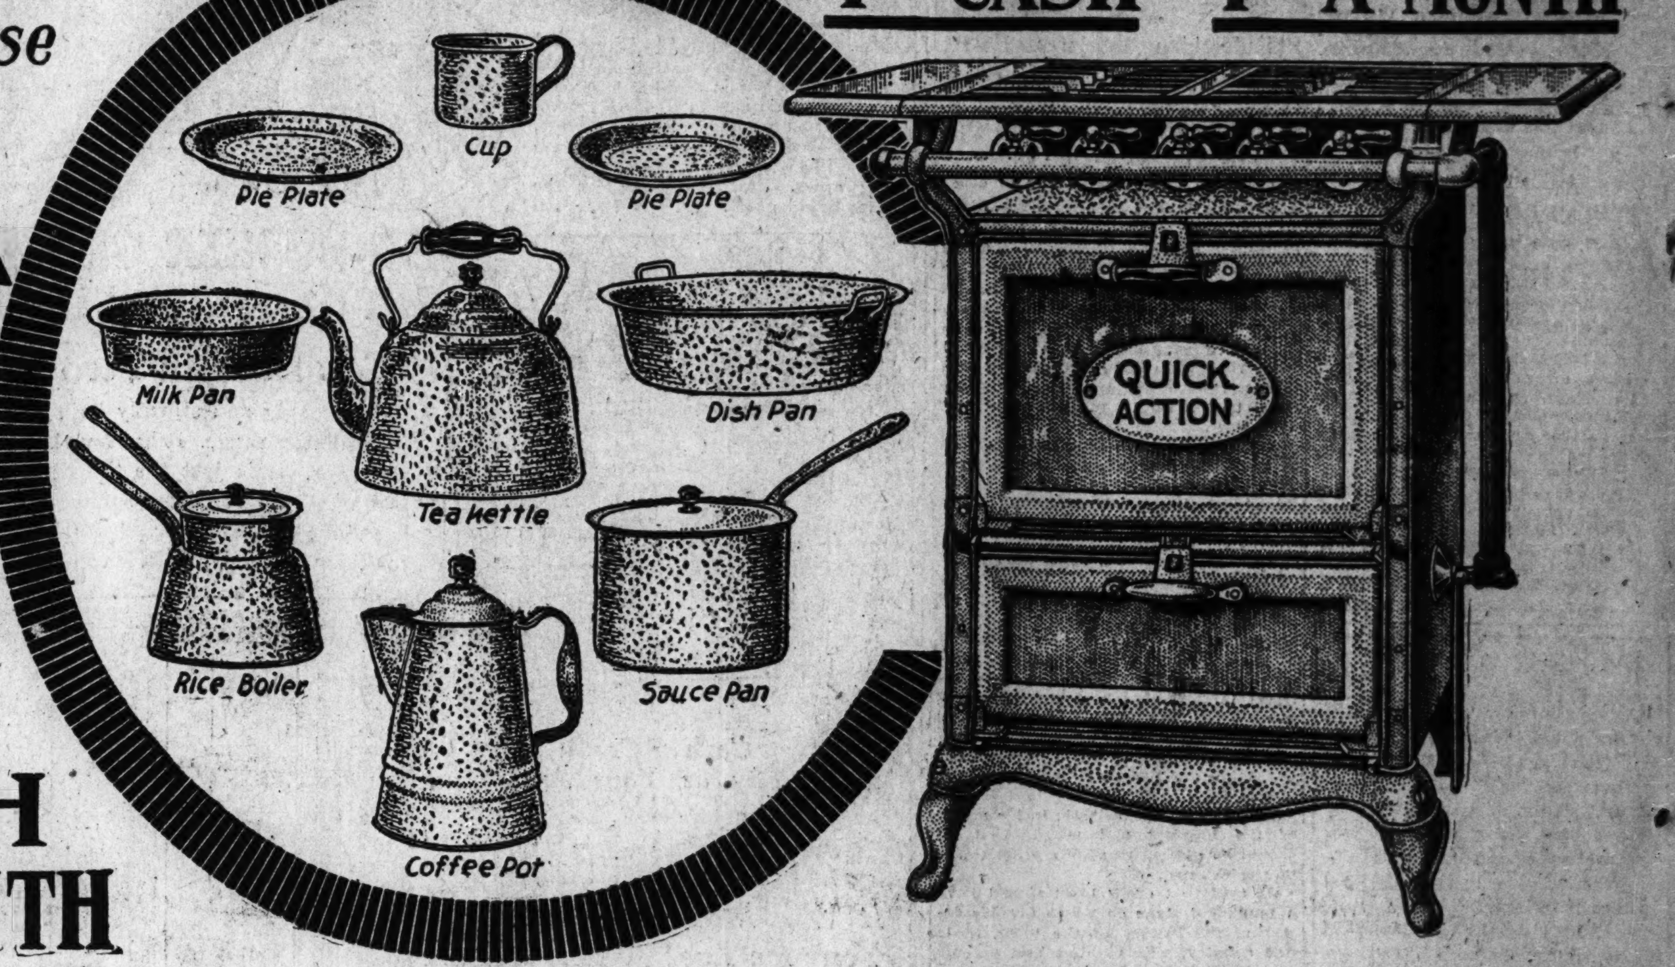
This High-Grade Gas-Range

Together With These

9 PIECES —OF— Grey Enameled Ware As Here Illustrated

$16.75

$1.00 CASH
$1.00 A MONTH



$1.00 CASH - $1.00 A MONTH

You'll Enjoy This Gas Range

Think of its advantages—no coal to carry in—no ashes to carry out—no hot kitchen—no smoke, soot or grime—just a steady flame where you want it and as long as you want it—perfect cooking and baking every time—very convenient and decidedly economical.

It's Our "Quick Action" Gas Range

This is a splendid Gas Range—built of polished blue steel—nicely nickel trimmed—set up from the floor on sanitary base—has four large burners and simmering burner at top—16-inch oven and broiler—and made with extension top.

Why It Is Superior to Others

Our "Quick Action" Gas Range possesses many advantages, among which we briefly mention the following—it burns more air and requires less gas than many others—burns with a hot, blue flame—burners are instantly removable—has galvanized drip pan under burners—separate cock to light the oven burners—has mica sight at side through which the flame can be seen—body of gas range is of blue steel—ovens are quadruple lined, holding the heat intact—oven bottom in cast iron and will last a lifetime—oven doors fitted with springs holding them in position when closed.

Set of Gray Enameled Ware

With each gas range sold this week we include nine large and useful pieces of high-grade Gray Enameled Ware—as per the following list:

1—4-quart Teakettle—
1—4-pint Coffee Pot—
1—2-pint Rice Boiler—
1—2-quart Saucepan—
1—14-quart Dishpan—
1—2-quart Pudding Dish—
1—½-pint Cup—
2—10-inch Pie Plates—

Our Price—$16.75

Think what this offer means—a splendid Gas Range, like cut, together with the 9-piece set of enameled ware—all for $16.75—positively the lowest price we have ever named for so attractive an outfit—and the terms of payment are equally pleasing—$1.00 cash—$1.00 a month.

Open an Account With Us

This is the best opportunity that has been offered you this season to secure a dependable Gas Range and set of cooking utensils—for only $1.00 cash—and is well worth your immediate attention. Why not open an account with us tomorrow and share in this exceptional offering!

Play

BY CLARK M'ADAMS.

WHAT most strikes me about the Pageant is the great pleasure gotten out of it by the participants. As I recall the anticipations of Mr. MacKaye and others, it was expected that this would be the case. No doubt the audience is thrilled and delighted, but the people on the great stage express in a thousand ways the perfect joy of children at play. I am much of the time so far away as not to be sure that they are not children; but I am assured that such is not the case, and that in the Pageant, as in the old Latin proverb, an old man is twice a boy.

If this is so, the Pageant is a discovery; for trite as these sayings come to be, it is really true that we have forgotten how to play. One has but to read the history of May day or almost any other fete day that has been handed down to us by a playful ancestry to realize that this is so. We have somehow disseminated the impression that there is something effeminate about play, which is most unfortunate. Certainly it did not occur to anyone watching the Pageant that these people were doing anything that even a very masculine man might not enjoy doing. It was a man's work to greet the sunrise and make announcements from the top of the mound, goodness knows. Very few poker players who have grown husky saying "That's good" through all hours of the night could have performed that part with any credit to their sex. It took a man, too, to be Ferdinand de Soto, and have the armorial bearing befitting one discovering so important a river as the Mississippi. Whether Col. Roosevelt discovered the River of Doubt or not, we may be sure that he did not dignify his calling as an explorer in any such way as our own De Soto in the Pageant is doing. Man that he is, the Colonel no doubt made some effeminate exclamation such as "Here she is, boys!" or "Eureka! I have found it!" and that in a very squeaky voice.

IT IS very fine play—the Pageant—and it bears out what has been a long time suspected, that the best game is that at which the most people play. If there were 70,000 people in the cast, there would be ten times the fun in the Pageant that there is with 7000 people in it. I have always thought that baseball is for this reason probably enjoying in our own day the heyday of its popularity. It is a game which a few people play while a great many people look on. That is the reverse of what all play should be. Golf, I will venture to say, will outlive baseball even in this country, and eventually will surpass it. One may see an indication of what golf means to a community on the public golf course at Forest Park. There hundreds of people play every day, though the course is less than a year old. It will not be long until thousands of people will play there on Saturdays and Sundays. This has been true in every other city where golf has been made free to the people. There are some former baseball fans playing golf at Forest Park. They have hit upon the great truth that to play themselves does them more good than to sit and watch someone else play. This thing of watching someone else play is pretty dull sport. There is a period in the development of any country when it goes for fun, but it never lasts. The English can turn out in great numbers for an occasional cricket match, but only once in a while. They would rather play golf as a regular thing. So, too, shall we in due time and season. The Pageant approximates what is coming. We shall all play before we get done with it. We need to, and we want to. It is safe to say that if we have another Pageant next year the volunteers for the cast will be four or five times as numerous as they were this year. It had not quite struck the community that it would be such fun to gambol on that big stage. One can see it now, but seeing it before the spectacle was presented was a much different thing. That the cast was made up at all the first time is a fine testimonial to the spirit of play in St. Louis. Where did they come from—all those people—and what fine capacity for play they must have.

THAT one is ever too old to play has been pretty well disproven by this time. Look at Mr. Rockefeller nursing his brassie shots on his private golf course, while all the other kings of finance, who could not play, sleep in their graves! Mr. Rockefeller is not too old to play. If he had all the rest of the philosophy of life as well in hand as he has this little bit of it, he would not be such a doubtful favorite with the world today, and the Rev. Bouck White would not march into his church on Sunday morning and try to break up the preaching.

It has been said that golf is an old man's game. If that is so—and it isn't—what of the Pageant? Surely one could never be too old to take part in the Pageant. Indeed, nothing would delight us more than to see a chorus of men and women 100 years old do some kind of a refined dance upon that great stage. It would be good for all of us alike. At 40, as I am, I envied the people who did hop and skip around on the stage. "I could do that," I said, as doubtless tens of thousands of other people did, too. We could all do it, and it would be such fun—such fun. The lark in the park itself, with a big crowd, is fun, but they are rare, those crowds. They somehow only go with expositions, or some such infrequent affairs. They are almost unknown for the purposes of casual play. I had not seen such a crowd in the park since the World's Fair, and only once, when Curtiss was to fly in his aeroplane and did not, have I seen anything like so many people in the park at one time as one could see in any direction one turned the eyes last week.

It will teach us that we can play to see the Pageant. Don't miss it. Don't let anyone tell you that you can afford to miss it. You can't.

GOOD STORIES HEARD IN THE NATIONAL CAPITOL

WASHINGTON, May 30.

DURING the discussion in Congress, following the announcement of the cities that would be made regional bank centers, Representative Howard of Atlanta and Representative Dupre of New Orleans said some very mean things about each other's states.

Howard, in closing his remarks, said: "The Federal Reserve Board visited New Orleans and it visited Atlanta and they saw the difference between the dreamy-eyed people of New Orleans and the bright-eyed, thrifty business men of Atlanta. That settled the question."

"When it comes to a matter of eyes," snapped Dupre, "I am willing to submit mine against the gentleman's."

"Oh," replied Howard sweetly, "I know the gentleman possesses those fathomless, dreamy eyes that will attract most anyone who takes much stock in eyes and I hope the gentleman will some day get close enough to some beautiful Louisiana girl that she may look into those eyes and become enamored thereby and that he may take her unto himself."

"Will the gentleman yield," shouted Minority Leader Mann. Howard yielded and Mann said: "The gentleman has enumerated a good many valuable things at Atlanta, but he has omitted one. The gentleman did not enumerate himself."

Heflin Scored Strong Point on Currency Bank Location

TOM HEFLIN, who made numerous speeches for Oscar Underwood during the recent senatorial campaign in Alabama, tells how near he came to being "stumped" by a question asked him during one of them.

The issue in the fight had been Hobson's continued absence from Washington, and Underwood's slogan was "The Man on the Job."

When Atlanta got a regional bank and Birmingham did not, the Hobson followers paraded with a banner which said:

"Hoke Smith, two years on the job, got a bank for Atlanta. Oscar Underwood, 20 years on the job, got nothing for Birmingham. How about it?"

When Heflin arose that night to speak a Hobson supporter bawled at him to know why "Awskar" didn't get Birmingham the bank.

"I hoped you would ask me that question," said Heflin. "By gosh, I wanted to be asked that very thing," he retorted as he racked his brain for an answer. "Here are the facts," and then he paused impressively, still trying to think of some way to answer the question. Then a bright light appeared and he roared back:

"President Wilson practiced law in Atlanta when he was a young man. Mrs. Wilson was a Georgia girl. He courted her in Georgia. He married her in Georgia. His children were born in Georgia, and now one of them is engaged to be married to the Secretary of the Treasury, who fixed those banks, and he was born within a stone's throw of Atlanta. How in the devil could you beat that combination?"

It went strong with the audience.

Those fussy fault finders appear to believe that the River of Doubt rises in No Man's Land, flows west across the State of Imagination and empties through the Ananias Delta into the Gulf of Audacity.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Ready-to-Take Tonic-Laxative

Peruna is a ready-to-take tonic and laxative.

There are people who believe medicines can be more uniformly put together at a scientific laboratory where every facility is at hand for compounding ready-to-take remedies. An offhand prescription and hasty preparation of the prescription ought not and probably does not give the same uniform result that a deliberate, elaborate, costly apparatus for doing the same work could give.

Peruna is a ready-to-take laxative tonic, made by doctors who know how, with plenty of means at their command. Everything has been done to make it a reliable, accurate, efficient and up-to-date family medicine.—ADV.

Throw Away Your Eye-Glasses

A Free Prescription

You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye-strain or other eye-weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing, say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Optona. Fill a two-ounce bottle with warm water, drop in one Optona tablet and allow to dissolve. With this liquid, bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes on time.—ADV.

MERCHANTS TAKE NOTICE.

We have moved our main office from Kansas City to St. Louis and are now located in the Drygoodsman Bldg., 1627 Washington av. Last year we turned merchandise into $100,000 cash for merchant clients. This year we will put over a million dollars into merchants' pockets. Years of right methods, fair dealing and highest efficiency are the reasons for our great success.

THE CANNONBALL SPECIAL SALES CO. are proud of their record. We are proud, too, of the co-operation and thorough appreciation of our many merchant clients. We have moved to St. Louis for a more central location and a larger field of operation. Mr. W. S. Paul, president, and his large force of expert salesmen are at your disposal. If you are feeling the effects of business depression and slack trade, write us and we will outline to you a plan to give your business new life and quickly turn your merchandise into cash. We at the same time help you collect your outstanding accounts. Every business needs new treatment occasionally. You of course want proper methods and lasting results, and you want a DEPENDABLE firm to conduct your cash getting sale. If you do not know us already, investigate—ask us for references from many who have had our services. When you know who we are you will want us and we want to number you among our patrons. When you come to St. Louis make our office your headquarters.

Twenty big sales going on this week. We solicit correspondence from merchants in the Central, South and Western States.

100 MEMBERS OF CITY CLUB TO OPEN FIGHT FOR CHARTER

Campaign Committee Will Hold Meeting to Map Out Plans to Show Merits to Voters.

WILL SPEAK EVERY DAY

Special Registration Will Be Arranged for June 16 for Voters in 2 Elections.

The campaign for the adoption of the proposed new city charter will be started at the City Club tomorrow with a meeting of the New Charter Campaign Committee comprised of more than 100 citizens representing all the civic, improvement, district and business organizations in St. Louis.

Mayor Kiel signed the charter special election bill late Friday, after it had been signed by President Lararus of the City Council and Speaker Gazzolo of the House of Delegates. With the election June 30 assured by this bill, the campaign committee will lose no time in its work of organization to popularize the charter.

The personnel of the campaign committee will not be announced until the meeting tomorrow. The temporary committee, of which Frank P. Crunden is chairman and Roger Baldwin secretary, has not fully determined whether it will recommend a chairman, secretary and treasurer of the permanent committee.

The presidents and secretaries of all the organizations that have indorsed the new charter will be members of the campaign committee. There will be representatives of several of the strongest labor organizations on the committee, as well as of the four political parties. The direct legislation champions will be represented by several of their most influential men.

After the committee organizes tomorrow it will hold daily meetings throughout the campaign. Meetings probably will be held in every voting precinct of the city and speeches in explanation of the charter will be made.

The voluntary committee that has been organizing for the campaign has found sentiment strongly in favor of the new charter.

The Board of Election Commissioners is arranging for a special registration, June 16. The registration books will be opened in every precinct in the city and all voters who have moved since last election, or have become eligible to vote since that time, will have an opportunity to register for both the charter election and the State primary to be held Aug. 4.

FLOODS ARE CAUSING HEAVY TEXAS LOSSES

Fifteen Inches of Rain During May Has Sent Many Streams Out of Banks.

DALLAS, Tex., May 30.—Continued rain today over a large part of Texas is causing grave concern. In many places the rainfall is said to have been unprecedented.

Flood conditions prevail in South Texas, with a considerable area inundated and anxiety is felt over the situation as the water in the upper reaches of the Nueces, Brazos and Colorado rivers moved toward the gulf.

Railroads have suffered heavily. In Houston street car traffic has been seriously interrupted, the ship canal traversing the city is bank full and in the surrounding country roads and bridges have been heavily damaged. More than 15 inches of rain has been recorded at the Houston Government weather office during May.

NEW WEST VIRGINIA MINE STRIKE ORDERED

About 12,000 Will Quit Work Monday in Dispute Over Collection of Dues.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., May 30.—An official call for a strike of coal miners along the Kanawha River, Paint and Cabin creeks and Coal River, was signed today, the strike to be effective Monday. About 12,000 men are involved. The call was signed by Thomas Haggerty, member of the International Board of United Mine Workers; President Thomas Cairns of District 17, and other district officials.

Heads of all unions in the district were notified that all union men in and about the mines must cease work except those necessary to keep the mines in working order.

The check-off, a system by which all union dues are paid through the offices of the operators, is the contention between the officers and the miners.

SCHOOL CLOSINGS CLASH

Western Military Academy and Monticello Seminary End Terms Tuesday.

The commencement exercises of the Western Military Academy and Monticello Seminary will be held Tuesday, June 9.

Heretofore the girls' seminary has held its commencement on Tuesday and the military academy on the day following so that friends of both schools could go to both places.

Col. A. M. Jackson of the military academy said that the changing of the academy commencement from Wednesday to Tuesday this year was unintentionally made without thought of the Monticello graduation day.

A class of 50 will be graduated at the military academy and the senior class will render a dramatization of James Fenimore Cooper's "Last of the Mohicans."

GOV. DUNNE TO OPPOSE SULLIVAN FOR SENATOR

Gives Reasons for Supporting Down-State Man for Nomination.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 30.—Gov. Dunne gave the first interview he has granted concerning the Democratic senatorial contest in which he will support a down-State candidate, with the co-operation of Secretary of State Bryan, Mayor Harrison of Chicago and Senator Lewis.

"There are many reasons," said the Governor, "why the candidate to be nominated by the Democratic party for Senator, in the first popular election of a Senator to be held in Illinois, should be a down-State man.

"At present the Governor, the Lieutenant-Governor, the Speaker of the House, the State Auditor and our Democratic Senator are from Chicago. There is no possible doubt that there are Democrats of ability and merit outside of the great city, who could be nominated for the second senatorship, and I am convinced that, in justice to our stanch country supporters and for the sake of building a party that will endure, our nominee should come from down-State. This opinion is shared by Mr. Bryan, Mr. Harrison, Senator Lewis and many other Democrats who have the interest of the party at heart. We are committed to no individual."

SHAW'S GARDEN SHOWING PAGEANT FLOWERS TODAY

Special Display of Fleur-de-Lis Arranged for St. Louisans and City's Guests.

FROM 2 P. M. TILL SUNSET

All Varieties of Iris and Many Other Brilliantly Colored Blooms Can Be Seen.

The Missouri Botanical Garden today has on display the fleur-de-lis—"the flower of St. Louis." Dr. George T. Moore, director of the garden, arranged for a display of this beautiful and historic flower, which appears in many conventional forms in the decorative designs of the Pageant and on the flag of St. Louis. The garden will be open today from 2 p. m. until sunset, and every week day from sunrise to sunset.

The fleur-de-lis is the flower of St. Louis, as it played an important part in the early history of the city, because of the distinctively French character and influence.

Credited Victory to Flower.

The iris—fleur-de-lis—figures prominently in many of the early writings on so-called medical botany. To the roots, or underground stems, were attributed a host of singular medicinal virtues. The use of the stems for varied ailments was attended by solemn ceremonies, and, in time, a mysterious and even divine influence has given rise to many traditions. The one given here is frequently referred to as offering an explanation of the manner in which the fleur-de-lis became the distinctive bearing of the royal family of France.

In the encounter between the Franks under Clovis and the West Goths under Alaric II, at Voulon, on the banks of the Veielle, in 507, tradition tells us that the Franks at first were unable to cross the river because of the depth of the water. A deer, however, frightened by the clatter of arms, instinctively ran to the river's brink and crossed safely at a shallow place, thereby pointing out a ford to the Franks.

Iris a Historical Flower.

Clovis observed the river iris growing in abundance at the ford and, recalling the marvelous virtues attributed to the plant, saw in the aid of the deer an act of divine intervention, and, as a pledge of his future victory, dismounted and plucked one of the flowered stems. The march against the West Goths was triumphant, and Clovis, deeming the victory to be due to the influence of the iris, caused the flower to be done in gold and velvet as an embellishment for his ornaments. Henceforth he regarded the fleur-de-lis as the symbol of victory.

The Missouri Botanical Garden display for Pageant week includes all varieties, but the largest number are German and Spanish varieties. The German irises are to be found in the greenhouse, while the Spanish varieties make gorgeous the mounds south of the lagoon.

The range of color is greater in the Spanish varieties than in the German, Japanese and others. They also are different in habit, being grown from bulbs planted in the fall, like tulips, narcissuss and other bulbs that flower in the spring. The flowers are not so large as other varieties, nor is the bladelike foliage as large or as luxurious.

New flowers added this week are the tuberose begonias, remarkable for their foliage and large and brilliantly colored flowers, and the gloxinias, with their richly colored trumpet flowers.

FEARING "EVIL SPIRIT," BOY, 16, LEAVES HOME

Mother Asks Police to Look for Son Who Wrote Strange Note.

Mrs. Belle Estes of 607 Brady street, East St. Louis, has requested the police to search for her 16-year-old son, Oscar, who disappeared Wednesday, leaving a note in which he said that he was followed by an evil spirit. The note read:

"Dear Mother: I am leaving home. I have been followed by an evil spirit for the past month. It is worrying me. I would rather die than be followed by the evil spirit. I am going to get rid of the evil spirit. I will write when I do. I will come home when I get rid of that evil spirit. Don't try to find me. Good-by to all. Oscar."

Oscar was a messenger in the Armour Packing Co. office. At the time of his disappearance he wore a blue shirt, blue serge coat, long black trousers and light brown hat. His eyes and hair are brown. Mrs. Estes fears her son's mind was deranged. For a month he had been moody and silent, she said, and would sit at home and hold his face in his hands for minutes at a time. She said he usually stayed in the house at night and read.

LONDON, May 30.—A farm laborer named Botting, while at work at Fletching, received a note from his wife. After reading it he hurried to a neighboring pond, where he arrived just in time to rescue his wife, who was in the water in an exhausted condition, but too late to save their 12

WOMAN KILLED; ANOTHER HURT AS AUTO UPSETS

Man Is Also Slightly Injured When Machine Is Wrecked Near Fulton.

FULTON, Mo., May 30.—Mrs. E. Vice Mudd, 30 years old, a widow of Vandalia, was killed and Mrs. Kelly Quinsenberry, 40 years old, of Mexico, was seriously injured, when an automobile in which they were returning from Fulton was upset on a sharp turn north of here early today. Merritt Roberts, son of a Mexico undertaker, was driving the machine and Ray Gregory, also of Mexico, was a member of the party.

The car struck a ditch and two wheels were broken. Roberts was thrown clear of the machine and escaped unhurt. Gregory and Mrs. Mudd were thrown into a barb wire fence and the machine fell on top of them. Mrs. Quinsenberry sustained a deep gash in her forehead and bruises and cuts on her face and body. Gregory suffered cuts and bruises from contact with the barbs on the wire fence. The body of Mrs. Mudd and the injured people were taken to Mexico.

INSANE, NOT MILLIONAIRE

SOUTH BEND, Ind., May 30.—Otto Buck Churchill, who said he was heir to $30,000,000 and in search for a wife, was sentenced to the insane ward at Michigan City prison in the St. Joseph Circuit Court here.

Churchill was found guilty by a jury of numerous frauds in the sale of western lands. The prisoner after his conviction asserted he had been adopted by Spencer Churchill and is the heir to the latter's estates in Canada. He admitted he has been in prison twice before.

Remarkable Sale of Oil Paintings

By French Academy Students

Size 9½x13,	Size 18x15,	Size 21½x18,
$1.75	$2.75	$3.75

These paintings are the work of the advanced students of the French Academy and this lot includes works by Tibout, Rollet, E. Taivrex, Doubrook, and others.

They are landscape and marine studies painted, not to sell, but to win approbation and commendation from the master.

After having been passed by the teacher, these pictures are traded to art dealers for new canvas (a profitable proposition all around), and are sold by the dealers at ridiculously low figures, yielding a handsome profit at the same time.

There is no way of determining the value of a painting. Millet nearly starved because he could not sell his work at any price, until someone discovered his genius.

These are all originals, every one the work of a real artist, honestly striving to do his best, and they must be seen to be appreciated.

By special arrangement with Brey's Art Store, we are showing an assortment of samples of appropriate frames for these pictures in connection with this sale. (Second Floor.)

Summer Silks

Each year witnesses an increasing demand for silks and prettier silks to choose from.

Whether the demand causes the production of prettier goods, or the production creates the demand is a question; but the result is that silks are prime favorites.

Among the new Summer Silks meeting much favor with our customers are:

Shirting Silks, standard quality; 32 inches wide; white grounds and stripes of various colors. Having a firm body, they launder perfectly and are priced at 69c.

Satin Striped Tub Silks, 32 inches wide; white and colored effects for waists, dresses or shirts, 98c.

Cheney's shower-proof Foulard Silks, 24 inches wide; new Summer designs, 85c.

Silk Poplins, 40 inches wide, in a large color range, for suits and dresses, 98c.

Crepe de Chines, 40 inches wide; white grounds in new colored printed effects for waists, blouses and to combine with the plain white, $1.98.

Chiffon Taffetas, 40 inches wide; with a new, French satin finish. In new blues, greens, wistaria, flesh pink, ivory and black, $2.50.

White Habutai, 36 inches wide; splendid for waists, dresses and underwear, 98c. (Main Floor.)

Mattresses Special

One of our local manufacturers has just closed out his surplus stock to us at a price which enables us to sell them at less than wholesale.

A few of them are slightly soiled at the edges, otherwise they are all perfect goods.

At $4.65 — All Felt Mattresses; large or three-quarter sizes, some with roll edges.

At $3.40—Felt Mattresses with cotton centers, roll edges and splendidly made.

At $2.15—Combination Mattresses, excelsior centers, cotton felt on each side; for large size beds.

At $1.50—Cotton Pads for folding beds or sanitary couches.

At 38c—Moss Pillows, covered with blue and white "A. C. A." ticking; these are very special. (Second Floor.)

The June Bride Is The July Housekeeper

The July housekeeper can find a wealth of pretty and practical things for her home in our housefurnishing sections.

Perhaps you might find them for her. You know how she will treasure such things if they constantly remind her of the loving forethought of some dear, good, "everyday" friend.

For instance there is chinaware. No doubt you have a few treasures of this kind at home.

A teapot from grandma's wedding china or perhaps some teacups or plates that every time they are used bring forth memories worth more than all the world beside.

Here you may choose from the products of such potteries as Theo. Haviland, Royal Victoria, Lanternier, Old Abbey, Guerin and many others, French, Austrian, English or American, in a splendid assortment of pretty patterns—the 100-piece sets ranging in price from $10 to $160.

Then there is cut glass, American cutting is acknowledged best—your mind may be made up to select a bowl, a nappie, vase, water pitcher, bonbon dish, celery or spoon tray, candlesticks, salt and pepper shakers, sugar and creamers. Perhaps you fancy hobnail, chrysanthemum, spinning star or thistle pattern—you will find them all here—priced 50c to $25.00.

Nickel-plated and copper ware, such as chafing dishes, percolators, coffee urns, casseroles, trays, coaster sets, crumb trays, etc., ranging in price from 25c to $15.00. (Main Floor and Basement.)

Sample Parasols $1.59, $1.98, $2.50

These Parasols with silk covers, in a wide variety of patterns and pretty handles, are very much underpriced. (First Floor.)

Mother Asks Police to Look for Son Who Wrote Strange Note.

Mrs. Belle Estes of 607 Brady street, East St. Louis, has requested the police to search for her 16-year-old son, Oscar, who disappeared Wednesday, leaving a note in which he said that he was followed by an evil spirit. The note read:

"Dear Mother: I am leaving home. I have been followed by an evil spirit for the past month. It is worrying me. I would rather die than be followed by the evil spirit. I am going to get rid of the evil spirit. I will write when I do, I will come home when I get rid of that evil spirit. Don't try to find me. Good-by to all. Oscar."

Oscar was a messenger in the Armour Packing Co. office. At the time of his disappearance he wore a blue shirt, blue serge coat, long black trousers and light brown hat. His eyes and hair are brown. Mrs. Estes fears her son's mind was deranged. For a month he had been moody and silent, she said, and would sit at home and hold his face in his hands for minutes at a time. She said he usually stayed in the house at night and read.

Suicide Note Permits Rescue.

LONDON, May 30.—A farm laborer named Botting, while at work at Fletching, received a note from his wife. After reading it he hurried to a neighboring pond, where he arrived just in time to rescue his wife, who was in the water in an exhausted condition, but too late to save their 12

WOMAN KILLED; ANOTHER HURT AS AUTO UPSETS

Man Is Also Slightly Injured When Machine Is Wrecked Near Fulton.

FULTON, Mo., May 30.—Mrs. E. Vice Mudd, 30 years old, a widow of Vandalia, was killed and Mrs. Kelly Quinsenberry, 40 years old, of Mexico, was seriously injured, when an automobile in which they were returning from Fulton was upset on a sharp turn north of here early today. Merritt Roberts, son of a Mexico undertaker, was driving the machine and Ray Gregory, also of Mexico, was a member of the party.

The car struck a ditch and two wheels were broken. Roberts was thrown clear of the machine and escaped unhurt. Gregory and Mrs. Mudd were thrown into a barb wire fence and the machine fell on top of them. Mrs. Quinsenberry sustained a deep gash in her forehead and bruises and cuts on her face and body. Gregory suffered cuts and bruises from contact with the barbs on the wire fence. The body of Mrs. Mudd and the injured people were taken to Mexico.

INSANE, NOT MILLIONAIRE

SOUTH BEND, Ind., May 30.—Otto Buck Churchill, who said he was heir to $30,000,000 and in search for a wife, was sentenced to the insane ward at Michigan City prison in the St. Joseph Circuit Court here.

Churchill was found guilty by a jury of numerous frauds in the sale of western lands. The prisoner after his conviction asserted he had been adopted by Spencer Churchill and is the heir to the latter's estates in Canada. He admitted he has been in prison twice before.

Remarkable Sale of Oil Paintings
By French Academy Students

Size 9½x13,	Size 18x15,	Size 21½x18,
$1.75	$2.75	$3.75

These paintings are the work of the advanced students of the French Academy and this lot includes works by Tibout, Rollet, E. Taivrex, Doubrook, and others.

They are landscape and marine studies painted, not to sell, but to win approbation and commendation from the master.

After having been passed by the teacher, these pictures are traded to art dealers for new canvas (a profitable proposition all around), and are sold by the dealers at ridiculously low figures, yielding a handsome profit at the same time.

There is no way of determining the value of a painting. Millet nearly starved because he could not sell his work at any price, until someone discovered his genius.

These are all originals, every one the work of a real artist, honestly striving to do his best, and they must be seen to be appreciated.

By special arrangement with Brey's Art Store, we are showing an assortment of samples of appropriate frames for these pictures in connection with this sale. (Second Floor.)

Mattresses Special

One of our local manufacturers has just closed out his surplus stock to us at a price which enables us to sell them at less than wholesale.

A few of them are slightly soiled at the edges, otherwise they are all perfect goods.

At $4.65 — All Felt Mattresses; large or three-quarter sizes, some with roll edges.

At $3.40—Felt Mattresses with cotton centers, roll edges and splendidly made.

At $2.15—Combination Mattresses, excelsior centers, cotton felt on each side; for large size beds.

At $1.50—Cotton Pads for folding beds or sanitary couches.

At 38c—Moss Pillows, covered with blue and white "A. C. A." ticking; these are very special.

(Second Floor.)

Hosiery

Plain Lisle Thread Hosiery with bright, silky luster, deep garter top, extra woven soles, high-spliced heels—plain black or pure white, 25c.

Imported Lisle Thread Hosiery, gauze weight, full fashioned — double woven, deep garter welt, high spliced heels and double woven lisle soles—plain black or white, 35c—3 pairs for $1.

Plain black ingrain lisle thread Hosiery with double woven cotton soles—full regular made, 35c; 3 pairs for $1.

Phoenix pure thread Silk Hose, in plain black and all the wanted colors, in plain shades, 75c, $1, $1.50.

Plain black, pure thread ingrain dyed Silk Hose—cotton garter tops and double woven cotton soles—full fashioned, 88c. (Main Floor.)

The June Bride Is The July Housekeeper

The July housekeeper can find a wealth of pretty and practical things for her home in our housefurnishing sections.

Perhaps you might find them for her. You know how she will treasure such things if they constantly remind her of the loving forethought of some dear, good, "everyday" friend.

For instance there is chinaware. No doubt you have a few treasures of this kind at home.

A teapot from grandma's wedding china or perhaps some teacups or plates that every time they are used bring forth memories worth more than all the world beside.

Here you may choose from the products of such potteries as Theo. Haviland, Royal Victoria, Lanternier, Old Abbey, Guerin and many others, French, Austrian, English or American, in a splendid assortment of pretty patterns—the 100-piece sets ranging in price from $10 to $160.

Then there is cut glass, American cutting is acknowledged best—your mind may be made up to select a bowl, a nappie, vase, water pitcher, bonbon dish, celery or spoon tray, candlesticks, salt and pepper shakers, sugar and creamers. Perhaps you fancy hobnail, chrysanthemum, spinning star or thistle pattern—you will find them all here—priced 50c to $25.00.

Nickel-plated and copper ware, such as chafing dishes, percolators, coffee urns, casseroles, trays, coaster sets, crumb trays, etc., ranging in price from 25c to $15.00.

(Main Floor and Basement.)

Summer Silks

Each year witnesses an increasing demand for silks and prettier silks to choose from.

Whether the demand causes the production of prettier goods, or the production creates the demand is a question; but the result is that silks are prime favorites.

Among the new Summer Silks meeting much favor with our customers are:

Shirting Silks, standard quality; 32 inches wide; white grounds and stripes of various colors. Having a firm body, they launder perfectly and are priced at 69c.

Satin Striped Tub Silks, 32 inches wide; white and colored effects for waists, dresses or shirts, 98c.

Cheney's shower-proof Foulard Silks, 24 inches wide; new Summer designs, 85c.

"WORLD MISJUDGED ME," SAYS ABDUL HAMID IN MEMOIRS

Deposed "Red Sultan" of Turkey in His Book Throws a New Light on His Character

FEARED VIOLENT DEATH

He Says That as a Child He Was Misunderstood and Withdrew Within Himself.

PARIS, May 30.—The publication of the autobiography of Abdul Hamid, the deposed "Red Sultan" of Turkey, is very like a posthumous message. Most persons had forgotten what had become of the once feared monarch of the now dismembered empire. Probably very few recall that during the Balkan War he was brought back from his palace prison at Salonica and sent into the recesses of Stamboul to live.

This volume, which is called "Thoughts and Memories of Abdul Hamid," throws rather a new light on the character of the writer. There is a strong intimation that his personality largely was a result of his fear of violent death, and he writes a direct complaint that as a child he was abused, neglected and misunderstood, and that he "withdrew within himself." One gathers that without this fear of death, Abdul Hamid might have been a very different man. Of his childhood, he writes:

"I have been reproached because of the retired life which I live and in which I am so comfortable. Allah knows that each man is the product of the circumstances which determine his life, and that he above all is the product of his education. One forgets in what circumstances I grew up. My brothers and sisters were spoiled, while I (I do not know for what reason) was not always well treated by my father. My poor brother Mourad alone understood me.

Writes He Was a Dreamer.

"From my childhood I had a grave mein, little liking any games, but reflecting always on the serious questions of human existance. I was a dreamer and my instructors scolded me and complained to my father. Feeling that I was misunderstood by those around me I withdrew more and more into myself. When I succeeded to the throne of my brother I found myself surrounded by persons who sought to imprison me in a net of intrigues. Was it not necessary then to fight ruse with ruse in order to preserve my life and my throne? Twice already there have been plots against my life and it was only at the last moment that I was able to save myself, thanks to the vigilance of a few faithful ones."

Abdul's opinion of the young Turks who accomplished his overthrow is exceedingly interesting. It is a comment written at the time.

"Our army is in a state of ferment; it is divided into two camps. There is no longer salvation for us if we wish to counteract the English intrigues. I ought to put myself at the head of the so-called reforms. I will proclaim myself the Constitution. It is the only way to check the advances of England.

"Perhaps these men who today are drunk with the ideas of reform will realize later that these roads that they point out to the people only lead to destruction. Let us hope that at the eleventh hour they will understand that Turkey can continue to live only by all Osmanlis remaining united under the standard of our ancient and sacred law. Otherwise we will become the prey of the Christian Powers, who only await a favorable occasion to accomplish our ruin."

Abdul Detested England.

Abdul detested England, whose hand he saw in every misfortune that came to Turkey. He called Gladstone, who gave him the name of the "Red Sultan," a garrulous old man. On the other hand, he praised Wilhelm II most highly.

Abdul Hamid seemed always to feel that Tripoli would slip through his fingers. Nor did he seem to care whether such a thing happened or not, for in his Souvenirs he says: "We would have peace at last and we would receive sufficient funds to solve some of our other problems."

He was highly indignant when he learned that Ferdinand of Bulgaria intended proclaiming himself King and he wanted all Europe to protest against it. He was blind to the fact that the Balkan States were conserving their strength and finances for a concerted attack on Turkey, although he looked with favor on an alliance between Greece and Servia.

Wisdom of His Gardener.

While Sultan he greatly admired the wisdom of his gardener. Of him he said:

"My old gardener at Yildiz was right when he gave me his impressions on the political complications in the Balkans in the following fashion:

"'An apple tree, a pear tree, a plum tree, an oak and a pine stood together in such a fashion that their branches almost touched each other. The oak lorded it over the other trees, but they intercepted the air and light from the oak's lower branches, so that they rotted and fell to the ground. And it came to pass that these trees, struggling each for a place in the sunlight, began to quarrel one with another. Their quarrel became so violent that Allah finally heard them in the heights of the heavens. He appeared among them and said: "Why are you quarreling? You all have a right to live, no tree is better than another, each one is good in its place."

"'It is exactly the same in the Balkans. The apple tree is Rumania, the plum tree Servia, the pine Greece and the pear tree Bulgaria; but our Turkey is the oak, from which more than one rotten branch has already fallen. According to my opinion, this does not signify any disease of the trunk, for these branches, hollow and rotten, that we have lost, constituted a danger for the health of our tree.'"

The gardener and the Sultan both were mistaken. The apple tree, the plum, the pear and the pine forced the oak to transplant itself so as not to be smothered.

Never have we had such an array of Waists at a greater range of prices than those in this June Sale of White. You can best appreciate the supreme excellence of our offering only by a personal visit to this department. Included in this sale are the waists here described and illustrated.

One very dainty French Organdy Waist has embroidered Swiss bands set in with hemstitching, deep square collar, which gives a fichu effect, and is finished with picot edge, ruffle and hemstitching, while the three-quarter length sleeves are set in. Sale price $3.50

One of the Waists illustrated is made of the softest and thinnest of shadow lace of cobwebby texture and has touches of vivid-colored moire ribbon. Large oblong pearl buttons are used as garniture. Price $6.00

The other Waist illustrated is of sheer Voile with Val. lace and embroidery-medallions. It has new collar which, with the shoulders, is finished with beading, three-quarter sleeves with little tabs on the cuffs. Special $5.00

A fourth charming Blouse is of embroidered organdy with extremely good-looking collar and revers. It has beaded yoke, back and front, and three-quarter sleeves with turn-back cuffs. Price $4.00

Dress Goods, Silks and Wash Goods Cut and Fitted FREE

By Miller & Miller

New York Expert Cutters and Fitters

Miller & Miller, under the auspices of this store, will, beginning Monday, cut and fit, free of charge, any outer-garment, costume or evening wrap, of Dress Goods and Silks selling at 75c a yard and upwards, and Wash Goods at 50c a yard and upwards.

Miller & Miller have a greatly deserved reputation throughout the country for the expert manner in which they cut and fit garments.

We have secured their services for a limited time only and you may have plain tailored or elaborate garments cut and fitted (without any charge whatever) and in the latest approved styles.

Mr. Miller will take your measurement and cut the garment, while Mrs. Miller will fit it perfectly to your figure. Everything is made ready for the final sewing, so that any woman who can sew a straight seam or who has the slightest knowledge of dressmaking, will be glad to take advantage of this splendid offer.

In connection with this innovation, special prices will prevail on a number of groups of Dress Goods, Silk and Wash Goods.

Extra size women should also take advantage of this offer.

Third Annual June Sale of SHOES at About Half Price!

There is probably no other time in the year when as many persons are preparing to supply new footwear.

And so the June Sale could hardly be more timely!

Here are thousands upon thousands of pairs of brand-new footwear which, if you do not buy in this June Sale, you will purchase at regular prices probably a week or two hence.

The values and the high qualities are so evident that the experienced shopper will find this a well-nigh irresistible event.

Rest assured we have provided extra salespeople to the number of 100, and a special department equal in area to the regular Shoe Section (which is the largest in St. Louis), has been provided on the main floor, in the rear, and the Basement Shoe Section space has been nearly tripled!

Here are the offerings of the greatest June sale of Shoes this store has ever announced:

2233 Pairs of $5 French Bronze Kid Colonials at $2.85

Also Choice of Any Corinne $3.50 Low Shoe or Colonial Pump at $2.85

For Summer, Bronze Colonials will have first call.

There is no Shoe easier or softer on the foot, and from a sightly standpoint, there is none more beautiful.

French bronze kid is the only serviceable bronze stock for wear and appearance, and we were fortunate in importing for our own use, the bronze stock from which these 2000 Shoes were made.

In addition to the Bronze Shoes in Colonial, Cleopatra and Tango patterns, in either all-bronze or vesting back effect, you are offered unrestricted choice of our entire line of Corinne $3.50 Shoes at $2.85

This Corinne special offer is positively for Monday and Tuesday only, but the Bronze Shoes will remain on sale until sold.

(Basement.)

8000 Pairs of Spring Shoes

of Regular $3 to $5 Qualities

The Shoes in this group are almost beyond comprehension from the standpoint of value, and especially when one considers style. Many of the makes are well-known, and because of the fact they do not care to have their brands associated with such a low price, we cannot mention the makers' name.

There are High Shoes, Low Shoes, Pumps and Colonials, in practically every wanted style, and in the widest variety of leathers.

There are Colonials with the vesting backs, which are most popular, and there are Boots with the New York heels in great quantities, and the new Mary Jane pumps.

Suffice to say there are all styles, in all sizes and widths, in this great lot of $3, $3.50, $4, $5 and even $6 Shoes, in the June Sale at $2 pair

REED'S ANTI-BIRD AMENDMENT IS DEFEATED 45 TO 17

Missouri Senator in Caustic Speech Scores Dr. Hornaday, Noted Zoologist.

TALK FULL OF SARCASM

Despite Eloquence $50,000 Appropriation Protecting Wild Life Stands as Authorized.

The United States Senate was droning drearily over a proposal of Senator Overman to raise the salary of a woman "artist on glass" in one of the departments $200 a year, and another, of Senator West of Georgia, advocating Government encouragement of the momentous industry of extracting turpentine from tree-stumps.

Thereupon uprose James A. Reed, junior Senator from Missouri, and proceeded to spice the Congressional Record by "sniping" at Dr. William T. Hornaday, the distinguished director of the New York Zoological Garden, with a few pungent sarcasms. The speech was in opposition to a law concerning the protection of migratory and insectivorous birds, for which purpose the Senate and House have just authorized an appropriation of $50,000.

"Oh, that mine enemy would write a book!" quoted the Senator, and added with zest that Hornaday has thus rendered himself vulnerable in a volume entitled "Two Years in the Jungle." In the ardor of his oratory Reed did not inform his colleagues that the book was published in 1885, and that it described a trip to Borneo made between 1876 and 1879.

He asserted that the Federal game law was enacted "in response to a manufactured sentiment created by an organized lobby," "as thoroughly greased as any recently infesting Congress," and accused the lobby of expending $82,347 during 1913 in promoting legislation." In support of the propaganda, he charged, are enlisted the millions of the Ford Automobile Co.

He was antagonistic to the appropriation, he explained, because he believed the protection of birds should be left to the States; because the Departments of Justice and Agriculture had refused to make cases testing the statute, showing "that they have no confidence in its validity"; and because Federal Judge Trieber had declared the game law unconstitutional.

"Because I have thus insisted," the Missourian complained, "I have become the subject of ridicule and scorn of the Audubon Society and of that high priest of mercy, Mr. Hornaday. That gentleman constitutes himself the chief apostle of mercy and kindliness. He denounces every man who shoots a duck as a pothunter, and holds him up before the country as a merciless wretch who seeks to inflict pain and misery upon wild animals. One would think, as he reads the fulminations of this gentleman, that his heart overflows with pity, that in his tender hands is held a chalice filled with tears of agony wrung fro mhis sympathetic eyes by the suffering of dumb brutes. Out of his own mouth, or his own book, let him be condemned.'"

The book, exclaimed the Senator, "reads like the diary of the foreman of a slaughterhouse. According to Hornaday he has killed everything that walks. He has even descended to the ignoble business of robbing birds' nests."

What was the director's motive? inquired Reed. He found it, he said, in a sentence following a narrative of how Hornaday's party killed seven orang-outangs in one day:

"It was the most valuable day's work I ever did, for the specimens we preserved were worth, unmounted, not less than $800."

"Now you know the mainspring of his delight," the Senator shuddered. "It lay in the fact that he had made $800 that day killing seven of these poor creatures."

The Missourian turned on the tremulo stop to the full as he told the Senate, quoting Darwin as an authority, that the orang-outang, if not altogether human, is almost so. They have the same muscles and nerves, the same diseases as man, he affirmed. Even the name orang-outang means "jungle man." To kill one of them is almost equivalent to murder, thundered the Senator.

Hornaday had related that hunting gibbons is exciting work and violent exercise, "but good to improve one's wind," concerning which Reed said: "This leads me to remark that it may have been at this interesting period of his life that the doctor developed his ability to stand interviews and denounce game associations." He continued to quote from the book:

"Just after I had finished measuring the mias (orang-outang) killed yesterday and was preparing to set out for the usual morning's hunt, a troop of gibbons began whistling. Le Tiac and I were after them in less than a minute. We saw one or two of them swinging off in the distance and at last I caught sight of a fine large one, feeding quietly on leaves, within gunshot. ('They did not know he was there,' Reed interpolated, 'so he assassinated them.')

"I fired both barrels to make sure of a kill, and in a minute or so I was walking under the tree to see where my wah-wah (gibbon) was, down it came with a heavy thud. To my surprise it was immediately followed by another, a young one this time, which fell flat on its face on the soft earth a yard farther off. We picked it up and found it was very much alive, having only a wound in the neck, and Le Tiac held it while I reloaded and looked for others. The little one set up a terrible cry and kept it up steadily, which created a great commotion among the other wah-wahs. They were all

Irrigates the Blood Knocks Rheumatism

A Remedy That Flushes the Blood from Head to Foot.

To get rid of rheumatism requires that the blood be completely flushed—not a mere makeshift as by salts and pain killers. The long record of S. S. S. is important to know. It has found its way into every section of the nation. It is the most widely used and most widely talked-of remedy there is for all blood troubles. And it is a known fact that rheumatism is primarily a blood trouble.

It is conceded by the closest students of the subject that rheumatism is caused in most cases by an acid condition of the blood and aggravated by the remedies commonly used for relief. In other cases rheumatism is the result of nerve depression; in still others it is the effect of some vitiated blood condition, having been treated with mercury, iodides, arsenic, and other poisonous mineral drugs.

The recoveries of all these types of rheumatism by the use of S. S. S. is a wonderful tribute to the natural efficacy of this remarkable medicine, for it is assimilated just as naturally, just as specifically, and just as well ordained as the most acceptable, most palatable and most readily digested food. Do not fail to get a bottle of S. S. S. today, but insist upon S. S. S. Don't accept a substitute. You will be astonished at the results. If your rheumatism is of such a nature that you would like to consult a great specialist confidentially, write to the Medical Dept., The Swift Specific Co. 536 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.—ADV.

Free Book On Drink Habit

A well-known New Yorker, having been addicted to drink habit for sixteen years, and finding that it was putting him in the human scrapheap, like so many thousands are ruined, found a means of quick and lasting riddance, which he tells about in a book that he has published.

This book contains information of vital interest to drinkers, their wives and others who have tried in vain to conquer the habit by persuasion, pledges or medicines. It is not a temperance lecture, but an easy-reading narrative, well illustrated. The author, Edward J. Woods, 250 P, Station E, New York City, will send it free, in plain wrapper, postpaid, to anyone answering this advertisement.

running away, but on hearing the cries of the little one two came back as near as they dared, but kept so well concealed that I could not get a shot.

("Think," exclaimed the Senator, "of killing an animal so near the standard of man that it would come back at the risk of its life to rescue its wounded companion!")

"Then we carried the little one about and let it cry while we ourselves kept very still. It was perhaps a mean thing to do ("I remark that in this one instance the gentleman told the truth," Reed commented), but collecting has no law. Every wild animal must die some time, and gibbons are too valuable and too hard to get for us to let one go through sympathy.

"Under all other circumstances these animals are exceedingly timid and flee at the slightest alarm; but this time two of them returned in response to the cries of one of their children in distress. It was a mean thing to do, I know, but when at last I got a shot at a large wah-wah of the rescuing party, I disabled him so that he could not get away. He climbed to the topmost branches of the tree he was in, which was about 90 feet high, and I fired at him from below. I was surprised at the shooting it took to collect him. Altogether I fired seven shots with my No. 10 gun before he fell, and to my still greater surprise, I found on examining the body that only one bone was broken—a tibia.

"The specimen was a large male, and met its death solely on account of its paternal affection, sympathy and genuine courage in the face of danger."

This recital was immensely shocking to the Senator. "I am going to insist," he declaimed, "that a man who has been bathed in blood and who has allowed a wounded child, even of the monkey tribe, to continue its cries in order to decoy the older ones of the tribe, so that in coming to its rescue they would come to their death—that such a man ought to cease prating about the protection of game and lecturing others upon the subject of cruelty.

"Mr. President, in this book there is the recitation of the killing of innumerable monkeys. He hunted them; he gloated over his ability to kill them; he chuckled every time one died—a fine specimen to be leading the Audubon Society marching with the gospel of mercy in one hand and the skulls and skins of a thousand monkeys in the other."

Hornaday then told of seeing only the big, hairy arm of an orang-outang clasping the trunk of a tree and of sending a bullet through the arm "to stir the old fellow up." The animal immediately showed itself and Hornaday shot it several times before it fell. It struggled up and stood savagely at bay, grasping the trunk of a sapling. The Malays dispatched it with their spears.

"How much this sounds like the description of a dying man!" was Reed's comment. "One would imagine that a human being engaged in killing a creature so near his own kind would experience some pang of sorrow or some feeling of grief; but the description of the death is as cold-blooded as a Borgia would have written of the poisoning of one of his enemies. I read from page 363:

" 'Three orang-outangs in one day! The men hurrahed loud and long; and I believe I must have indulged in a little shout on my own account.'

"How it must have thrilled his sensitive soul! Three creatures so closely allied to the human family that some believe them human, slaughtered in a day; and over their dead bodies this tender-hearted lover of wild life indulges in cheers!"

Hornaday related that one day in a tree he saw a mother orang-outang with a young one in a tree.

"If there is anything that appeals to the stony heart of man," remarked the Senator, "and melts it into kindliness it is the sight of a mother seeking to protect her babe. But what did Mr. Hornaday do? He fired at the mother."

The wounded orang-outang climbed up instantly to the little one, which quickly clasped her around the body. This led Reed to apostrophize the mothers of the nation:

"Ah, you good mothers who are furnishing money for Mr. Hornaday, what would you have done if your babe had been in danger? And what would your babe have done except what this little orang did when it reached out and put its arms about its mother?"

The mother was killed and two hours later, says Hornaday, "the baby orang relieved me of all anxiety on its account by dying. This made seven dead orangs, big and little, to skin and skeletonize in one day."

"Would not one creature have done in the interest of science?" Reed demanded. "If you had to go out and murder something that was almost human, could you not be satisfied with one or two? No! Seven!"

"Now, listen, and let no man hereafter say that this man did with reluctance these acts in the interest of science. Here are his own words:

" 'There are many good people who are at a loss to understand how a naturalist can bear to skin and cut up dead animals, no matter how rare and interesting they are. Well, tastes differ, that's all. As for myself, I would not have exchanged the pleasures of that day, when we had those seven orangs to dissect, for a box at the opera the whole season through.' "

Senator Reed, adding to this account the fact that Mrs. Russell Sage had just given Hornaday $25,000 as a subscription to the permanent wild life protection fund, and that he was pretty sure to get $25,000 more, made this thrust:

"I can understand how a man who finds more delight in counting the carcasses of dead orangs, in stretching them upon his table, in whetting his skinning knife, in plunging the knife into the bodies of almost human creatures, than he would have in the possession of a box at the opera for the entire season, and who gives us the key to his delight by the statement that the carcasses were worth $800, should grow exceedingly enthusiastic, exceedingly tender-hearted, exceedingly interested in the wild life of the country if he were to have a $50,000 fund placed in his hands.

"I trust the women of this country who are supporting this society and kindred societies will hereafter employ people who have the right to take the name of mecry on their lips without defiling the holy word."

Despite Reed's eloquence, his amendment striking from the agricultural bill the appropriation for the protection of birds was defeated by a vote of 45 to 17. Dr. Hornaday has not yet published a reply. He is a noted hunter of big game, and took the initiative in creating the Montana National Bison Range and the Wichita National Bison Range, for the conservation of the buffalo. He was instrumental in obtaining last year the passage of a law prohibiting the importation of wild birds' plumage into the United States for millinery purposes.

WHEELER RESENTED NEW BANK LAW RESTRICTIONS

Prohibition of Entering Service Called Reflection on Honesty by Chicago Man.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Members of Congress are discussing what is said to be the explanation of Harry Wheeler's declining to serve on the Federal Reserve Bank Board. This report has it that Wheeler, who is a Chicago banker, objected to the clause of the bank act which prohibits a member of the board from becoming connected with any member bank within two years after he has retired. Wheeler is said to have declared that such a restriction reflected on the honesty of the members.

This rule applies also to the Assistant Secretaries of the Treasury and, it is said, that it was inserted into the law because of the tendency of New York banks to hire assistant treasurers. It is said that several men in these offices during recent years have been practically employed by banks for more than a year before their retirement. Such a law would have kept Frank A. Vanderlip out of the presidency of the great Standard Oil bank in New York, it is said.

Deputy Prosecutor Quits.

CONWAY, Ark., May 30.—Asserting that "sharp" practices on the part of lawyers for defendants make the administration of his office a detriment rather than a benefit to the community, Silas W. Rogers has tendered his resignation as Deputy Prosecuting Attorney of Faulkner County. He recommended to Prosecuting Attorney James B. Read that no successor be appointed. Rogers declares that conditions make it impossible for any man to do any good, while an unscrupulous man may do much harm in the office.

Advice on Beauty

by Claire Ainsworth

NOTE.—If the reader does not find the information wanted in the questions answered below, just address a letter to Miss Claire Ainsworth, 40 Patterson Bldg., Dayton, Ohio, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope, and she will gladly advise on health and beauty problems. The articles and preparations mentioned are on sale by all wholesale druggists, large retail and department stores; or any accommodating dealer can obtain them for you.

Mrs. Alice M. asks: "I wish to know whether it is possible to restore a pretty complexion in a woman past middle age? I find I am beginning to have 'crow's feet' wrinkles and a flabby, sallow skin."

Answer: Yes, my very dear friend, it is possible to do just what you desire to do. Soap is a destroyer of a beautiful skin. Instead, use gloriol glowene, which is really a "water massage," as it penetrates the deepest pores and draws out the dirt, perspiration and other excrement of the skin. A delightful feeling of cleanliness immediately follows its use, while it is very beneficial to the health and color of the skin. As a nutriment and emollient to prevent and remove wrinkles, fill in hollow pores, blackheads, blotches, redness, etc., I want you to use the splendid preparation called gloriol emollient. It is a revelation to any woman to note the effect of this emollient massage. It positively does not promote hair growth, but it does nourish the flesh and skin beautifully. Next to the foregoing and following out the scientific treatment I want you to use two or three times daily before going out into the weather the delightful gloriol balm, or greaseless massage cream. It preserves the skin from the effects of wind and weather and produces a lovely velvety tinted skin similar to that of a healthy child. The three articles mentioned are inexpensive and thoroughly reliable in every sense.

Mrs. B. G. asks: "Please advise treatment for my hair, which I am losing by daily combings to such an extent that it distresses me. I have tried various tonics and shampoos, but nothing seems to stop it. My hair is dull and the new hair seems lifeless and stringy. Please tell me of something right away."

Answer: I never use an alcohol or quinine tonic, but prefer a natural and pure water tonic made by dissolving one-half ounce of hairwand powder in a pint of soft water. This is harmless, beautifying and a real tonic possible designed by nature for the one purpose of restoring life and vigor to the hair and scalp.

C. H. M. asks: "I am curious to know whether you would recommend that I reduce my weight? I weigh a little over 200 pounds and seem to be gaining lately. In hot weather I am very uncomfortable."

Answer: The question as to whether you should reduce must be settled by yourself. The one thing I know to be prompt and effective, and at the same time perfectly safe to use, is 5-grain phythyrin tablets, put up in sealed tubes and on sale at most pharmacies. This will reduce you surely and steadily.

Arthur S. asks: "Can you tell me something which will absolutely cure dandruff and itching scalp? I have tried innumerable remedies in vain. It is very annoying."

Answer: Extremely bad cases of dandruff always yield to the regular application of plain yellow minyol (sold in 4-oz. jars). Apply about twice a week. Shampoo once a week with gloriol shampoo. Also get the hair and scalp tonic recommended to "Mrs. B. G." in these answers.

Miss C. asks: "I am a poor, thin little mite of a creature, weighing only 91 pounds. I should weigh about 120 pounds. I have tried all sorts of dieting to increase my weight. Can you recommend something to do?"

Answer: I feel very sorry for you, my little friend, and am sure I can help you out of your misery and humiliation. Take a warm bath daily and then rub the body with medicated venosol as per directions contained in each tube. Also begin at once taking 3-grain hypo-nuclane tablets, recommended widely by physicians as the best flesh-making medicine known. It will take time to do it, but it is surely worth the effort, for you will be adding to your beauty and attractiveness each day that you use the treatment. Angles and bones become invisible and beautiful curves replace them.

Elsie J. asks: "Can you tell me why, in spite of all the care I take of my skin, that it is frequently a mass of pimples and blackheads, and it seems to get more greasy and muddy all the time?"

Answer: Probably your digestion is not perfect and your blood has become impure. Quit eating fat and rich pastries. Bathe the body daily. Follow the treatment outlined above for "Mrs. Alice M." In addition, I want you to begin taking for your bad blood condition one-grain tablets quinoxide. They will soon purify the blood and they have a specific whitening and clearing action on the skin. Everyone who values a pretty, clear skin should take quinoxide at the first appearance of any pimples, redness or sallowness.

L. C. R. asks: "I am terribly flat-chested and have no bust development at all. How should I overcome this unnatural condition?"

Answer: There is a rare cream called medicated venosol, sold in sealed tubes, inexpensive, easy to use and absolutely reliable. Begin its use as per directions which accompany it, and I know you will soon write me a letter of thanks and gratitude.

Stella M. asks: "My hair is staright and even, though I curl it daily, it does not last. What is good to keep the hair in curl?"

Answer: Gloriol wavolene is the one reliable preparation that I know of. It is harmless, invisible and is now used by thousands. It is used also to make "spit curls," which are again the fad.

Miss Cecelia asks: "Please advise a beneficial shampoo for the hair, and also tell me of a good face powder, and how to massage."

Answer: I advise the gloriol liquid shampoo and the gloriol face powder, which comes in white, pink and brunette. Send two stamps for my book, "Beauty Truths," which gives much valuable advice on all beauty subjects.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Nervous Wrecks From Sore Feet: Here Is Cure

The nagging irritation from foot torture causes thousands of nervous breakdowns. Besides, there is the pain, the haggard face and peevish disposition. Don't waste an hour, here is a treatment that will cure your feet quickly. No matter how many patent medicines you have tried in vain, this treatment, well-known to best foot doctors, will give prompt results. "Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calocide compound in a basin of warm water. Soak the feet in this for full fifteen minutes, gently rubbing the sore parts." The effects are marvelous. All pain goes instantly and the feet feel simply delightful. Corns and callouses can be peeled right off, bunions, aching feet, sweaty smelling feet, get immediate relief. Use this a week and your foot troubles will be a thing of the past. Calocide works through the pores and removes the cause. Any druggist has it in stock or will quickly get it. A twenty-five cent package is said to be enough to cure the worst feet. Calocide compound prepared only by Medical Formula Co. of Dayton, Ohio.—ADV.

Valuable Item for Men

Health and strength hitherto unknown will be felt surging in rich red blood through the arteries and veins and life's greatest ambitions may be realized as never before if the following special treatment is followed by those men, and women, too, who are stricken with that most dreaded of all afflictions, nervous exhaustion, accompanied with such symptoms as extreme nervousness, insomnia, cold extremities, melancholia, headaches, constipation and dyspepsia, kidney trouble, dreadful dreams of direful disasters, timidity in venturing and a general inability to act naturally at all times as other people do. Lack of poise and equilibrium in men is a constant source of embarrassment even when the public least suspects it. For the benefit of those who want a restoration to full, bounding health and all the happiness accompanying it, the following home treatment is given. It contains no opiates or habit forming drugs whatever:

The treatment consists of (3) three-grain cadomene tablets, packed in sealed tubes, and widely prescribed and dispensed by physicians and well-stocked pharmacists. Full directions for self administration now accompany each tube. It is claimed that these tablets possess the most wonderful tonic-invigorating powers which can soon be experienced after taking them.—ADVERTISEMENT.

IF YOU ARE A DRINKING MAN

You had better stop at once or you'll lose your job. Every line of business is closing its doors to "Drinking" men. It may be your turn next. By the aid of ORRINE thousands of men have been restored to lives of sobriety and industry.

We are so sure that ORRINE will benefit you that we say to you that if after a trial you fail to get any benefit from its use, your money will be refunded.

When you stop "Drinking," think of the money you'll save; besides, sober men are worth more to their employers and get higher wages.

Costs only $1.00 a box. We have an interesting booklet about ORRINE that we are giving away free on request. Call at our store and talk it over. Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Sixth st. and Washington av.; Chas. F. Merker, East St. Louis, Ill.

HERE'S HOW PURE MILK FUND SAVES TENEMENT BABIES

The St. Louis Pure Milk Commission, which is financially supported by the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund and by direct subscriptions to its own treasurer, Isaac H. Orr, of the St. Louis Union Trust Co., now is ready for the 1914 summer campaign to save the tenement babies from sickness and death due to impure milk.

The commission cordially invites all persons interested in this good undertaking to visit its laboratory, 1726 North Thirteenth street, and see how the work of preparing the modified milk and distributing it to the various pure milk stations throughout the city's crowded districts is conducted.

This great life-saving service in behalf of the little ones of the poor has shown a wonderful increase and continual betterment since it first was inaugurated in 1906.

The 1906 standard of purity for the milk distributed to tenement mothers, a standard which then seemed almost impossible of attainment, not only was realized early in the progress of the work, but has been steadily raised since then. Additional dairies also have come under the commission certification control, thus largely increasing the supply of pure and healthful milk.

For the babies of the poor the commission's laboratory now provides nearly 2000 bottles of modified milk per day.

In 1906 the commission certified 5100 gallons of milk as being pure and wholesome. In 1913 it certified 203,299 gallons.

Deaths in St. Louis of infants under one year of age during the four hot summer months have decreased from 810 during June, July, August and September, 1906, to 473 during the corresponding period in 1913.

The commission this summer will maintain 17 pure milk stations in the city's crowded districts for the distribution of pure milk to save the babies of the poor.

The commission has provided additional clinic days for poor mothers at the distributing stations.

"Saving the Babies."

At the 17 pure milk stations maintained by the commission, pure milk for the tenement babies is provided free of cost to all mothers unable to pay for same.

If the applicants are able to pay, they are charged 1 cent per bottle for the small size, 2 cents for the larger size, and 3 cents for what are known as "whole milk" sizes. A deposit of 2 cents is required for each bottle taken, this being returned when the bottle is brought back.

No destitute tenement mother was refused pure milk for her baby at any pure milk station last summer. Secretary H. E. Mortland of the Pure Milk Commission now reports that this again will be the rule in all worthy cases and that the Commission is prepared for a greater and more complete life-saving service this summer than ever before.

Tenement mothers desirous of obtaining pure milk for their babies, and also of profiting from the free feeding and instruction clinics, should communicate with Secretary Mortland, who will advise them of the clinic station nearest their home and therefore most convenient for them to visit.

They must take their babies with them when they attend, in order that the physician in charge may examine the baby and prescribe the special modification of milk needed in each individual case.

Each baby taken to the clinic is weighed and its mother is questioned minutely as to its condition, any ailments that may exist, the milk or other food given, and a searching examination of the baby's physical condition is made. The information thus gained guides the physicians in charge of the clinic as to the modification of milk to be prescribed, and a complete report, on blanks provided for the purpose, is written.

These reports state if a caretaker is in constant attendance on the baby and if this caretaker is amenable to instruction. They contain the physician's diagnosis of the baby's ailment, if any exists. They record the history of its feeding to the time of admission to the clinic; of all illnesses and nutritional disorders previous to admission; the present status of the baby; its temperature, and, if not a first visit, the temperature with which the baby was admitted to the clinic.

Then, day by day, is recorded the baby's weight, the number of feedings during each 24 hours, the modified milk formula of proteids, fats, sugars, calories and the energy quotients of the special modified milk prescription for each individual case. There are four formulas, or prescriptions of modified milk, covering all conditions.

All prescriptions for these various feeding formulas are filled under Secretary Mortland's personal supervision in the great laboratory. This laboratory is as jealously safeguarded against infection and dirt as is the best equipped modern hospital.

The room in which the formulas are filled is carefully sterilized. Secretary Mortland and his assistants wear sterilized gloves. The laboratory work of the St. Louis Pure Milk Commission is famous for its thoroughness. Letters from all parts of the United States are received, asking for information as to the methods employed.

Help the Good Work.

It is through this splendid organization, and with the additional good service of the King's Daughters in the daily distribution of free ice, the entire cost of this latter being paid by the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund, that the fund carries on its sorely needed work of saving the tenement babies.

The Pure Milk Fund is maintained by the generous contributions of the Post-Dispatch's readers, led by the children of St. Louis, who render noble service in helping to rescue the little ones of the poor from sickness and death due to impure milk in the hot summer time.

Already these children of the league are busy in this good work. Two benefit performances by children, one at the Mikado Theater, on Wednesday evening, June 10, and the other at the Marguerite Clark Theater on Saturday afternoon, June 6, are announced.

The former will be under the stage management of Walter Craig, 12 years old, "St. Louis' youngest stage manager," who heads the juvenile company known as Walter Craig's Minstrels, which will give the performance. Among its stars is 4-year-old Dorothy Craig, a delightful little singing comedienne, already a prime favorite with Pure Milk Fund benefit audiences.

The entertainment at the Marguerite Clark Theater will introduce another talented company of children, all of whom are working to make the performance a notable Pure Milk Fund success.

Both performances deserve crowded houses.

And it is in order, as well, for all grown folk who love and pity the babies of the poor to send in their contributions to the Pure Milk Fund that saves these babies. All contributions to the fund will be acknowledged through the columns of the Post-Dispatch.

The names of all fund contributors, children and grown folks alike, are enrolled on the membership list of the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk League. The league's badge of honor, a handsome league button with an attractive picture of the Post-Dispatch Weather Bird in colors, also a league membership card, will be sent to all who thus qualify for league membership.

GIRL KILLED, TWO HURT

Two Boys in Autos Struck by Train Escape.

PARKERSBURG, Io., May 30.—An Illinois Central train struck an automobile containing a party of children here last night.

One was killed and two injured.

The dead: Esther Ludderts, aged 8.

Injured: Edith and Angeline Ludderts.

Two boys who were in the car escaped injury. Angeline Ludderts is not expected to recover. The children were en route to Parkersburg from the home of their father, George Ludderts, a farmer, when the accident occurred. Herman Iblings, who was driving the car, also escaped injury.

EAT LESS MEAT IF YOUR KIDNEYS HURT OR YOU FEEL BACKACHY AND RHEUMATIC

Too much meat forms uric acid in the blood, which clogs Kidneys; causes Rheumatism and irritates the Bladder.

If you must have your meat every day eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acid so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder trouble.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.—ADV.

Snow-Mellow

Chocolate Layer Cake has a rich, creamy taste, rarely equaled in "home made" products and in bake-shop products—never. Just try this recipe if you want to make a cake that delights the "grown-ups" as well as the "kiddies."

Beat up one tablespoonful of Snow-Mellow in one-fourth cup of hot water, according to directions in the book you get free. Then beat in well, one-sixth cup of granulated sugar. Then fold in one-sixth cup granulated sugar to which has been added one level tablespoon powder cocoa. Bake the cake layers your way, or according to directions in the book. You'll never know how good chocolate layer cake can be until you try it with Snow-Mellow filling. Our book shows 28 ways in which you can use Snow-Mellow. Every 25c box makes desserts for seven meals for four to six people.

Get Snow-Mellow at your grocer's, price 25c, or sent by mail on receipt of 25c and the name of your grocer, by Frank & Houren, Sales Agts., 623 So. Wabash Av., Chicago, with book and beater, FREE.

1000 TURNERS IN INTERSTATE MEET HERE JUNE 13-14

Eighteen Gymnastic Societies Will Compete Saturday and Sunday at Priester's Park.

13 ARE FROM ST. LOUIS

Illinois Athletes to Participate and Childrens' and Women's Classes Will Take Part.

More than 1000 turners are expected to compete in the annual field day exercises of the St. Louis District of the North American Gymnastic Union, Saturday and Sunday, June 13 and 14, in Priester's Park.

Eighteen gymnastic societies will participate, 13 of which are St. Louis organizations. Four are from Illinois and one from Washington, Mo. The Tower Grove Turnverein, with 850 members, is the largest and Concordia is second.

The exercises will begin at 9 a. m. Saturday. The turnvereins have been divided in three groups for the calisthenics and the apparatus competition, the latter consisting of fancy evolutions on the vertical bars, the horizontal bar and the horse. The calisthenic exercises will require three hours. The turning on the apparatus is set for 1:30 p. m.

The individual competition will be started at 8:30 o'clock Sunday morning. Much is expected in the hundred-yard dash and the shot put, as the contestants are training faithfully. A relay race, the hop, step and jump and a fifth competition, which will not be announced until the turners are called upon to perform will complete the program for the pentathlon.

The mass drills by the "bears," as the old heads among the turners are called, will be held Sunday afternoon. The ladies' classes and the juniors also will perform. There will be calisthenics, wand exercises and club swinging in this event. A special performance on the apparatus by a picked team from the St. Louist district will conclude the festival. Experts will make the awards.

Otto Kallmeyer is chairman of the Executive Committe, and John Friesel is secretary. B. J. Korzendorfer is chairman of the Finance Committee and Fred Warmbold heads the Committee on Publicity.

CHAIRMAN HARLAND IS WRITING RATE DECISION

Partial Grant of Freight Carrying Charge Increase Expected Before July 1.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—James S. Harlan, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, has canceled all hearings over which he was to preside and is devoting all of his time to writing the decision on the freight rate increase petition by the railroads of the Eastern official classification district. It is expected that he will be ready to read the decision by June 15 or July 1 at the latest.

There is a vast amount of testimony to be reviewed. Observers of the proceedings do not expect an advance in the dates for hauling coal, ore, coke, sand and other raw materials, but they expect the railroads to be advised to increase their revenue by cutting off special privileges long granted to these shippers.

It is expected that a part of the increase will be allowed and that it will fall chiefly on the district west of Buffalo and Pittsburg and east of the Mississippi, where rates are lower than on the Atlantic seaboard.

BISHOPS' CHARGES ARE FALSE, SCHOOL HEAD SAYS

Chancellor Kirkland Tells Alumni at a Dinner of Theology Work at Vanderbilt.

ATLANTA, Ga., May 30.—At a dinner here of the resident Vanderbilt University Alumni resolutions were adopted favoring Chancellor Kirkland in his controversy with the bishops of the M. E. Church South.

Dr. Kirkland was a speaker at the dinner and he made his first statement since the decision of the Tennessee Supreme Court giving the control of the school into his hands. Dr. Kirkland declared that the bishops had made false statements regarding his administration and he declared the theology school of the University had "circled the globe with Methodist ministers who were educated from the Vanderbilt fund without help from the bishops."

He said that he cited this to offset the charge that under his direction the school was becoming educational rather than ecclesiastical, which criticism he said was narrow.

REMARKABLE DRESS SALE

Extraordinary Purchase of Summer Dresses—Once-a-Season Opportunity

$10 to $15 Dresses, $4.95 $15 to $20 Dresses, $7.95 $20 to $30 Dresses, $9.95

Here's the event of which we have been publishing notices in our daily advertisements this week—these are the Dresses that caused such excitement about our Washington avenue windows Saturday. The conditions that made possible this sale are different from any we have ever known—a sale like this may never happen again.

Sale Begins at 9 Monday

We want every one of our patrons to have opportunity for selection from this entire assortment—hence we are delaying the start of this sale a full half hour after the opening of the store.

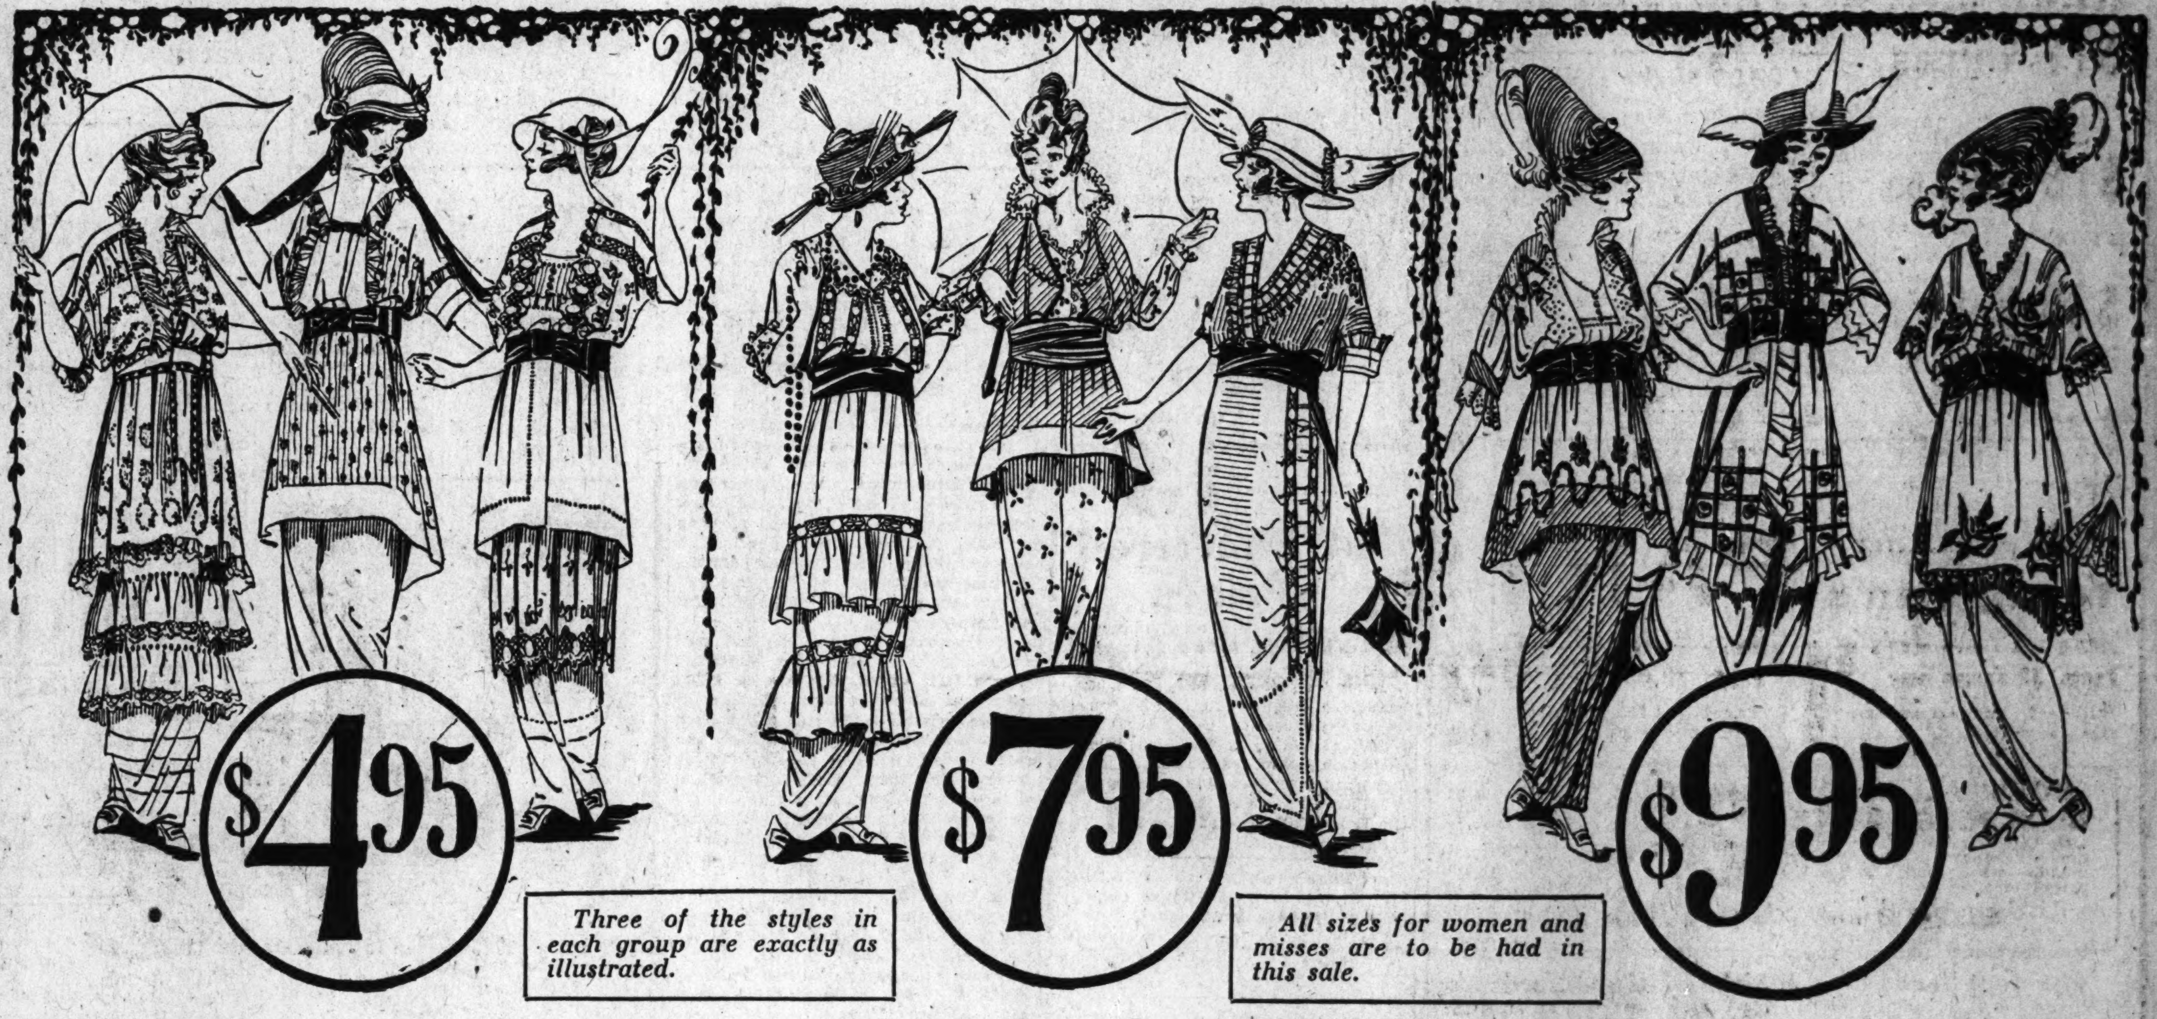
Extra Space and Salespeople

The whole strength of our organization is given over to this event. There will be no waiting. The Dresses will all be out on racks—the sizes will be plainly marked—you can take your pick.

BRIEFLY—THESE ARE THE FACTS OF THIS PURCHASE—The L. N. Gross Company of Cleveland, Ohio, one of the foremost and best-known makers of women's and misses' ready-to-wear in America, recently began a particular waist service with certain large retailers and so popular has it become they have been forced to devote their entire business to the making of waists alone. They had to give up the making of dresses—had to close out this end of their business entirely. So urgent was the necessity for them to make this change they decided to act at once, even at a sacrifice of the splendid lot of dresses then in their lofts. We knew what it meant to a NEW STORE, such as ours, to have such dresses as these to sell at below worth—we took quick advantage of the situation, making them a cash offer for every dress they had.



Three of the styles in each group are exactly as illustrated.

All sizes for women and misses are to be had in this sale.

620 Dresses in All--More Than Thirty Styles--Three Great Groups

Full detailing of this wonderful purchase of Dresses is impossible, so varied are the materials and styles in each of the three groups in which, for convenience sake, we are dividing these Dresses. They are in such wanted Summer-weight materials as fine imported ratines, crepes, voiles, organdies, lawns, lingerie cloths, striped tub silks, etc. They are made up in low neck and three-quarter length sleeves and the skirts are one and two tier models, new tunics, ruffled effects and straight lines. All sizes for women and misses are to be had.

Many of these Dresses are hand-embroidered in the richest contrasting and self colors. This work is exquisite—is the kind to be found only in dresses of the very highest class. Others have trimmings of richest laces—still others have wide sash girdles of satin in floral and Roman stripe designs or belts of suede in contrasting colors. Mainly all of these dresses are in all-white or in white with contrasting trimmings. There are also both light and Copenhagen shades of blue, tan, copper and tango. We cannot lay too much stress on the wonderful bargains to be had. Large as this quantity is, we would eagerly have bought more had it been possible. This sale will be the talk of St. Louis, unquestionably.

NOTE—None of these Dresses will be sent on approval—none will be sent C. O. D.—none will be laid by.

BURNS KILL CHILD, 4

Mary Louise Stewart, 4 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh H. Stewart of 4138 Russell avenue, died at 4 a. m. Saturday from burns received Thursday evening.

The child was playing "popy show" in the back yard of the adjoining residence, occupied by Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Roemer, with her brother, Charles Henry Stewart, 2 years old, and Harry Roemer, 5 years old. In the game a pasteboard box, open at the top and containing a lighted candle, was pulled about the lawn. She walked near the box and the breeze blew the flame and her dress was ignited.

Mrs. Stewart at the time was bandaging a wound her husband received in an automobile accident near Clayton last Tuesday.

Stewart is a director of the Real Estate Exchange.

HOW TO FIGHT THE ARMY WORM TOLD BY STATE EXPERT

Member of Agricultural Experiment Station Describes Method of Trapping Pest.

USE OF DRAG ADVISED

Where Growing Crops Prevent Use of the Roller, Ditching and Fire Are Advocated.

The Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station at Columbia has taken cognizance of the presence of the army worm in St. Louis County and has mailed out a bulletin telling Missourians how to fight the pest.

Within the last few days invasions of the army worm also have been reported from Barry, Vernon, Howard, Montgomery, St. Charles and Bates counties. With continuing dry weather, the experiment station states, the army worm is certain to prove injurious in other parts of the State.

"The army worm is a native insect found in greater or lesser abundance every year," declared Leonard Haseman of the experiment station staff.

Pest Increases Rapidly.

"When conditions are especially favorable it increases rapidly. It usually breeds in pastures, meadows, bottom waste land or in rye and wheat fields. When dry weather cuts short its food supply, it is obliged to migrate in search of fresh food and will destroy any cultivated crop which comes in its way. The army worm, at this time, is about half grown and will measure from one-half inch to a little over an inch in length. It is marked with light and dark stripes running lengthwise of its body.

"In the control of the army worm, prevention is most effective. If crops are rotated so as not to permit sod to continue in a field too long or so as to break up waste lands regularly, the breeding of the pest can be largely prevented. At this time, however, remedies and not preventive measures are necessary.

Methods of Checking Worm.

"The Missouri College of Agriculture recommends two methods of checking the army worm. The one consists of the use of a roller, weighted brush or drag run over the infested portions of fields so as to crush or grind up as many of the caterpillars as possible. This method can be used only in a relatively few cases on account of injuring growing crops.

"The second remedy is a ditch used as a trap into which the migrating worms fall, where they can be killed with coal oil or by burning straw or similar material in the ditch. The ditch should be eight to ten inches deep and can be made by first plowing a deep furrow and then using a shovel to square up the side next to the crop to protected. The army worm is a clumsy caterpillar and has trouble in climbing up a straight wall. Hogs and poultry help to reduce the army.

"Spraying with Paris green or other poison is effective where it can be used. The pest usually migrates for from ten days to two weeks. It feeds rapidly, so remedies should be applied at once."

Reports from Jerseyville, Ill., state that the worms have made their appearance suddenly in Jersey, Green and Macoupin Counties in Central Illinois. In some places the worms are advancing in tremendous columns, eating everything green before them.

State Entomologist W. P. Flint has been in these counties for a week assisting farmers in their war against the pests.

NEGRO SEEKS CASH ON CANCELED CHECK

He Is Arrested on Suspicion of Having Stolen Mail Sack, but Escapes.

FRANKLIN, Tenn., May 30.—Charles Otey, a negro, was arrested in Harpeth National Bank here on suspicion of stealing a mail sack thrown from an L. & N. night train. His arrest followed the presentation at the bank of a check believed to have been in the mail sack. The negro took his arrest quietly and then escaped while being taken to jail.

The mail sack was found in the Harpeth River, near town. Every letter had been opened and whatever money or other valuables they contained was missing.

The check Otey presented had been cashed at the Bank of Centerville, and it is presumed had been sent by that bank to the Harpeth Bank here.

This Great Player-Piano Sale Soon to Close

The time is fast approaching when the last

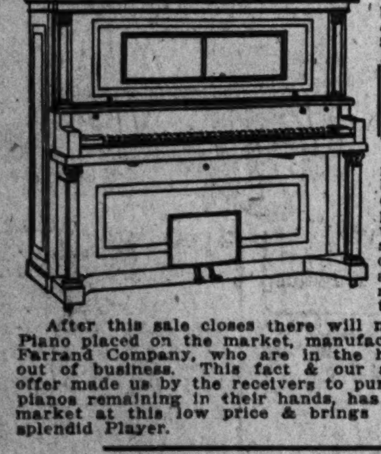
manufactured by the Farrand Company will be sold.



This is your opportunity to buy one of the world's four greatest Player Pianos at a saving of $155.00.

$10 Each Month Will Pay for It.

We have made the terms of payment low enough to allow you to buy now, even though you have other obligations to meet at the present time. We believed when we started this sale that these instruments would be purchased quickly, & we have not been disappointed. Some of our very best musical people have taken advantage of our offer.

After this sale closes there will never be another Cecilian Player-Piano placed on the market, manufactured by its original makers, the Farrand Company, who are in the hands of a receiver & are going out of business. This fact & our ability to take advantage of an offer made us by the receivers to purchase the entire stock of player-pianos remaining in their hands, has enabled us to place them on the market at this low price & brings you this saving of $155 on this splendid Player.

MORE THAN 100,000 AT PAGEANT; 21,500 IN SEATS AT 4 P. M.

Police Estimate Throng at Close to 150,000 and Percy MacKaye Believes It Was at Least 125,000.

CROWD EXTENDS BACK TO ART MUSEUM DOORS

Semi-Circular Sky Line, Except for Building, Is Formed by Human Heads and Shoulders —More Than 3000 Automobiles Parked Near Hillside

MORE than 100,000 persons—perhaps 125,000—packed the Art Hill amphitheater last night for the second of the four performances of the Pageant and Masque of St. Louis. It was probably one of the greatest throngs, if not the greatest, which ever gathered in one place to witness a public spectacle.

Long before 4 o'clock the last of the 21,500 free seats had been taken, and the sale of 25 and 50 cent seats had become brisk. There had already been a large sale of these seats at the downtown office, and a half-hour before the performance began the last of the reserved section was sold out. For those arriving after that time without tickets there was nothing to do but to stand or sit on the hillside.

The 25-cent and 50-cent seats are not sold individually, but the ticket buyer merely gets admission to a reserved section, the first comers getting the best seats in the section. The $1 and $1.50 seats are numbered chairs.

Back of the railing a solid mass of human bodies extended to the statue of Saint Louis, at the summit of Art Hill. Scores of policemen, on the hilltop, did what they could to keep the roadway in front of the Art Museum, clear, as a footpath. But back of the road, and up the slope to the very walls of the museum, stood another multitude, many of whom could hope to hear only little of the dialogue, but nearly all of whom could see the brilliant spectacle of form and color.

The passing of Marquette on the miniature Mississippi, or the coming of the World Adventurers in the Masque, is just as brilliant a sight from the hilltop as it is from the boxes.

Dense Crowds on Both Sides.

To the right and left of the seats, particularly to the left, where the space is broader, and concession tents are not so numerous, there were dense gatherings. From the water's edge to the crest of the ridge, men and women stood as close as straphangers in a crowded trolley car.

In the trees along the hilltop, in spite of police orders, dozens of boys sat, while those below looked up nervously as limbs creaked under their weight.

At sunset, looking upward from the Pageant stage, the actors saw a spectacle as imposing as that they were producing—a throng so enormous that its presence was overwhelming to eye and mind. On three sides of the great bowl there was a skyline, not of verdure, but of human countenances. Acre after acre extended the great plain of faces, until one could almost believe he was looking upon a square mile of humanity.

To the east and west of the basin were multitudes, standing, on ground that was not occupied Thursday night. From these sections much of the stage was invisible, being cut off from view by the pillars at either end. At the beginning of the Pageant some of those on the west wing expressed their discontent by shouting, but soon wearied of the pastime and contented themselves with seeing and hearing as best they could.

Thousands Unable to See Show.

Many thousands were unable to find space, Art Hill being jammed to its utmost capacity, and wandered disconsolately about the park, unable to make up their minds to go home. Still other thousands stood where they could get no more than an occasional glimpse of what was occurring on the stage, and catch only an infrequent accent of the actors. It seemed that not another person could have found room in the amphitheater.

At the conclusion of the Pageant thousands of persons started home, without waiting to see the Masque. At 9 o'clock De Baliviere avenue was thick with home-goers, and the waiting cars quickly were jammed to the steps. But even these departing multitudes could not be missed in the host which remained.

The patient standing crowd was as quiet as could have been expected. But at one place in the free seats, early in the Pageant performance, hoodlums manifested their presence. They had pieces of yellow pasteboard, which had been distributed as advertising fans. These they sent volplaning recklessly downward, not seeming to consider that one of the sharp points might put out the eye of anyone who happened to be looking toward them.

The denseness of the crowd made it difficult for the police to get to these offenders, and a woman, who was struck on the neck by one of the missiles, made an outcry which distracted attention, on that side of the hill, from the show.

The Masque ended at 10:45, and transportation arrangements worked so well that at 11:45 all the persons who had been in the park, except a few groups of concessionaires and friends who had tarried to buy from them, were well on their way home. At midnight cars were still moving, in regular line, around the De Baliviere loop, but the rush was over.

All the automobiles in the big parking inclosure had left within a half hour after the end of the performance.

Police Heads Put Crowd at 150,000

The Post-Dispatch estimated Thursday night's crowd at 75,000, a much lower estimate than was made by the directors. The estimate was made by reporters who went about the crowd, using a unit of 500 counted persons as a basis of comparison. It was found that the nearly 45,000 persons within the seating inclosure, on that night, formed the majority of the crowd. Last night reporters, using the same basis of computation, found the seatholders greatly outnumbered by the standing throng, whose heads and shoulders formed the skyline everywhere save for the outline of the Art Museum. They made the estimate of 100,000 as a conservative minimum. Pageant officials put the figure much higher.

Percy MacKaye, author of the Masque, declared that not less than one-eighth of a million persons were in the audience, and that the number might be as high as 135,000. President McPheeters of the Police Board concurred in the estimate, fixing 130,000 as nearest his idea of the size of the gathering. Chief of Police Young believed McPheeters and MacKaye had made their estimate too low, and he placed the number at 150,000 to 160,000. Chief of Detectives Allender said the crowd was not less than 150,000, and might be 175,000.

More than 3000 automobiles entered the park, according to McPheeters, who had charge of the arrangements for parking the cars.

YOUTH TELLS HOW HE USED PICK TO KILL WATCHMAN

Soda Dispenser Kept Deed Secret to Keep Girls From Thinking He Was a Bully.

ANOTHER EXONERATED

Slayer Says He Would Have Confessed Eventually if the Other Had Been Convicted.

Vernon Johns, a slim, 18-year-old soda water dispenser, mild mannered and frail, told the police yesterday the details of how he killed Fred LaTour, a United Railways watchman, May 17, by hitting him over the head with a pick handle.

The youth was arrested, Friday afternoon, while at the fountain in Oaks candy store, 518 Locust street, after William Griffith, 16 years old, of 2112 Adams street had been arrested and exonerated of the killing. Johns had read of the arrest of Griffith, but had volunteered no information to the police.

Black Eye Leads to Arrest.

The arrest of Johns was due to a black eye he received in his encounter with the watchman. He had explained to his brother, Jefferson, with whom he lived, at 2815 Clark avenue, and to the girls in the candy store, that he had been hit in the eye by a baseball in a ball game.

Policeman McDonough, who walks the beat near Johns' home, learned of his black eye and the date he received it. He heard the story of the ball game, and then learned that John did not play baseball. On a chance he decided to have Johns arrested and questioned about the killing. The police had absolutely no evidence to connect him with the tragedy, but when taken to headquarters he immediately admitted being the slayer.

Stumbled on Pick Handle.

He said that about 1:30 o'clock in the morning, on his way home, he stumbled over a pick handle which was lying in Market street between Twenty-first and Twenty-second streets, and that in pain and anger he kicked it several feet. La Tour, who was watching street railway tools, he said, rushed over and grabbed him by the collar, and threatened to arrest him. Johns said that he told La Tour he had no authority to make an arrest, and at that remark La Tour struck him in the eye. He said he then picked up the pick handle and struck La Tour with it several times. When La Tour fell, he hurried home.

La Tour was taken to the City Hospital, where he died five days later.

A man who had witnessed the encounter told the police that Griffith, who lived in the neighborhood, looked like the youth who had struck La Tour and Griffith was arrested. He was exonerated in Juvenile Court, but after La Tour's death, Griffith was arrested again. He was exonerated by a Coroner's jury.

When policemen entered the candy store and told Johns that he was wanted for murder, he began unbuttoning his white coat, and said that he was glad to be arrested as his suspense was relieved.

He told a reporter yesterday that he had not intended to let an innocent man go to the penitentiary for the killing.

Intended to Save Griffith.

"I had intended to watch the case closely," he said, "and if Griffith had been convicted I would have gone to the police and told them the facts.

"I told the girls in the candy store that I got the black eye in a ball game. I didn't want them to think that I was a bully and was quarrelsome."

He is in a cell awaiting the action of the grand jury next week.

CHAUFFEUR LOSES FINGER TRYING TO INFLATE TIRES

Man Stumbles and Catches Hand in Cog Wheel, Necessitating Amputation.

Herbert Latzinger, chauffeur in the employment of F. L. Lampel, living on the Clayton road, about a mile from Clayton, caught his hand in the chain and sprocket of the compressed air device on his engine yesterday afternoon.

He was inflating tires, and was stepping away when he stumbled on the air hose, which had become greasy with oil. He fell and his left hand came in contact with the revolving chain and was carried to a cogwheel, where the fingers were mashed.

He jumped into the machine and hastened to Clayton. So fast did he drive for medical aid that he narrowly escaped upsetting the car in making a turn at St. Louis and Forsythe boulevard, in Clayton. Upon his arrival at the office of Dr. J. B. Sudduth an anesthetic was administered and the first and second fingers were amputated.

MISS WILSON'S AUTO IS STOPPED FOR SPEEDING

WASHINGTON, May 30.—A White House automobile, in which Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of the President, and two friends were riding, was stopped for exceeding the 12-mile speed limit late today by county officers in Hayattsville, Md.

When the chauffeur told who his passengers were he was allowed to proceed. The officers, who declare the car was going 25 miles an hour, referred the case to the State Automobile Commissioner.

PRESIDENT FREES ST. LOUIS BOY WHO AT 14 JOINED ARMY

How He Passed as 20 Revealed When Wilson Remits Sentence for Absence.

HIS MOTHER WAS SICK

Joseph Earl Carney Was Overtaken on Second Flight From Fort Sill to Visit Her.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—When President Wilson issued an order today, directing that the unexecuted sentence of Joseph Earl Carney, son of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Carney of 812 La Beaume street, St. Louis, be remitted, the story of how a 14-year-old boy successfully passed as 20 and joined the United States army, assigned to Battery C of the Fifth Field Artillery, was revealed.

The action of the President was the direct result of an appeal made by Representative William L. Igoe. The papers on file showed how the youth had, after days of pleading, induced his mother to sign his enlistment papers, and made an excellent record until he learned his mother was sick.

He was denied a furlough, but went to his mother. He then returned to his camp at Fort Sill, Ok., pleaded guilty to absence without leave and was sentenced to two months' confinement and forfeiture of $20. While on parole he again received word that his mother was sick and, thinking it would be useless to appeal for a furlough, he again took leave.

Rides the Captain's Horse.

This time, in order to reach the railroad station, he mounted the Captain's horse and rode away. He was overtaken a few miles from camp. The commanding officer ordered that he be tried by courtmartial for desertion, while a paroled prisoner, and larceny for taking his Captain's horse.

The boy admitted he had enlisted by misrepresenting his age. He was sentenced to four years at hard labor, which sentence was later reduced by the reviewing authority to two years' confinement in the disciplinary barracks at Fort Leavenworth.

When the case was presented to the War Department by Igoe, the officers were not inclined to believe that a 14-year-old boy could pass the recruiting authorities and be assigned to a battery. As shown by the papers filed in the case by Igoe, the boy was born Dec. 27, 1897. He had not reached his 16th birthday when he left his company the first time.

Pardon Relieves Boy's Mother.

Mrs. Carney told a reporter at her home last night that she had been suffering from a nervous breakdown since the sentence of her son, but that she was greatly relieved when she received a telegram that he had been pardoned by the President.

She said he was very large for his age and had no difficulty in passing the medical examination and in deceiving the enlisting officers.

"It has been a great week for St. Louis," said Riggs.

"Yes, we've heard all of our big voices in the Pageant and Masque," replied Jiggs.

"And we had no idea we had so many big voices in St. Louis."

"No, we didn't."

"Now that we've made the discovery, we know where to go when we need some loud talking done in a good cause."

"What do you mean, a good cause?"

"Well, finishing the free bridge, for instance."

B-FLAT CORNET SO FLAT NEIGHBORS MAKE COMPLAINT

The B-flat cornet in the orchestra of the Fairy Theater "movie" airdome, 5642 Easton avenue, is so flat that residents in the vicinity cannot endure it. Acting on their complaints, Norman J. Sadler, Assistant City Attorney, yesterday notified August Roettger of 5640A Easton avenue, proprietor of the place, that the cornet's notes in the future must be in tune and its stentorian tones subdued, else he would cause Roettger's arrest and prosecution under an ordinance prohibiting either private or public peace disturbance.

The airdome is at the rear of the theater and abuts on the rear premises of a long row of residences on Blackstone avenue. Burton McGinnis of 1475 Blackstone avenue, G. E. Harris of 1481A Blackstone avenue and other neighbors complained to Sadler they were unable to enjoy the quiet of home life or sleep at night because of "the nerve-racking, discordant cornet blasts" that were carried to them on every breeze that floated through their open doors and windows.

They could excuse the strength of the cornetist's lungs, they said, if the instrument were in tune with the orchestra, which is comprised of a piano, violin and drum.

But the cornetist insists his instrument might be B-flat, but that it is not too flat and that his tones would pass the musicians' union test any time. Roettger supports this contention, saying the cornet is tuneful and pleasing, and that the complaint was made by some "crank." Consequently neighbors last night were again obliged to hear B-flat tones as flat as ever, even if somewhat subdued in volume.

CAPTAIN BLAMES THE COLLIER FOR LOSS OF SHIP AND 964 LIVES

Kendall Testifies at Coroner's Inquest That Danish Craft Drove Full Speed Into Empress After Acknowledging Two Whistle Signals of Warning.

BACKED OFF AT ONCE AFTER THE COLLISION

Testimony at Coroner's Inquest Is That if Coal Carrier Had Kept Her Bow Plugging Hole She Made in Passenger Ship, All on Board Might Have Been Saved—Captain Tells Dramatic Story of the Loss of His Ship.

RIMOUSKI, Quebec, May 30.—While final tabulations of the casualties in the sinking of the ill-fated steamer Empress of Ireland were being made today, showing that 403 of her passengers and crew had been rescued and 964 had perished, Captain Henry George Kendall of the liner was telling his story of the disaster at an inuiry conducted by Coroner Pinaud here. Capt. Kendall himself is suffering from bruises and shock.

The Canadian Government steamer Lady Gray with ensigns half masted left here this afternoon for Quebec bearing 150 bodies in coffins. No other bodies have been found and it is believed that the greater number of those lost were imprisoned inside the hull of the Empress.

Capt. Kendall in substance declared that he had taken all possible precautions against a collision. His ship had been stopped, he gave the requisite signals when the Danish collier Storstad, which dealt the blow which sent the Empress to the bottom, was still two miles away, but the collier had kept on through the fog which settled down soon after the two vessels sighted each other and had rammed the Empress of Ireland while the latter was virtually motionless. Then, despite his plea to the master of the collier that he run his engines full speed ahead to keep the hole in the liner's side plugged with the Storstad's bow, the Danish vessel backed away, the water rushed in and the Empress sank. The Captain testified:

"I am 39 years of age and my residence is Liverpool. We left Quebec at 4:30 p. m. May 28. At 1:25 a. m., May 29, after dropping the pilot at Father Point, I was on the bridge; the weather was clear and we were proceeding at full speed.

"After passing Cock Point gas buoy, I sighted the steamer 'Storstad.' She was then about one point on the starboard bow. At that time I saw a slight fog bank coming gradually from land, and coming between the two ships. The 'Storstad' was then about two miles away. Then the fog came and the lights of the Storstad disappeared, so I ran at full speed astern and stopped my ship, taking the way off the ship so as to stop her suddenly.

"At the time I blew three short blasts of the whistle, meaning 'I am going full speed astern.' The Storstad answered me with her whistle, giving one prolonged blast. I then looked over the side of my ship into the water, noting that she was at dead stop. I then stopped my engines and blew two long blasts meaning 'my ship was under way, but stopped, and has no way on her.' He answered me again with one prolonged blast.

Ship Filled Rapidly.

"The sound was then about four points on my starboard bow.

"It was still foggy. I then looked out in the direction from whence the sound came, and in a few moments saw the red and green lights of the Storstad. He would then be about one ship's length from the Empress. I shouted to him through the megaphone to go full speed astern, as I realized the inevitable danger. At the same time I put my engines full speed ahead, with my helm hard to port, with the object of avoiding the accident if possible, when, at almost the same time, the Storstad came and cut my ship right down between the line of the two funnels.

"I then shouted to the Storstad to keep ship full speed ahead to fill in the hole he had made in our side, but he immediately backed away. The Empress then began to fill and listed over rapidly.

"When I saw the danger was great, I ran full speed ahead with the object of beaching the ship to save as many lives as possible, but almost immediately the engines stopped, caused by the ship filling, and going over all the time to starboard.

"I had, in the meantime, given orders to launch all the lifeboats, rushing along the starboard side and throwing all the [illegible] myself of the boats numbers 1, 3, 5 and 7, and returned to the bridge again, when I saw the chief officer rushing to the bridge to [illegible] me.

"I told him to send at once to the wireless operator to send out the distress signals, which he told me he had already done. I then told him to get out as many of the lifeboats as possible. This is the last time I saw the cheif officer.

Saved by Lifeboat.

"It was about three or four minutes after that, the ship turned over and foundered, it seemed as though I was shot from the bridge into the water, and was taken down with the suction. The next thing I remember was being on top of a piece of wooden grating. How long I was on this I do not know, but I heard some men shout from the lifeboat, 'There is the Captain, let us save him,' and they came alongside and pulled me into the boat.

"This boat had already about 30 people on board. We then did our best to assist in saving others. We pulled around and picked up 20 or 25 persons in the boat and had 10 [illegible] alongside, some having ropes around their wrists when they had not sufficient strength to hold on without.

OFFICERS AND SURVIVORS SAY COLLIER COULD HAVE SAVED MANY MORE

"Seeing we could not possibly save any more, we pulled to the Storstad which was then about one and one half miles away. After getting these people on board, I left with six of the crew and returned to the wreck again, thinking there might be more to rescue, but when we reached the scene everybody had gone; we searched around but could not see anybody, so we returned to the Storstad. It was just 15 minutes from the time our ship was struck that she went down completely."

"What was the cause of the collision?" asked the Coroner.

"The Storstad running into the Empress of Ireland, which was stopped," answered Kendall.

Did Not Hear Explosion.

In reply to a question by the Coroner, the Captain said the cause of the accident was the Storstad running into a ship which had come to a full stop. "Our ship was stationary," he said. The following questions were put by the Foreman of the Coroner's Jury.

"When you shouted to the Storstad to stand by, did you receive a reply?"

"I did not."

"Was it possible for the officer in charge not to have heard you?"

"No; for I shouted through the megaphone and my voice could not fail of being heard and he did hear. As a seaman, however, he should have done this without my telling him. I shouted the same thing five times through the megaphone, 'keep ahead; keep ahead; do not stop;' there was no wind and my voice must have been heard. I called to come alongside, but he paid no attention to the request."

"Was there any explosion?"

"None that I know of. Of course, when a ship goes down, as the Empress did, there is a certain air pressure which resembles the report of an explosion."

"How many lifeboats were there on the Empress?"

"More than sufficient for 2000 persons."

"Was there any resemblance to a panic?"

"None whatever. I had full control of my crew and everybody—crew and passengers—behaved splendidly. The crew were all in their places and were thrown into the sea while doing their duty. Four boats were launched, but the ship going over caused the remaining boats to clear themselves."

Believes Collier Could Have Saved More.

James Rankin, a passenger from Vancouver, and a marine engineer, testified:

"I was aroused by the noise and ran out. There was a big pitch to the deck. I really cannot tell you how the accident occurred. I heard the whistle blow when I reached the deck. there was a heavy fog and you could hardly see 50 yards. Five minutes after the collision the fog lifted. The boats in the lower side were in the water and four or five got away and saved many people.

"I think that if the collier had kept her bow in the hole she had made in the Ireland's side, she would have been able to make the shore and probably have saved every one.

"The behavior of the officers of the Empress was beyond all praise. They did everything they could. The engineers remained below until they could get no more steam and the lights went out."

Engineer Testifies in Bed.

Chief Engineer Sampson, who remained in the engine room until the fires were drowned and the lights extinguished, was too ill to appear, and his testimony was taken at his bedside.

"I was in the engine room until the lights went out and there was no more steam," he said. "I had great difficulty in reaching the decks owing to the great list of the ship. No sooner had I got on deck when the boats of the port side. which had broken loose, swept down on top of us and carried us under water. When I came to the surface I found myself under a lifeboat and entangled in wreckage. I was finally pulled into one of the boats and could see the collier about a mile and a half away. Immediately before the collision we went full speed astern and then stopped. Then I got the order 'full speed ahead,' but had only started the engines when the crash came. We then kept her full speed ahead to try to reach the shore, as long as we had steam. Owing to the steam failing us, and then the lights also, we could keep the engines going for only a few moments. There was no explosion of any kind.

"I saw no reason why the collier did not keep much closer than she did, as if she did there would have been many lives saved. I am also of the opinion that if she had stuck to us we would have reached the shore."

William James, wireless operator at Father Point, told of being awakened by his assistant at 1:55 a. m., by the news that the Empress had been in collision by another ship. He then took charge and forwarded the word to the Lady Evelyn and Eureka. The Empress gave no reply further than to say that she was 20 miles from Rimouski.

Water Boiling Up Shows Scene.

Capt. Belanger of the Eureka told of the trip he had made to the scene of the wreck. He was not sure on his first trip of the exact position where she had sunk. On the second, however, he could tell from the boiling up from beneath the muddy water where the wrecked vessel lay. He told of gathering what bodies he could find.

After a moment's deliberation by the jury it was decided to adjourn the inquest for one week. In the meantime Coroner Pinhault will consult with the District Attorney, with the purpose of determining what may be done toward procuring the evidence of the Captain and crew of the Storstad, which arrived at Quebec today and proceeded to Montreal to land her cargo.

During the day Coroner Pinhault gave an order for the removal of all the bodies that had been brought ashore. Relatives who had identified bodies were allowed to remove them and the others were taken to Quebec.

STORSTAD SKIPPER SILENT ON CRASH

Up to Present Capt. Anderson Has Made No Statement Regarding Wreck.

QUEBEC, May 30.—So far as Quebec is concerned, the Dominion Government has taken no steps to learn the facts of the disaster other than through the Coroner at Rimouski. Capt. [illegible] H. Anderson sailed his smashed ship round Point Levis this morning and went on his way to Montreal, without interruption from anyone and contrary to the expectation of his owners and agents, who reached here only to learn that they would have to go back to Montreal to see him.

It is believed here by many marine men that it will develop at the official hearing that the collision was duc to a misunderstanding of signals so natural under the circumstances that the verdict will be "an unavoidable accident."

Such a verdict, if rendered, may lead, it is stated, to a marked change in the signal system now in use wherever ships sail upon the waters.

It has been established to the satisfaction of the Canadian Pacific Railway officials, they say, and Capt. Anderson is said to agree, that there was no fog worth mentioning. A light haze covered the water and it was an easy matter for both skippers to see well ahead. Capt. Kendall actually saw the Storstad while she was two miles away, according to his calculations. He saw her lights, knew which way she was heading, and just what the position of the two ships would be if they kept on their course.

Anderson also saw the Empress, but it is not clear that he was certain of the latter's course. He has indicated that he was not and that he will assert, when the time comes, that the Empress wrongfully attempted to cross his bows. He talked to one or two persons on the way up the river from Rimouski here and they have given indications of what he will claim, though they do not go into details.

Collier Storstad Expected to Reach Montreal Today.

THREE RIVERS, Que., May 30.—The Storstod, the collier that rammed the Empress of Ireland, passed here at 3:45 p m. today, in care of the wrecking tug Strathcona. She was down by the head and making poor progress. She is expected to reach Montreal at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

175 BODIES ARE SENT TO QUEBEC

Photographs of Faces of the Dead Are Taken to Aid in Work of Identification.

By Associated Press.

QUEBEC, May 30.—While the Coroner's inquiry into the sinking of the steamer Empress of Ireland was under way, at Rimonski, the bodies of 175 victims of the disaster that had been recovered were placed aboard the Government vessel Lady Grey for transportation here and tonight her arrival, expected at a late hour, was anxiously awaited.

A mortuary chamber at the wharf was ready for the bodies, long rows of platforms, each covered with white cloth and edged with black, having been erected to receive them. The sides of the chamber were heavily draped, while folds of black crepe covered the outside of the structure. Special police were on duty to guard the bodies and control the throngs assembled at the wharf.

While these preparations had been made for the reception of the dead, those who had been saved were being well cared for. With the exception of about two score, most of them suffering in the Rimouski hospital from injuries, all had been brought to this city yesterday.

Today the death of the first passenger from exposure was reported from Rimonski. The victim is Cox Edwards from Yokohama. The injured at Rimonski and the three in the local hospital are in good hands.

Photographs of the faces of the dead were taken by railway photographers at Rimouski today to aid in the work of identification.

The giving out tonight by the Canadian Pacific of a list of steerage passengers showed that 226 of them had come from the United States. Nearly all were of birth or extraction foreign to that country, however, and were on their way back to Europe. Most of them appeared to be either natives or children of natives of Central Europe. A large number of them were saved, although how many the incompleteness of reports in the hands of the Canadian Pacific Railroad makes it impossible to determine.

An instructor in music for that boy or girl, at home or in classes, can be found through the Post-Dispatch Musical Want Columns.

Survivors Give Graphic Accounts of Experiences When Ship Sank

QUEBEC, May 30.—Gripping stories of one of the greatest of ocean tragedies were told here today by survivors of the Empress of Ireland. Many of those saved are injured and all are suffering from exposure and from the immersion in the icy waters of the St. Lawrence. Some of the stories follow:

SWIMS FOR HOUR WITH GIRL OF 8 ON HIS BACK

ROBERT W. CRELLEN, miner of Silverstone, British Columbia: "I swam for over an hour with a golden-haired little girl of eight on my back. We were finally rescued. When we arrived in Quebec she kept asking me when her mamma and sister would be with her. I could not bring myself to tell her they had died in the icy waters. They were Mrs. Sabina Barber, a widow 38 years and little Evelyn, 8 years old. The little girl I saved is Florence. In our party were William Barry and Mrs. Barber and two children, all of Silverstone. We were on a holiday trip to England. When we were hit none of us left our staterooms. We didn't think there was anything serious, but when I heard the scurrying on deck I went up and saw the danger. I immediately got the Barbers up, put some clothes on them, and later we stood on deck waiting. A great hole was in one side of the ship and she listed over so far that it was only with the greatest difficulty we could get them all up the companionway. We got to the rail and stood there. I held Florence and Mrs. Barber held her little sister.

"Then as the ship listed we climbed over the rail and walked cautiously down the ship's side to the water's edge, trying to avoid falling into the portholes. Just as we reached the water's edge the ship gave a tremor that was truly terrible. We knew it was all over. I saw Mrs. Barber and her child tottering toward the water and reaching out their hands to me. I tried to get them, but God, I couldn't reach them, and that's the last I saw of them.

"Then I jumped into the water with this little girl here. She was a wonderfully brave little girl. Cold as it was, and terrible as was the water, with dead bodies mingled with struggling forms, she never cried. I could feel her hands grip my neck, and I could feel her little limbs shake, but she never cried. Finally we found a collapsible boat floating on the water. We opened it and with some other men we got into it. We saved between twenty and twenty-five in that boat. But oh, how I wished we could have saved this kiddie's people, too."

Chicagon Clutches Belt on Dead Body and Saves Self

J. GARDE, Chicago: I saved myself by clinging to a dead body which was afloat. It had a life preserver and it supported me until I was picked up by a boat from the collier.

I should have died but for that dead man's help.

MAJ. ATTWELL, Toronto: Both myself and wife were miraculously saved. I obtained a life belt for my wife and we jumped into the water together when we saw that the vessel was doomed to go down. We both sank three times, being carried under by the suction of the foundering vessel. When we came up the third time I saw a lifeboat near, and I swam to it, pulling my wife after me. Then those in the boat pulled us in and we were saved.

The impact was just sufficient to awaken us. It sounded as if our boat had struck a rock. It was very slight, and I was surprised when I afterwards came to realize the awful consequences of the crash. When we got on the deck there were very few persons to be seen. In fact, the people on the deck were so few that they were hardly noticeable.

The reason for this is that when the boat had listed to one side, the stairs from the sleeping apartments up to the boat decks were very difficult, almost impossible to mount. I did not see the hole in the side of our ship as I rushed for the stairs, but I did see the water pouring in in such volume that it threatened to drown us before we could mount the stairs.

London Lawyer Sucked Under, Bobs Up, Swims to Safety

J. FERGUS DUNCAN, London advocate: "The first boat lowered upset and those who crowded into it were plunged headlong into the water.

"My berth was on the starboard side. I heard the whistles and fog horns, as well as the reversing of the engines. Then came the crash. I went out on the deck. It was empty. Looking over the side, I saw the collier moving away. A boat was lowered from the bridge, but one of the davits worked more quickly than the other and the living cargo was shot into the water. I hurried back to my cabin and as the ship took a bigger list I did not wait any longer, but went out again.

"Frightened passengers were asking what the trouble was and began donning lifebelts. As the ship tilted heavily, I could not stand up on the deck any longer and had to climb up on the railing. It was awful to see those poor women who had not strength to keep their hold on the railing as they were hurled back against the cabin. What became of them I don't know. As the ship prepared for the final plunge, I slid down the plates, of her side into the sea. As I reached the water the steam came bursting out of the side of the ship, causing a great commotion.

"When the last plunge came, I was sucked under, and, coming to the surface, I saw no boat around, so I struck out for the other ship. One of the liner's lifeboats came by, so I clung to the ropes and eventually got into the small vessel, exhausted and nearly frozen. We were taken on board the Storstad and placed in the engine room.

"Some of the survivors were raving mad from the shock and hardships and the terrible scenes.

Bride Floats Out From Wreck on a Deck Chair

MRS. THOMAS GREENAWAY, Toronto Salvation Army: "I was awakened by the crash, but I was not nervous until I heard a steward ordering the passengers to go up on the deck. There was a great rush from the cabins, in which I joined, and in the excitement, I clung to a man I thought was my husband. We have only been married a week. As we reached the deck the ship was down on one side, so that we could have walked on the other side to the water's edge.

"Suddenly, on looking at my companion, I discovered that he was not my husband, so I set out to look for him among those who were crowding the side of the ship. By that time the ship was nearly under water. When the final lurch came I gave myself up as lost. I went down with the ship, but an explosion occurred and I was tossed up out of the water, bruised and hurt by pieces of wood.

"I became unconscious. In time I regained my senses and found myself floating about on a deck chair. I lay there, too weak to move, but, hearing a shout ahead, I saw a raft with two men on it. One of these reached out to me and pulled me aboard with an oar."

Gives Belt to Woman and Swims for His Life

KENNETH McINTYRE, Toronto: "I was in the second cabin with most of the Salvation Army passengers. Virtually every leading officer of the Salvation Army in Canada is gone."

"Commissioner Rees and his wife and the children went down, and only three of his family survive. Out of our Salvation party of 150 on board, probably less than 20 were rescued.

"I was on the upper deck, and, therefore, had a better chance to get to safety than those in the lower berths. The water came in through the port holes of the lower decks, before the passengers were aware of danger.

"My three comrades went to the bottom. I swam in the direction of the vessel than ran us down and was pulled into a lifeboat of the collier. I saw the collier standing not far from where the Empress foundered, She was all lighted up.

"When I was taken on board I saw many men rescued, practically unclothed. I was almost in a state of nakedness myself and the rest of those on board were shivering and in a bad state from the icy water of the river and the chilly morning air. Soon, however, we were attended to by those on board the collier and made warm and comfortable.

"I was aroused from my sleep by the impact and awakened the others in my cabin. I could then hear plainly the rush of water and I felt sure that something serious had happened. I also heard the machinery of the boat running. It did not stop immediately after the crash, but continued until the explosion occurred.

"I grabbed a life preserver and went out to the deck. On deck there were no life belts and quite a number of people were standing about apparently unable to determine what to do. I gave my belt to Mrs. Foord, one of our party. I tied the belt on her myself."

Ship's Surgeon, Trapped, Pulled Through Port Hole

DR. J. F. GRANT, ship's surgeon: I was in my cabin, and knew nothing of the accident until the boat listed so badly that I tumbled out of my berth and then rolled under it. I tried to turn on the light, but there was no power. I reached the bolted door, but the list was so strong that it took me considerable time to open it.

When I finally got out and reached the passageway it was so steep, due to the way the ship was slanted, that my efforts to climb up were rendered impossible by the carpet to which I was clinging breaking away. I then scrambled up and managed to get my head through a porthole, but I was unable to get my shoulders through. At that time the ship was lying almost flat in the water on her starboard side. A passenger was standing on the portside of the ship and finally managed to pull me through the porthole.

About 100 passengers were gathered on the side of the ship at the time, but a moment after I had joined them the vessel took another list and plunged to the bottom. I next found myself in the water and swam toward the lights of the steamer Storstad, and when nearly exhausted from the struggle and exposure I was picked up by a lifeboat. This boat went on to the scene of the disaster and picked up a load of survivors from the water and then took them on board the Storstad. They were wrapped in blankets and I was provided with the clothes which I now wear. When able I did what I could to help the survivors. Some of them, however, were in such exhausted condition that they died.

Saves Son, 15, Dives for Wife, but Misses Her

PHILLIP LAWLER, steerage passenger from Brantford, Ontario: "I was on my way to England on a visit with my wife and son, Herbert, aged 15. In the wreck I lost my wife, but managed to save my boy.

"The first I knew of the accident was the boat shook from end to end, and not two minutes later water soaked into the steerage quarters.

"No sooner had the water come into the boat than there was a tremendous explosion that seemed to rip the sides of the boat open. There was a roar, a hiss, and then we practically shot out into the sea.

"I managed to grasp my wife, at the same time helping my boy Herbert to reach the surface of the water safely. Somehow my wife slipped from my hands, and when I looked around for her she was under. As Herbert could swim, I dived under for my wife, but could not get her."

Dead Nobleman Gave His Life Belt to Another

M. D. A. DARLING, Shanghai: "I was saved by the life belt that might have saved Sir Henry Seton-Kerr.

"My cabin was opposite Sir Henry's, and when I opened my door he opened his, and we bumped into each other in the passageway. He had a life belt in his hand, and I was empty-handed. Sir Henry offered me the life belt, and I refused it. He said, 'Go on man, take it, and I will try to get another one.' I told him to rush out himself, and save his own life while I looked after myself. Sir Henry then got angry, and actually forced the life belt over me. Sir Henry pushed me along the corridor. I never saw him after that. He went back to his cabin, and I believe he never came out again, because the ship disappeared a few minutes later. I owe the fact that I am alive to Sir Henry, and, while I believe he practically lost his life, because he wished to hand me the life belt, I am certain that he would have handed it to someone else."

Winnipeg Man Describes Voices Calling for Help

WALTER ERGINGOT, Winnipeg: The weather was fine and everybody was happy when the steamer left Quebec. At about 10 o'clock at night we passed the Alsatan and cheered her as she passed us in the darkness.

At 11 o'clock I went to bed, and was sleeping soundly when, at about 2 o'clock, I was awakened suddenly by a loud noise and a shock. There was no grating sound. For some seconds there was silence and then I felt the ship turn on one side. I fell out of my berth and slipping my pants on I reached down and grabbed two life preservers. I did this because I knew by the angle of the cabin floor that the boat was dangerously on one side. I gave one preserver to my fellow passenger and rushed into the corridors.

Other passengers were rushing out. I saw that some of them were leaving their life belts and I shouted: 'Take your life preservers with you.' By this time the water was entering through the windows in streams. The boat was turning more and more on one side and the water was filling the corridors quickly. Many of the people could not make their way against the force of the water in the corridors and that is why so few got up on deck in time. It was terrible to hear the cries of the women and children. The men helped the women and children nobly, but the whole thing happened so fast it was impossible to do much.

Then an officer called in a loud voice: "Everybody try to save himself." I shall never forget the warning. It was the last order. One minute afterwards the Empress of Ireland, which left Quebec only a few hours before, in all her majesty, was gone.

I jumped from the boat two minutes before she sank and swam away from her. I was drawn by the suction and I feared I was never coming to the top again. I gave up all hope, but when the suction ceased I came to the surface. It was a horrible scene and I shall never forget it as long as I live. The dawn was just breaking and there was just enough daylight to see the heads moving in the water. A large number seemed to be swimming, but after a while their struggles ceased, and one by one they went to the bottom.

It was frightful to hear all the voices calling for help. The boat which struck the Empress was about 400 feet away from me. I swam towards her and was picked up, half dead. I was in the water half an hour and it was bitter cold.

The freight steamer lifted a number of men and women out of the water and many of them were badly cut on the head and face. One man had a broken leg, but he was saved.

The doctor of the Empress worked harder than anybody else and he seemed to be everywhere at once, attending to the wounds of those who appeared to be dying.

Father Dies That Child May Live; Husband and Wife Die Together

In the stories of survivors three concerning husbands and wives stand out. Laurence Irving and his wife went down with the ship clasped in each others arms and were lost. A husband and father silently sank to death while his wife and child near him supported by life preservers were saved. A man and wife separated on the ship, were both saved, but each thought the other dead for hours.

FOR sheer heroism the story of the death of H. R. O'Hara will live long in the annals of the sea. With his wife and six-year-old daughter, Helen, he rushed on deck with the other passengers. Some place on his way up he found two life preservers. He could find no more. When the final lurch came he and his wife and daughter went into the water locked in one another's arms. None of them could swim. When they came to the surface O'Hara held for a while to his daughter's life belt, but he soon found that the burden was too great and that the little girl was sinking owing to his weight upon the belt. Slipping behind her he quietly released his hold and without a word sank to his death.

The story was related by his wife, who with horror saw what her husband had done. She was found shortly afterwards, hysterical, clinging to the keel of an overturned lifeboat, by Harry Freeman of Milwaukee. The little girl had managed to keep afloat and she and her mother were united in the rescue train from Rimouski last night. They were cared for by friends here and hurried on to their home in Toronto.

THE escape of Mr. and Mrs. Freeman was one of the incidents tending to make less terrible the fate of so many hundreds of others. Clad only in pajamas and sweaters, they rushed on deck just in time to leap overboard, hand in hand, in the rush of water following the sinking, but they were separated. But both were strong swimmers and they were united again aboard the Eureka. They spent the day at the Chateau Frontenac, strangely uncomfortable in their borrowed clothes, and never quite releasing each other's hands. Neither of them was able to talk much of their terrible experiences.

"Just before the collision came," said Mrs. Freeman, her lips trembling, "I awoke with a sort of premonition that something dreadful was going to happen. I lay there thinking of it, and then I heard the whistles going and the men running on deck. That woke by husband up, too. Oh, when we jumped overboard into that black, cold water and when I felt my husband's hands torn away from mine, I never thought we should be alive and together again," and the little woman broke down and laid her head on her husband's shoulder. He was no less affected than she.

Laurence Irving and Wife Sunk in Each Others Arms

LAURENCE IRVING, the actor and dramatist, lost his life in a heroic effort to save his wife, whose stage name was Mabel Hackney. F. E. Abott of Toronto saw the Irvings go to their death. He was the last person now living who spoke to them.

This is the story told today by Mr. Abott:

"I met Mr. Irving first in the passageway and he said calmly, 'Is the boat going down?' I said that it looked like it.

"'Dearie,' Irving then said to his wife, 'Hurry, there is no time to lose.'

"Mrs. Irving then began to cry, and as the actor reached for a life belt the boat suddenly lurched forward and he was thrown against the door of his cabin. His face was bloody and Mrs. Irving became frantic.

"'Keep cool,' he warned her, but she persisted in putting her arms around him. He forced the lifebelt over her head and pushed her out of the door. He then practically carried her upstairs. I said, 'Can I help you?' and Irving said 'Look after yourself first, old man, but God bless you all the same.'

"I left them struggling and made my way to the deck. I jumped and caught a piece of floating timber, clutching that tightly, I looked back. Then the ship went down and I saw Irving and his wife go with it, clasped in each others' arms."

Seaman Believes Mixed Signals Caused Collision

"I believe it will be successfully demonstrated," said a seafaring man today "that the collision between the Empress of Ireland and the Storstad was the inevitable result of mixed signals in use at sea.

The explantion will be that Captain Kendall of the Empress sounded what he intended as "helm" signals and that Captain Anderson, owing to the fact that the fog had descended upon the water between the two ships a few minutes before, believed these signals were "fog" signals. The usual "fog" signal—one blast, when sounded as a "helm" signal means "I am going to port (turning to the left). In the same manner, two blasts of the whistle, when sounded as a "fog" signal means "my engines are stopped," but as a "helm" signal, signify "I am going to starboard."

These are the signals that were used and one captain construed them as "fog" signals, while the other thought "helm" signals were being exchanged.

It has been established to the satisfaction of the Canadian Pacific officials here, and Captain Anderson is said to agree, that there was no fog worth mentioning. A light haze covered the water and it was an easy matter for both skippers to see miles ahead. Captain Kendall actually saw the Storstad while she was two miles away, according to his calculations. He saw her lights, knew which way she was heading, and just what the position of the two ships would be if they kept on their course.

Anderson also saw the Empress, but it is not clear that he was certain of the latter's course. He has indicated that he was not. He will assert that the Empress wrongfully attempted to cross his bows. He talked to one or two persons on the way up from Rimouski and they have given some indications of what he will claim.

Volturno Hero, in Empress Crew, Gives Detail of Disasters

Winner of Heroism Medal Says Collier's Lights Came Out of Fog Then Came the Crash.

QUEBEC, May 30.—Two participants in the tragedy of the burning of the Volturno at sea last year sat side by side in the Seamans' Institute here today, survivors also of the wreck of the Empress of Ireland. One of them was J. H. Price, an ordinary seaman on the Ireland, who, while serving last year on the Devonian, plunged overboard and saved a woman passenger of the Volturno. For this he was to receive the Albert medal for gallantry at sea on his return to England, which he was making on the Ireland.

The other was a pantryman on the Ireland, John Cope, who was one of those saved from the Volturno. Price's story of the accident was one of the clearest of those related by the survivors here today. He said:

"We had just left the pilot. He had clambered down the starboard gangway into his tender, and I had just got the sea ladder made up and was carrying it forward for stowage. As I got to the break of the deck bridge, I saw the Storstad bearing down on our starboard bow. I could see her mast lights then, but neither of her side lights. Her course was somewhat across ours, and I heard our bridge signal them to starboard their helm. We did the same, with our engines running full speed astern and stopped our headway.

Ripped Into Engine Room.

"Then I saw the Storstad sheer away, and her starboard light showed, but she kept coming on, and it was clear she was going to hit us. She struck us just about at the starboard gangway. I should think she was have gone into us by the No. 1 or forward stokehold, and then ripped aft into the engine room.

"I guess it sprung us all open aft. I don't think the water-tight bulkheads aft ever got closed."

At this point Charles Spencer, the only one of the bellboy crew saved, broke in.

"The bulkheads were closed forward," he said. "I ran down into the forward deck and passed the order when the siren blew all hands to the boats to close the bulkheads. I yelled to the boys there to close the bulkheads," and here the youngster, he looked scarcely 14, broke and sobbed. "Harry Baker and Charley Turnstall, they were my chums. I saw them standing by and closing the doors. They were both lost. They never got on deck."

"Yes," went on Price, "as I felt the crash I heard the order from the bridge and the siren blew all hands. I dropped the sea ladder and ran up onto the bridge to clear the emergency boat, which was held there, swung out board, ready to be lowered. That was the only boat, I think, that got fairly launched, and there was no one there to get into it.

Saw First Officer Swept Away.

"The ship was already listing way over, and, with the first officer, I clung to the combing of the Marconi house. There was some boat gear lashed on top there, and its lashings gave way and carried the first officer overboard with them.

"There was terrible confusion on the deck as the ship listed. Everything gave way. I saw two or three men carried overboard as great winches broke their lashings and lurched into the sea. People were scrambling up from below and trying to get on the port side of the ship away from the water. It was all I could do to hang on to the Marconi house. Finally I saw the ship was going.

"I saw a spar in the water and made a dive for it. I made it, but just then the ship gave a wallow and went under, and the spar and I were carried down with the suction.

"When I came up the water was all covered with people, dead and alive, some struggling and some bobbing about, corpses.

"The only light came from the flare of some of the automatic life buoys, which got free when the ship sank. They made a sort of creepy light over it all. Uh!" he shuddered. "It was like bugs on a pool."

Price then found a collapsible boat floating nearby. He crawled into it and other men followed him. Finally they came across two women swimming bravely. They were pulled aboard followed by the chief steward. All of these persons were later taken in by a boat from the Storstad. Price was picked up by the pilot boat Eureka.

THINKS SKIPPERS MISREAD SIGNALS

Canadian Pacific Head Ventures One Captain Believed Fog Whistles Were Ordinary Blasts.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

QUEBEC, May 30.—Capt. Elliott, Superintendent of the Canadian Pacific here, who has charge of all the company's maritime matters, asserted to the correspondent of the Post-Dispatch tonight, that the Storstad hit the Empress of Ireland about amidship, driving into her almost at right angles. He differs broadly from some of the statements of Capt. Kendall of the Empress.

"It has been said that the Storstad backed away," said Capt. Elliot, "but that is not so, according to what I have learned. The Storstad drove right into the Ireland and stayed there."

"The Ireland was moving slowly at the time of the impact, and her momentum carried the bow of the Storstad around until the collier had been swung about in such a position that continued progress of the Ireland caused the latter ship to draw away. Then the Storstad fell back, her bow dropping out of the hole that had been made in the Ireland's side, and the water rushed in.

"There was a list to starboard almost immediately and it grew worse until the Ireland turned over on the starboard, and sank. No one knows just when she sank nor how long it was after the actual obllision. It was not long, and that is all we know."

Capt. Elliot then explained the possibility of a mistake in the interpretation of signals. Commenting on it he said.

"There is not any difference in a fog signal. It is simply the sounding of the whistle. The blasts are not supposed to be less than three seconds long in a fog, but as a matter of fact it will be rather hard to sound a blast of less than three seconds. In case of fog one blasts means one thing, while in clear weather it means another thing entirely. The same is true of two blasts of the whistles.

"I don't know what blasts were sounded by the Ireland, nor what Capt. Anderson answered, but I am convinced that one captain believed that fog signals were being used, while the other thought each signal, back and forth, indacating a shifting of the course."

Captain Kendall and Engineer Listed With the Injured.

RIMOUSKI, May 30.—A number of injured survivors of the Empress of Ireland are still in the hospital here. An incomplete list of them, with their injuries, was given out tonight as follows:

Gregory Strake, thigh fractured.

V. Fess, thigh fractured.

Mrs. A. E. Mullins, both legs fractured.

A. E. Hirst, fractured arm.

James McKeown, internal injuries.

R. Simonds, congestion of lungs.

Mrs. Simonds, badly bruised.

Mr. Wakefield, congestion of lungs. His son, assistant purser of the Empress, was with him.

J. Brown, steward, internal injuries.

One foreigner, thought to be a Greek, unconscious; internal injuries.

Sampson, chief engineer, bad shock.

Seybold, first cabin, bad shock, slightly burned.

Capt. Kendall, shock, bruised.

Ship's Surgeon Saved, Borrows Trousers and Goes to Work.

RIMOUSKI, May 30.—Dr. Grant, the surgeon of the Ireland, who was dragged through a port hole to safety, exclaimed when he got his bearings "There's better work for me than standing here, will someone lend me a pair of trousers?" Tonight, just as the Chateau Frontenac's fashionably attired guests were making for the dining room, Dr. Grant, clad in an old pair of gray trousers, a gray sweater and a yachting hat of some white material, appeared helping to carry one of the injured survivors to a waiting automobile. The injured man's head hung limp. Grant lifted him into the auto, then stood on the running board as the machine sped away and supported the hanging head of the unfortunate. The incident was typical of the day's happenings among the survivors.

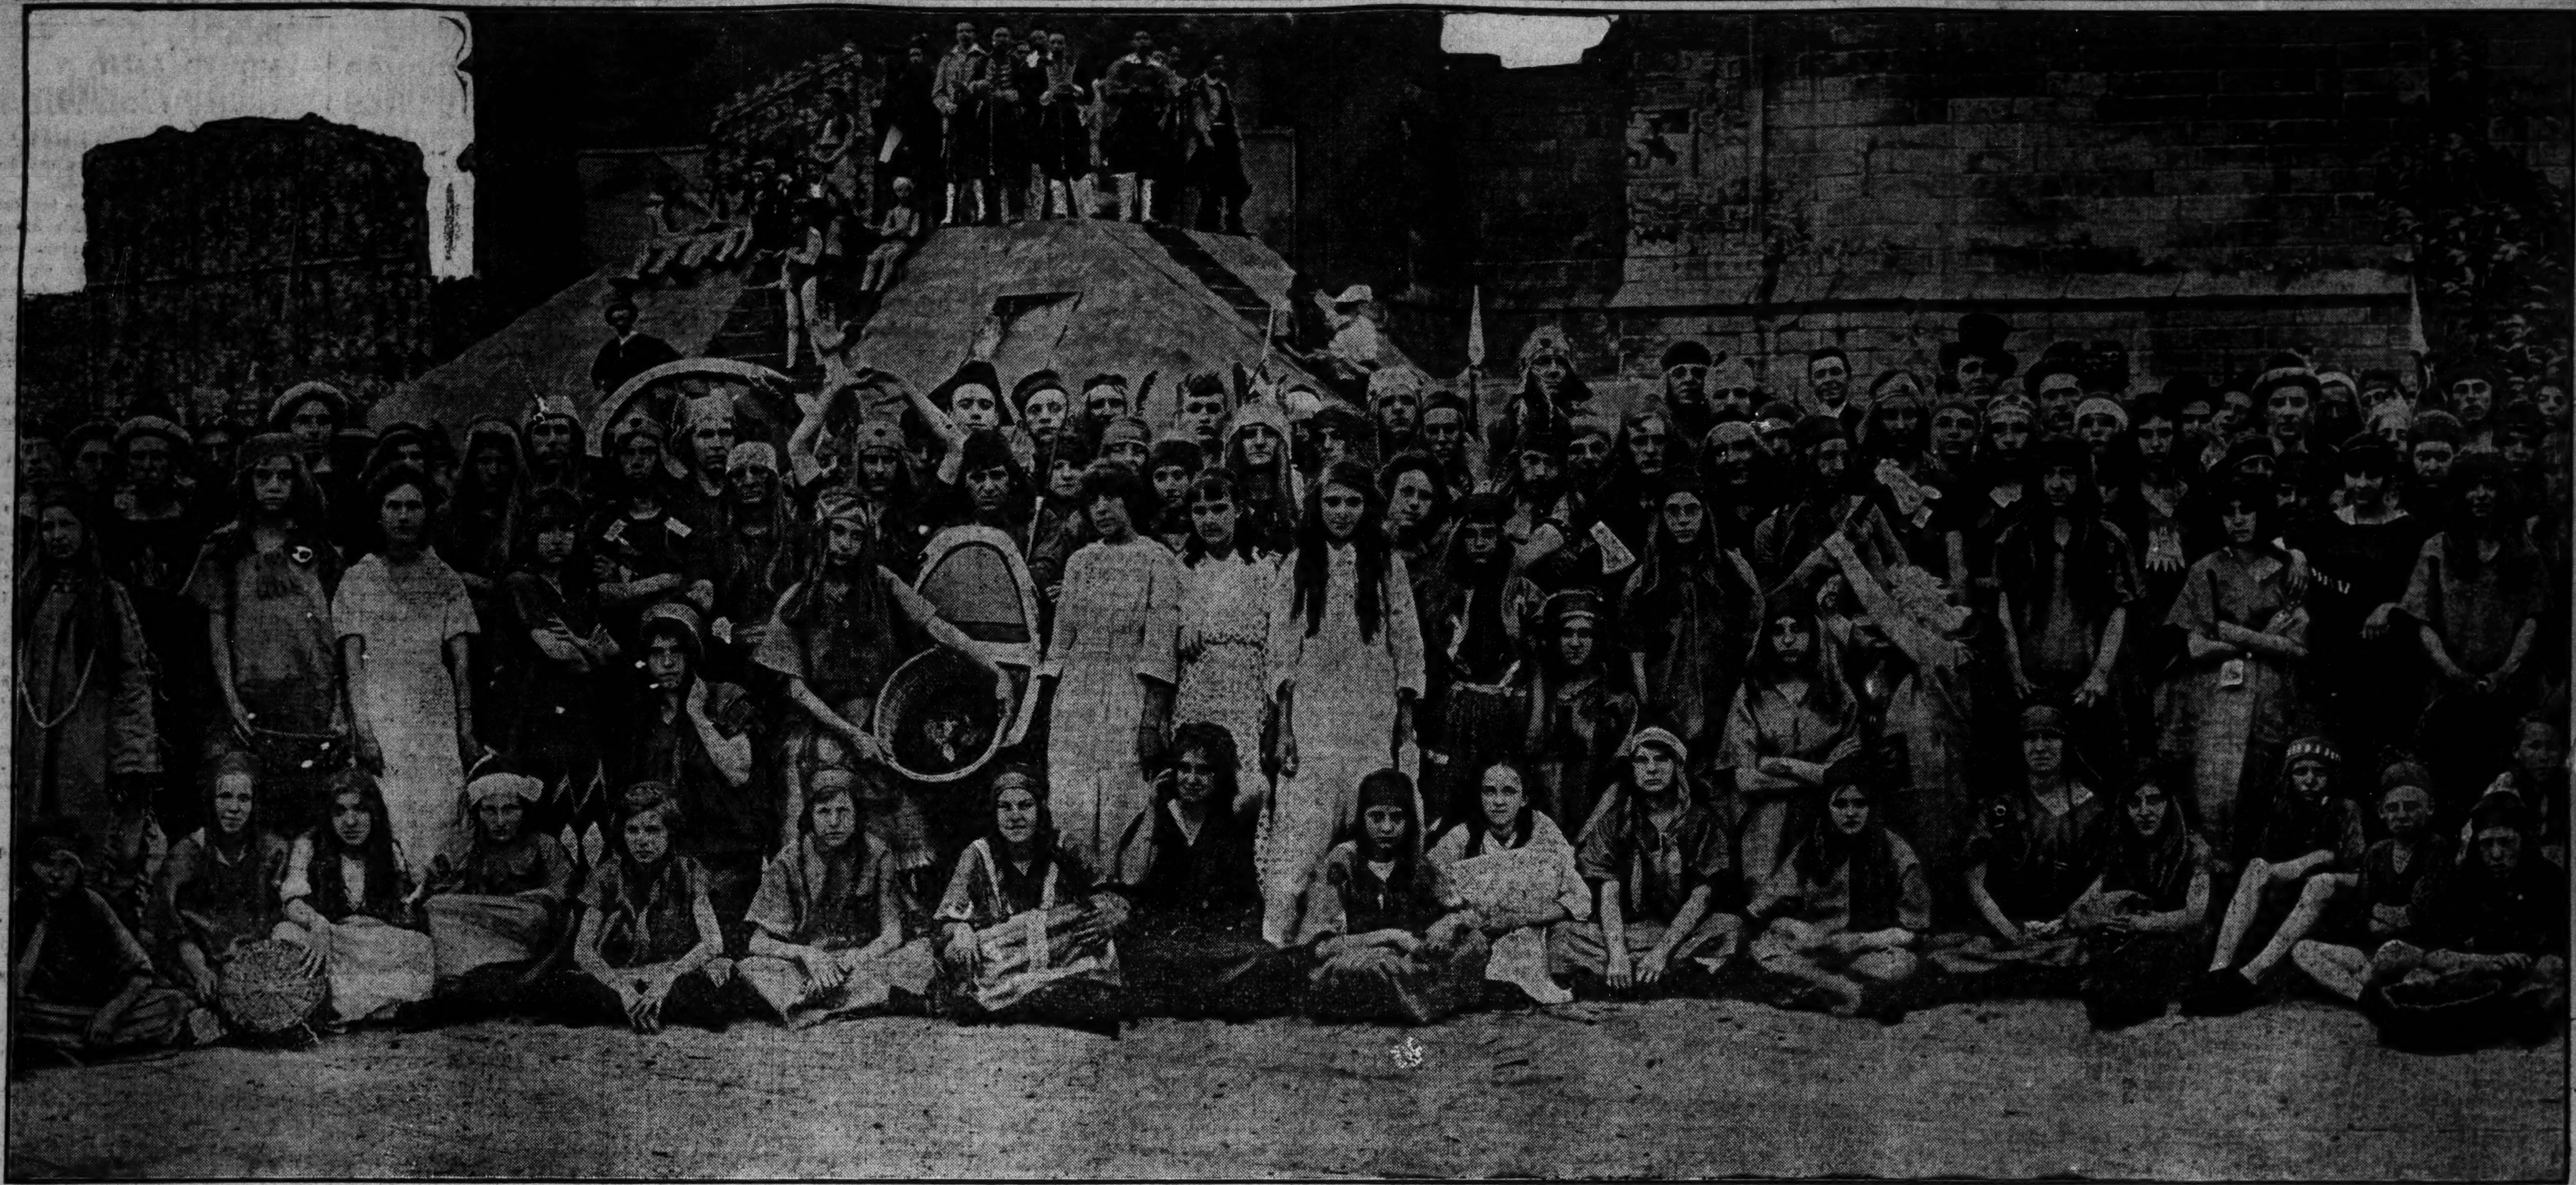
Pageant Actors Who Appear in Picturesque Early Scenes of the Great Spectacle



THE seated figures in this group are from the Mound Builder scene of the Pageant. The Indian figures standing behind are from the Indian Life and other early scenes, in which the founding and settlement of St. Louis are portrayed. The mound at the left is the one on which the Mound Builder high priest stands in the opening scene. The figures on the mound, and at the rear of the Indians, are French and Spanish soldiers and settlers of different nationalities. About 125 players appear in this group. The Pageant cast numbers 5600, Masque cast 1150, chorus and band 600.

More Than 100,000 Throng Art Hill to See Pageant

for a few minutes participants in the Pageant.

The first voices to join came from the seats near the front, but others were swiftly added until the song rolled triumphantly from side to side of the great basin, and ascending, beat against the wall of the Art Museum. The effect of voices answering voices across the lagoon was that of a gigantic antiphony.

Audience Held Enchanted.

From the moment when the High Priest of the Mound Builders began chanting his eerie threnody over the body of the dead chief until the wearers of the blue and the gray fraternized in symbol of the restoration of peace after the Civil War, the witchery of the resplendent panorama unrolling itself upon the stage held the audience enchanted.

For the most part they sat in silence, their eyes fixed upon the kaleidoscopic spectacle and their ears alert to catch every possible syllable of the actors' voices. But at several climaxes of supreme beauty they burst spontaneously into delighted applause.

Such a moment came when De Soto, erect and majestic in his costume of scarlet and gold, floated past on his way to the mouth of the Mississippi. Another was when Pierre Laclede (pronounced La Claid by the actors) uttered for the first time the name of the metropolis he was founding—ST. LOUIS. Still another was the running up of the Stars and Stripes on "The Day of the Three Flags."

Thrills in Indian Attack.

The audience found its liveliest thrills of the performance during the Indian attack upon the village, when the stage was alive with running men and resounded with volley upon volley, and when the heroic school mistress, Mme. Rigouche, led the defenders on with her waving flag.

The loveliest scene, the spectators seemed to think, was that depiciting the welcome to Gen. La Fayette, before whose feet girls strewed flowers and to whom a procession of beautiful women, in the costumes of the day, made their genuflections.

Another scene rewarded with applause was that showing the return of Battery A from the Mexican War, after having made one of the longest marches on record. Ninety members of Battery A took part, manning the original field pieces used in that campaign. The nervous and restive horses ridden by the officers compelled some exciting feats of horsemanship.

The spectacle ran from beginning to end with the precision of clockwork, and with a finish which was not always noticeable during its first presentation. The voices of the speakers, too, were more distinct, so that even those high on the hill could catch many of the words.

Dusk Enhances the Magic.

Deep as had been the impression made by the part of the Pageant acted by daylight; the magic of the drama was enhanced after dusk fell and electric illumination converted the stage into a dream world of gold and crimson. Upon the fairy stage passed group after group of men and women in the romantic garb of olden days, themselves like apparitions from some enchanted country. All combined to weave about the audience a fascinating spell of poetry and beauty.

In the condensation of 500 years of history into two hours of performance, Indian trod on the heels of mound builder, Spanish adventurer and priest succeeded Indian, French settler followed Spaniard, and Americans of a day which many now living still remember succeeded the French—all with the garb and customs of their time and race. It gave to many their first vivid idea of the rich historic background possessed by St. Louis.

When the final scene illustrating the Civil War period was completed, when the last notes of the national anthem had died, and when the falling of the lights extinguished the splendors of the stage, one had the sense of awakening from a dream of an unreal and exquisite world.

Facts About Last Two Pageant Performances Tonight and Tomorrow

REMAINING PERFORMANCES OF THE PAGEANT AND MASQUE—This evening and tomorrow evening, beginning at 6:30.

FREE SEATS OPEN AT 1 P. M. Many reserved seats for this evening's performance were unsold yesterday, but with good weather, they are expected to be sold before hour of performance. Prices, 25 cents to $1.50; box seats $2.50, if boxes are not sold as a whole.

The $1 and $1.50 reserved seats for tomorrow evening, and many of the cheaper seats, already belong to persons who held tickets for the Friday night performance, which was prevented by rain.

Great Throng In Silent Wonder at Moving Poetry of the Masque

That the spirit of Saint Louis, the Crusader, sank deep into the minds of the legions of spectators who viewed the Masque last night was evidenced by the intense silence throughout the two movements of the piece.

At the opening, at 8:53 p. m., hundreds who had walked about in the intermission and could not find their places in the dark, sat upon the water's edge, and from those as well as the throngs still on top of Art Hill, there was seldom a sound above a whisper, save a ripple af applause at times.

The audience was in darkness, except for a beam from a searchlight now and then. Below, mystic lights and shadows played upon the stage in fantastic hues. Wild, mystic music rose time and again as the elves and the will-o'-the-wisps danced in swaying circles hither and thither.

And a modern world sat looking down upon a dream world, with nothing to remind of today save an occasional shout from a distant hillside or the rumble of a far-away car.

As Cahokia's voice near the beginning spoke,

"For still I dream—and wait;
"And watchful waiting overcomes the world,"

It seemed as though a voice from a distant age was ringing down "the changing grooves of time." Then the apparitions of the elements on either side of the stage gradually disappeared; Wasapedan, the Great Bear, loomed high above the facade of the great temple, and in answer to Cahokia's query as to the meaning of the sword which the promised child was to bring with him, chanted out over the multitude:

"He brings it to fight for the rights of the new star-born—Freedom and brotherhood."

Giant Mississippi Comes.

Then from around the bend on the water appeared a story-book canoe, in the prow of which stood Mississippi, a giant figure, with yellow locks streaming down his shoulders. The river spirits manned the boat softly, and swimmers dived and disported all about as it drew to the landing.

Then the little St. Louis, with his giant Crusader's sword, was placed on the mound near the giant Cahokia. In the form of a cross, star-lighted, it shot its rays over those below, to be wielded later "for freedom and brotherhood."

A still deeper hush fell over the seated throng. A flush of dawn appeared upon the hitherto semi-darkened scene. Monks and priests appeared, and medieval groups representing the Nations. Then rose the age-famous chant, "Veni Creator," sung by a thousand voices.

Then this pageant departed with banners still flowing in the evening breeze, and Waspedan speaks to Little St. Louis, telling of how he shall aid in the future building of a great civic spirit.

A Moving Frieze of Humanity.

The lights were lowered, and all human figures on the man-built stage below disappeared. Far above on the wings of the temple, half-clad in darkness, appears for a few moments a moving frieze. A shaft of light strikes it, and human generations pass in slow review. Day follows Night, Doubt precedes Faith, and Maid and Mother, and Man, pass slowly by, while music of the ages rises from below. The audience still sits spellbound, then a figure, all in scarlet, appears—the symbol of Life—and moving high above the ground beneath, follows the moving frieze and disappears.

Cahokia, the giant of another race, is in the second movement of the Masque only in spirit. First comes the pioneers, singing. High above them on a lofty mound stands the temple. The curtains rustle, and Saint Louis, the Crusader Knight, steps forth with cross-hilted, gleaming sword in hand, to fight 'gainst the earth spirits.

Gold appears, clad in yellow raiment, accompanied by his retainers, and challenges St. Louis. A pioneer and Gold wrestle on the mound at the foot of the temple, and Gold is vanquished, and St. Louis, with sword raised, exclaims:

"Now freedom and strong brotherhood prevail
Amongst us, and the soul of these be blown world-far—America."

And the choral answer comes, softly, "America."

Once again the wild wierd music breaks forth, the vari-hued lights play upon the stage, and the World Adventurerers appear, coming to infuse their life's blood with that of Saint Louis and the Pioneers. With banners streaming, with colors flying, the hardy adventurers of the ages come into view.

"Who shall defy us now?" St. Louis shouts from his mound. There is a hoarse cry, and once again Gold appears, and brings War, to battle on horseback, with the flowers of the Pioneers. And once again Gold is vanquished.

Then comes poverty, with her sister evils, and their wails. A black-hooded figure slowly approaches, mounts the mound, and after being uncloaked, stands forth as Gold again, and wrestles the sword from Saint Louis, and disappears into the temple. From the sky comes a voice,

"St. Louis, call your brothers."

Gold Is Finally Vanquished.

And they appear in answer, on horseback, the cities of the Western world. Then lastly, Imigation mounts to the temple doors, and leading a child, whose head is garlanded in thorns, the new abode of Gold is stormed, and the Earth Creature comes out, and falls, at last admitting defeat.

So ended the masque. For a moment there was no perceptible move on the part of the enthralled audience, even after the lights were lowered.

It all seemed like a fairy dream of childhood, or a sunset vision too beautiful to dispel. But fro mthe rear of the stage came the time-honored notes of "America," and suddenly the tremendous audience rose to its feet as one, and stood standing until the notes died away in the distance.

CAMDEN TO BE SENATOR

Gov. McCreary Will Name Millionaire to Suceed Bradley.

FRANKFORT, Ky., May 30.—Gov. McCreary announced tonight he would appoint Johnson N. Camden, millionaire turfman, politician and farmer of Woodford County, to the United States Senate June 16, to fill out the term of the late Senator Bradley. The election will be held in November.

Camden has accepted the appointment and will make the race for the short term in the Senate, which will end March 4, 1915.

LOSS OF APPETITE IN THE SPRING

Loss of appetite is accompanied by loss of vitality, vigor or tone, which is a more serious loss. It is common in the spring because at this time the blood is impure and impoverished and fails to give the digestive organs what they need for the proper performance of their functions.

Ask your druggist for Hood's Sarsaparilla. It makes the rich red blood your whole system demands. It is not simply a Spring medicine—but it is the best Spring medicine.

"MOVIES" OF MASQUE TO BE MADE TOMORROW

Management Induces Employers to Let Actors Off to Make Film Complete.

A moving picture rehearsal of the Masque of St. Louis will be held tomorrow, beginning at 12:30 p. m. The Pageant and Masque management has renewed its request that, for the sake of the benefit to result to St. Louis from these pictures, employers let members of the cast off for the rehearsal.

The moving picture rehearsal of the last part of the Pageant proper will be held this morning, beginning at 9:30, the first part having been posed for the "movies" yesterday morning. The management has announced that, while the pictures taken at the Masque rehearsal Friday were very good, only a few of the units were near enough to completeness to make the desired showing. Therefore the rehearsal tomorrow afternoon was decided on. Units M, N and O will begin rehearsals at 12:30, P, Q and R at 1:30 and S, T, U and V at 2:30.

In cases where members of the cast had difficulty in getting off at their places of employment, the management has taken up the matter with employers, and in every case thus far, when the importance of the matter has been made clear, the request has been cheerfully granted.

Audience Adds to Thrilling Climax of Pageant by Singing "Star Spangled Banner"

WHY NOT MAKE IT PERMANENT? ASKS NOTED SCULPTOR

Lorado Taft Comes From Chicago to Witness the Mighty Pageant Spectacle.

IS ENTHRALLED BY IT

Suggests to the Directors That Stage Be Preserved for Future Civic Shows.

Lorado Taft, noted Chicago sculptor, who came with his wife to witness last week's performances of the Pageant and Masque, was so impressed with the bigness and grandeur of the affair and the civic interest aroused in it that he wondered why St. Louis should not make entertainments of the kind permanent.

The Tafts were the guests of John H. Gundlach, chairman of the executive committee, and they occupied seats in the Gundlach box. To his host, during the evening, Taft spoke in superlatives of the wonderful natural auditorium, its adaptability for the accommodation of immense throngs and the marvelous enthusiasm of the people.

Taft Enthralled by It.

Taft told Gundlach that St. Louis had surely started something great, and that it would be a pity to abandon projects of the kind when it was apparent the people enjoyed them so fully and gave so generously of their enthusiasm and support.

"The Masque is the most poetically beautiful thing in dramatic art," he said, "and St. Louis, having succeeded so well as a pioneer in the work of production should continue the productions as annual events."

Chairman Gundlach was so well pleased by the appreciation of Taft that he sought Mayor Kiel and Percy MacKaye to tell them about it. Mayor Kiel seemed taken with the idea, and said he may recommend the preservation of the Pageant stage until a definite decision can be made.

The Mayor is already a committee of one, appointed by Chairman Gundlach, to take up the matter of preserving the stage with city authorities. Percy MacKaye has already advocated perpetuation of pageant features in St. Louis. He spoke of it before the Conference of Cities on Friday, where he declared the fact that the stage is built of lumber should not discourage the city fathers.

He maintained that many playhouses of the ancients were first erected of wood and later replaced by more permanent structures.

Sculptor Taft laid great stress upon the thought that pageantry seemed to be a new-found means of combining recreation and art, and St. Louis, by its success, should not miss the opportunity to make a name for itself in its history.

ENCH AND GERMANS IN PEACE CONFERENCE

Members of Parliaments of Two Countries Undertake to Create Good Will.

BASLE, Switzerland, May 30.—About one-third of the members of the French and German Parliaments met here today with the object of improving Franco-German relations. The conference was under the presidency of Baron d'Estournelles de Constant, for France, and Conrad Haussmann, radical member of the Reichstag, for Germany.

A declaration was issued "recognizing the great and difficult task of bringing about a definite and certain peace between two peoples, which, during their glorious and sorrowful histories, have so often come into conflict."

"Yet," the declaration continues, "the interparliamentary conference undertakes to assist in the immense effort of duucation towards reciprocal good will cessary in this task, which is not be- d the genius of the two peoples."

rmanent committees from each ntry will be organized for the pur- se of carrying on the work aimed at nteracting misleading information d prejudiced comments.

OTHER AND SON, 7, HURT BY TUMBLE FROM CAR

ageant Visitor Holding Boy's Hand Starts to Step Off When Car Starts.

Mrs. B. M. Kearney of 4857 St. Louis avenue and her son, Paul, 7 years old, ll from the rear platform of a crowd- Union car, on their way home from the Pageant at 11 o'clock last night, and the child suffered concussion of the brain.

The car had stopped near St. Louis avenue because of a blockade, and Mrs. Kearney, being so near home, had started to get off. Just as she was stepping down, holding her son's hand, the car started, and both fell. The mother's left arm was severely bruised.

id he did not have money to pay fare home. A Police Sergeant a nickel and he continued ned a hopeless search through for his wife.

Pageant Proposed by Miss Rumbold; How It Was Carried Out

THE Pageant and Masque of St. Louis had its origin in a plan, formed by Miss Charlotte Rumbold and laid before Park Commissioner Davis and Mayor Kiel, a year ago, for a grand civic celebration of the 150th anniversary of the founding of St. Louis. The actual anniversary came last February, and as February is no month for a public festival, it was at first planned to hold the celebration in advance, at some date last fall.

A meeting was held in the Mayor's office, and was attended by representatives of various neighborhood and improvement organizations. Committees were appointed, but it was soon seen that the time was too short to prepare an adequate production, and the time was extended until spring.

The organization was expanded and early in the winter, Luther Ely Smith became executive secretary and William W. LaBeaume began the work which he later carried on as chairman of the Productions committee. These two, with John H. Gundlach, chairman of the Executive Committee, and Charles A. Stix, heading the Finance Committee, carried the plan to success. If one person must be selected for supreme credit, that honor would undoubtedly fall on Smith, a lawyer and an Amherst College man, who for months has given all his time, without remuneration and, at first, in the face of seeming public indifference, to the great civic undertaking.

All this does not detract from the honor due to the salaried workers of the Pageant organization, Miss Rumbold as executive secretary, Percy MacKaye, designer of the whole spectacle and author of the Masque, Thomas Wood Stevens, author of the Pageant and Pageant master; and Joseph Lindon Smith, stage director of the Masque and architect of the scenic effects. Frederick S. Converse was composer of the Masque music, and Noel Poepping and E. R. Kroeger composed the music for the Pageant.

COW KICKS WOMAN, STEPS ON FOOT, BREAKS BONE

Animal's Owner Attends Memorial Day Exercises Later, Where She Collapses.

A cow on the farm of Miss Lucy Titchenal, near Bethalto, objected to being milked by its mistress on Decoration day, and kicked her, the stool and milking bucket aside. As Miss Titchenal, who is 60 years old, arose, the animal trod upon her instep, breaking a small bone in the right ankle.

Miss Titechenal hobbled to the house, and later dressed and went to Decoration day exercises at the Bethalto Cemetery. There she collapsed, when a bone in the injured foot snapped. A doctor who treated her said the first injury had not broken the bone completely, and that it snapped in two by the exertion of getting about the cemetery.

WAGON INJURES WOMAN

Delivery Man Is Arrested Charged With Careless Driving.

Mrs. Alice Hendricks, 62 years old, of 3803 Washington avenue, was run down by a delivery wagon at Olive and Eighth streets yesterday at 5 o'clock. She suffered a fractured right thigh, and was treated at the city dispensary. Frank McEneny, a driver for Buckley's Delivery, living at 4470 Evans avenue, was arrested, charged with careless driving.

Mrs. Hendricks was accompanied home by her daughter, Winifred, who

The following will receive the bachelor of science degree at the commencement, June 17, from Sheffield Scientific School of Yale: Thomas Corrigan Bourke, Kansas City, Mo.; Octavius Louis Lumaghi, St. Louis (B. A. of St. Louis University 1912); Ogilvie Henry Sheldon, Joplin, and Grandville Moody Smith Jr., Kansas City.

SITTING HENS IMPORTED

Two Cross Atlantic on Baltic With 14 Eggs Each.

NEW YORK, May 30.—The steamship Baltic, on her arrival today from Liverpool, reported that she had collided with a small British coasting steamer, the Clerie, before daybreak, May 21. The Clerie, bound from Dublin to a Welsh port, was towed back to port.

Incidental to making report of the collision, officers of the Baltic announced that the liner brought across two sitting hens, each with 14 eggs.

SLAYER FOUND GUILTY

Jacksonville Man Convicted of Manslaughter.

JACKSONVILLE, Ill., May 30.—The jury in the case of John W. Henry, tried on a charge of killing Charles Esard, Jan. 27 last, tonight returned a verdict that the defendant was sane and guilty of manslaughter.

The argument of attorneys occupied about six hours.

NO ACCIDENTS OF SERIOUS NATURE DURING PAGEANT

Minor Cuts and Bruises and Persons Suffering From Heat Are Treated at Emergency Hospital.

No serious accidents were reported to the police or at the emergency hospital. Treatment was administered in the following cases of minor injuries and heat victims:

L. H. Ottofy, 5228 Vernon avenue, lacerated elbow.

Raq Coeytaux, Co. C., First Regiment, N. G. M., a performer, bruised in fall.

James O'Neill, 4543 Easton avenue, cut under eye.

William Reis, photographer, sunburns.

Miss Lillian Lindeberg, 3431 South Thirteenth street, heat.

Miss Mabel Jonnson, 3116A Botanical avenue, heat.

A. Kenkel, 3460 Itaska street, lacerated thumb.

Miss Bettie Weiser, 3050 Thomas street, heat.

Mrs. D. A. Fairley, Versailles, Mo., stopping at 4993 Washington bl., heat.

Miss Elizabeth Dunlap, 3290 South Fourteenth street, heat.

Miss Ann Hampton, 2341 Atlantic street, heat.

Miss E. Forrest, 5846 Highland avenue, heat.

Miss H. P. Saunders, Herculaneum, Mo., stopping at 3534 Pestalozzi street, heat.

Peter A. Nies, 3931 North Ninth street, actor, heat and sunburn.

Leo Brinkman, 219 Adelaide avenue, performer, elbow skinned.

Ben Schumitsgy, 5618A North Market street, finger cut by broken bottle.

PAGEANT ACTORS ROBBED WHILE IN PERFORMANCE

Two members of the Pageant cast complained to the police last night that they had been robbed of money they had left in their dressing tents while appearing in the mound builders' scene.

Isadore Oldini of 5212 Botanical avenue, reported he missed $8.50 in cash which he had left in his clothes in his tent, and William H. Reeves of 4156 Cleveland avenue, reported he had been robbed of $5.

Pageant Audience Mere Blank Space to Actors

THOSE big pageant audiences would feel small if they knew how they looked as seen from the stage by the actors. They look like nothing at all after the great battery of footlights skirting the southern arc of the lagoon is turned on.

There is no chance for a Pageant actor to recognize his best friend in the audience because the direct rays of the footlights shining into the eyes of the actor makes the audience invisible.

As the performer looks out from the stage there is nothing but a blank space above the line of these big lights. Above this ribbon of blackness he may catch glimpses of the moon and stars, but he has no way of telling whether he is playing to a vast concourse of people or to empty seats.

EAST SIDE CARS TO RUN LATE BECAUSE OF PAGEANT

Schedules Are Changed 20 Minutes to Half Hour to Accommodate Visitors From Illinois.

East side cars will be operated tonight on a late schedule to accommodate Illinois visitors to the Pageant, according to plans made by T. W. Gregory, secretary-treasurer of the East St. Louis & Suburban Street Railway Co.

The last Alton car leaving the McKinley depot, will be held until midnight.

The midnight car to Alton via the Eads Bridge will be held until 12:30 a. m.

The Belleville car which leaves at 12:15, ordinarily, will be held until 12:30, and the Lebanon car, leaving Edgemont, will be held until 12:25 a. m.

The new schedule will not be in operation if rain stops the Pageant performance as it did Friday night, and the cars will run, in that event, on their regular time.

Pageant Chorus to Be in Picture.

The Pageant chorus, which is concealed from view during the entire performance, will have its opportunity to appear on the stage at 2 p. m. today, when a picture of the chorus will be taken by the motion picture company which is portraying the Pageant. All members of the chorus are expected to be on the stage at that time for the picture.

SIX THROWN BY HORSES AND HURT ON MASQUE STAGE

One or Two Caught Under Mounts, but Escape With Slight Injuries.

Six riders in the Masque were slightly injured a few minutes before the close of the performance last night, when several horses slipped on the wet tan bark of the stage and threw the riders to the floor. One or two of them were caught under the horses, but escaped being crushed.

Three of the riderless animals scrambled to their feet and galloped onto the stage. The others were caught by men, who carried out their parts as though there had been no accident.

The accident occurred just as Gold was returning to the stage with an escort of Butchertown rough riders and Cavalry Troop B, Missouri National Guard. The horse, ridden by M. C. Zimmerman of 3385 Shaw avenue, a member of Troop B, fell. Zimmerman was caught under the animal and his right leg was bruised.

He was slightly in advance of the others, whose horses reared when they saw Zimmerman's horse fall. Five other horses fell. They were ridden by G. Schweitzer of 3854 Easton avenue, Joseph L. Messerly of 2929 Madison street, Frank Bouche of Maplewood, L. C. Sherrill of 5899 Nina place and Charles Reinhardt of 1462 Shawmut place. Schweitzer suffered a gash on his left hand, Messerly a bruised ankle and leg. Bouche was bruised, Sherrill's head was bumped and Rinehardt's arm was bruised.

It was said after the accident that none of the riders was more than slightly injured and that all would be able to take their parts tonight.

CHILDREN ENROLLED BY LOST AND FOUND BUREAU

Some Are Reported Missing by Parents, Others Are Held Until They Are Called For.

The lost and found bureaus established at the emergency hospital at the Pageant grounds and the telephone section did considerable business. Lost children reported by the parents or others who had them in charge were John Zimmer, 8, 4260 John avenue; Walter Scott, 10; Leonard Kahlmeyer, 7, 4447 Swan avenue; Helen Batcheller, 11, 6826 Magnolia avenue and Willie Koe, 11, 6827 Old Manchester road.

The children found whose parents had not been reached at a late hour were Albert Pounds, 9, 3728 Vest avenue; Ernest Meilson, 8, 3977A Gratiot street; Edward Turner, 8, 4561 College avenue, and Saul Steinberg, 8, 1306 North Eighth street.

Others brought in were Charles Mehlberg, 11, 425 Oakwood avenue, Webster Groves; Georgia Evans, no address given; Helen Chockey, no address given; Stanley Frazier, 10, 3504 Brampton square, Maplewood; Helen Loire, 13, no address given; Catherine Smith, 14, 3020 Easton avenue; Catherine Digby, 685 Oakwood avenue, Webster Groves, and Lena Bergman, 1901 Biddle street.

PAGEANT CAR RAMS ANOTHER; TWO INJURED

Mrs. Ida Huesman, 26 years old, of 4061A Cook avenue, and John Benner of 4426 Arco avenue, a motorman on the Market line, were injured at 6:30 p. m. yesterday when the car operated by Benner ran into the rear of another car, between Cardinal and Compton avenues. Both cars were carrying crowds to the Pageant and were traveling a few feet apart.

Mrs. Huesman was sitting on a sand box near Benner. When the crash came persons standing in the aisle were thrown in a heap toward the front end.

Mrs. Huesman suffered a wrenched right knee and bruises on the head and body. Benner was bruised about the head and body and probably was injured internally. Both were treated by a doctor and taken to their homes. None of the other passengers was hurt. Benner was not able to tell how the accident happened.

650 CARS HANDLE PAGEANT THRONGS SUCCESSFULLY

Homeward Bound Thousands Do Not Have to Wait at Main Junction Point.

The United Railways assigned 650 cars last night to the huge task of transporting the Pageant multitudes, according to Bruce Cameron, superintendent of transportation, who said that never before had the company so successfully handled a big crowd.

Even during the congested period between 5:30 and 6:30 o'clock there was no jam of cars at the main junction, at De Baliviere and De Giverville avenues, where the University, Delmar, Page, Union and Hamilton cars converged. Steadily and swiftly car after car arrived, discharged its human freight and passed on.

At 8:30, when thousands of persons left the amphitheater to make an early start homeward, they found lines of cars waiting for them at the junction. With rapidity the cars absorbed the throngs and bore them away.

At the conclusion of the performance the cars had to carry countless thousands of persons. The Market line and the Clayton line on the Skinker road accounted for many thousands, but the chief center of departure was north of the Jefferson Memorial. It was cleverly contrived to use both tracks at once by routing some of the Olive cars north on De Baliviere avenue to Delmar boulevard, while others turned eat on De Giverville avenue.

The Page, Union and Hamilton cars ran south on De Baliviere and west on the University tracks to Skinker road. The big transportation job virtually was finished at midnight.

INCIDENTS OF NIGHT AMONG PAGEANT CROWDS

Boy Scouts Prevent Panic When Woman Faints and Is Carried Out.

A troop of boy scouts, under Scout Master O. E. Thompson, checked what threatened to become a panic when Mrs. D. A. Fairley, 59 years old, of Versailles, Mo., fainted at 7 o'clock, near the side of the free seat inclosure. The report that a woman had died spread through the crowd, and the boys had great difficulty in making the curious stand back far enough to let Mrs. Fairley be carried out by the ambulance corps.

Because of the denseness of the crowd, also, the police seemed unable to stop popcorn venders, who continued yelling along the roadway on the hilltop during the performance, and could be heard over most of the outdoor auditorium.

Nor were all the performers, when off stage, so careful about needless noise as they should have been. Noise from the dressing tents and the wings carried surprisingly well, and disputes among boatmen at the water's edge, at either side of the stage, grated most unpleasantly on the ears of those who, otherwise, would most enjoy the spectacle.

When LaSalle and his voyagers did not appear quite as promptly as was desired, someone in the wings called, apparently through a megaphone, "Come on, LaSalle, you're holding up the show." The Sieur de LaSalle took the cue.

Chief of Detectives Allender reported that many thousands who reached Forest Park on street cars returned to the cars when informed that all seats were taken and that little standing room within view of the stage was left.

At the conclusion of the Pageant more than 200 persons left their seats in the free section, surrendering them to others who had long been standing. The heat was oppressive in the closely packed rows, and many were heard to say that they wanted to walk about in an open space and would view the Masque standing.

Studebaker

ECONOMICAL LIGHT WEIGHT SIX $1575

$3,000,000 in Machinery Alone to Make This the Best of All "Sixes"

The biggest and best "Six" plant in the world is the Studebaker SIX plant.

Its equipment is bigger and better than that used by makers of "Sixes" selling for three times the Studebaker price.

Studebaker can afford costlier machines and more scientific methods, because that expense becomes an economy when distributed over the large Studebaker volume.

Those building half as many "Sixes," or less, even of the highest price, cannot afford to go nearly as far as Studebaker in intensive manufacturing and in making practically all of its parts.

"Sixes" marketed for several hundred dollars more are simply not to be classed with the Studebaker SIX—in the manufacturing methods—the machinery—the materials employed.

That is why the Studebaker SIX is not only outselling those comparatively near in price, but competing with and outselling the costliest "Sixes."

Where the Difference Comes In

The difference in the price between the costliest "Sixes" and the Studebaker SIX is simply a difference in volume.

The higher price is the penalty the buyer pays because the volume is so small.

They must charge more, even though they give less than the Studebaker SIX.

And we can and do give more in methods and materials because our output is large.

Special Steels, Heat Treated

None of the "Sixes" of highest price surpasses the Studebaker SIX in the steels used.

Few of them equal it in the treatment of these steels.

Our steels in addition to being special formula steels, are given the greatest practical number of heat treatments, which condense and harden the fiber.

These special treatments of Studebaker steels make for lightness.

They double and treble the strength of the component parts, allowing marked reductions in size and consequently in wight.

Light Weight Means Economy

The light-weight principle employed in the Studebaker SIX is the scientific principle.

It is the most economical principle for the man who owns the car.

It means greater gasoline mileage, greater oil mileage—longer life for the car.

Thus tire cost on the Studebaker SIX averages only one-fifth the tire cost of heavier "Sixes."

The Studebaker SIX runs hundreds of miles farther on a quart of oil.

The Studebaker SIX Motor

The Studebaker SIX motor—manufactured in our own foundries and machine shops, not bought from an outside maker—is so perfect in balance and alignment that you feel no annoying vibration in the car.

Its small bore—3½ inches—and long stroke—5 inches—meet the accepted standard of American and European engineers.

It consumes less gasoline than a "Four" motor of the same piston displacement, yet delivers power so continuously that the effect is that of greater power.

More of its power reaches the road, because the transmission, differential and wheels turn on Timken bearings; and because the full floating axle shafts, free of weight, have only to turn the wheels.

Holds the Road; Perfectly Balanced

The car holds the road in front and behind, because its weight is evenly balanced and distributed, and rides without swing or sidesway.

You do not see the driver of a Studebaker SIX continually bringing it back to a straightaway by "nursing" the wheel.

It keeps to the line he wants it to follow—whether that line be the crown of the road or the side of it.

Once "set" it goes straight ahead.

This is the quality sometimes called roadability.

It is a sure sign of perfect balance.

And balance is the result of Studebaker SIX intensive manufacturing.

Demonstration will reveal much that we cannot tell you here, and not only convert you to the "Six" idea, but to the Studebaker SIX itself.

The Studebaker FOUR is of the same grade and quality of material and workmanship, and is manufactured with the same scrupulous care and closeness, as the Studebaker SIX.

MEDIATION PLANS REACH CRISIS ON CARRANZA'S NOTE

Message From Constitutionalist Leader and Envoys' Reply Will Not Be Made Public Until Answer Has Reached Carranza—Lehmann and Urquidi Confer.

NEITHER HUERTA NOR U. S. HAS ACQUIESCED

Main Points of Negotiation Have Been Submitted to Both, but Approvals Are Not Received — Rebels May Come In.

By Associated Press.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ontario, May 30.—A crisis in the progress of the mediation proceedings was reached tonight. While awaiting answers from the Huerta Government and the United States to the tentative plan for a new provisional government in Mexico, the question of admitting the Constitutionalists to the conference before an agreement or protocol is signed loomed up as likely to influence the decision of the American Government on the plans already outlined.

The mediators late today called in the Mexican delegates to learn if Gen. Huerta had approved the main points of the peace plan now before him. The Mexicans said they had received no reply, but they telegraphed again, urging a quick response. The American delegates also reported that Washington had not acted on the plan. The South American diplomats did not broach the subject of Constitutionalist representation to the Mexicans or show them the note delivered here yesterday by Juan F. Urquidi, a messenger of Gen. Carranza.

The mediators, however, let it be known tonight that they would answer the note, publishing both communications simultaneously. The three envoys pointed out that they had found nothing in Carranza's latest communication which could be interpreted as a desire to participate in the conferences on the subject of pacifying Mexico. They do not consider that Gen. Carranza has receded from the position which caused them to withdraw their original invitation. They hold that while he might be willing to discuss international phases of the Mexican situation, he has not indicated a desire to take up internal questions, which they believe gave rise to the international conflict. On the other hand, it is said that the Washington Government agrees with Gen. Carranza that the withdrawal of the invitation to him to send delegates and the failure of the mediators to answer an inquiry as to what points would be treated in the negotiations left Gen. Carranza in the position of not having anything on which he could act.

The American delegates were inclined to see much significance in the arrival here of Mr. Urquidi. The latter had a long talk with Mr. Lehmann early in the day. The American commissioners say they have not been shown the Carranza note, but they are hopeful that a way may be found to bring Constitutionalists into the conference.

In this connection the American delegates conferred tonight with the mediators. The viewpoint of the United States is that it would be far better to get all parties into agreement now than to attempt to deal with the Constitutionalists separately after a two-party agreement is consummated. The American Government, it is known here, realizes the critical position in which it might be placed if the entire responsibility of dealing with the Constitutionalists were placed upon it.

The mediators appreciate the position in which the American representatives have been placed. It is evident they feel that the mediation negotiations cannot be regarded as a success in Washington if the differences with Huerta are composed at the expense of friendly relations existing between the Constitutionalists and the United States. The American Government is not inclined to jump from the frying pan into the fire.

The impression prevails that final answer of the United States on the essentials of peace plan will not be given until there is a definite understanding about Constitutionalist representation.

The Huerta delegates are not adverse to having the Constitutionalists admitted but has left the matter entirely to the Mediators for decision. On the other hand the Huerta envoys do not think Constitutionalist representation absolutely necessary to the success of mediation. In this view the mediators concur, saying they are keeping the interests of all factions in mind as the peace program is being worked out. They also have indicated that upon the United States should devolve the task of treating later with the Constitutionalists.

The mediators continue to minimize the [illegible] the communication from [illegible] [illegible]terate their statement [illegible] the message will "not [illegible] of the proceedings." [illegible] American Government as[illegible] insistent attitude on Constitutionalist representation, the details of the agreement between the United States and the Huerta Government will be worked out in a few days. New Judge of Mexican Supreme Court.

MEXICO CITY, May 30.—Francisco Carbajal was elected this morning Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. Much political importance is attached to this election, as Senor Carbajal represented the Government in the peace negotiations at the time of the Madero revolution.

Karl Heynen, agent at Mexico City, of the Hamburg-American line, who is said to have arranged the landing of the cargo, together with the German Consul, and Capt. Herman O. Stickney, Collector of the port, immediately conferred with the ship's master.

Ships That Landed Arms Are Fined $200,000.

VERA CRUZ, May 30.—The landing of war munitions for Huerta from the Hamburg-American liners Ypiranga and Bavaria passed into the realm of diplomacy late today when both ships were granted clearance by the Collector of the Port, Capt. Herman O. Stickney, after Karl Heynen, general agent in Mexico of the company, had signed a bond covering the fines assessed against these steamers under the Collector's interpretation of the Mexican navigation laws.

Capt. Stickney holds that diverting to Puerta Mexico the shipments consigned to Vera Cruz was a direct violation of the laws and a fine of 20 pesos on each package landed was assessed against the shipmasters. The total fines amount approximately to $200,000 gold.

Agent Heyden holds that the Mexican laws and the proclamation of May 13 issued by President Huerta declaring Vera Cruz to be a closed port and Puerta Mexico open for Vera Cruz cargoes was ample justification for diverting the arms shipments.

BRYAN IS BOOKED FOR CHAUTAUQUA LECTURES

PHILADELPHIA, May 30.—Secretary Bryan is to be a Chautauqua lecturer again this year and beginning July 4, in North Carolina, will make three speeches a day during the season from the platform. Although no official announcement of Bryan's contract with the Pennsylvania Chautauqua has been made, it became known at a meeting of the board of directors of that organization, held in Swarthmore last week, that again he had agreed to join the "talent" of the summer circuit. His acceptance was received with a considerable satisfaction.

In addition to Bryan, Victor Murdock, former Gov. Folk, former Gov. Hadley, Senator La Follette, Judge Ben Lindsey and a number of other statesmen and politicians are being advertised in 160 towns in 13 different states with an array of musical talent, including bands, quartets, soloists and the much exploited tyrolean yodlers.

Most of the towns are small country places, which will look upon chautauqua week as the most important event of the year. With a noted statesman as a "headliner" the chautauqua tent is crowded every day.

U. S. INSISTS THAT MEDIATORS HEAR CARRANZA'S SIDE

Americans Contend That a Half-Way Peace Would Not Improve Present Conditions.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Every indication in Washington tonight points to prolongation of the Mexican mediation negotiations at Niagara Falls. That the Washington Government desires the Mexican Constitutionalists represented in the proceedings tending for peace is undoubted. The view of the administration is said to be that terms of peace for Mexico which will not be a permanent peace are useless.

Administration leaders, cognizant of this view, reiterated tonight their oft-expressed confidence that the mediation conference would not adjourn until the pathway to an adjustment of the differences between Huerta and the United States and the internal conflict in Mexico had been cleared.

In circles close to the administration it was declared the American representatives at the Niagara Falls conference had been instructed to urge upon the South American mediators the necessity of giving recognition to the Constitutionalist forces in framing a plan to compose the turbulence of Mexico.

Message Is Received.

The first open intimation of the attitude on the part of the American Government was evidenced yesterday when Commissioners Lamar and Lehman were directed to use their influence upon the mediators to insure the reception of the message sent by Gen. Carranza, chief of the Constitutionalists, carried to Niagara Falls by Juan Urquidi. Efforts of the American commissioners in this regard were successful.

Today after the message from Carranza had been accepted by the mediators, it was reported from Niagara Falls that the Huerta delegates had decided among themselves that they would abide by any decision the mediators might make as to receiving delegates from the Carranza faction into the conference. This, together with the fact that the Washington Government was eager that the Constitutionalists should be represented, was taken as a strong indication that there might be a broadening of the scope of the conference before the actual signing of any protocol which would lead to a provisional government for Mexico in substitution for the Huerta regime.

American commissioners at Niagara Falls sent to Washington during the day several important communications relating to Constitutionalist representation. Secretary Bryan would not reveal the nature of these messages but it was stated that answers to all communications had been forwarded.

Departments Take a Holiday.

Constitutionalist representatives in Washington would not discuss developments in the situation. They asserted that nothing has come from Gen. Carranza since the delivery of his message to the mediators. Mr. Urquidi, who took the message to Niagara Falls, it was stated, probably would return to Washington tomorrow. The Carranzaistas here, however, insisted that any plan for a Provisional Government which did not recognize the strength of their forces would not be agreed to. It further was maintained that participation in mediation by constitutionalist representatives would not be undertaken on condition of an armistice in the military movement against Huerta.

JURY INDICTS STRIKERS

Lexington Carpenters Charged With Attempt to Kill.

LEXINGTON, Ky., May 30.—Thirty-six indictments were returned today by a special grand jury against union carpenters who have been on strike here for several weeks. Five of the indicted men are charged with attempting to kill Daniel Moynahan, a nonunion workman, last Wednesday. Moynahan was probably fatally shot while on duty at a lumber plant, whose men are on strike. The other 31 are charged with conspiracy to intimidate nonunion workmen.

Five hundred carpenters are on strike for recognition of the union, higher wages and shorter hours. All building operations have been suspended.

PRESIDENT ADDRESSES G.A.R. ALTHOUGH HE HAD REFUSED

Secretary Tumulty Announces Chief Executive Didn't Want His Declination Misunderstood —Speaker Clark Also Speaks.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—"There is no other civil war in history save the American Civil War from which the stings were removed before the men who did the fighting passed from the stage of life," said President Wilson at the Memorial day services conducted by the G. A. R. in Arlington National Cemetery today. Speaker Clark also spoke.

The President had not expected to participate, but, feeling that a false construction had been placed upon his declination, he decided today to attend and speak. Secretary Tumulty said:

"When the invitation was extended by the committee representing the Grand Army of the Republic of the District of Columbia the President informed the committee that he did not think the occasion would be opportune for the delivery of an appropriate address and because of this he felt he must decline the invitation, agreeing, however, to attend a memorial service at a later date.

Sees a False Construction.

"Evidently, a false construction has been placed upon his action and therein lies the reason for the change of program. The President was not willing that his absence should be misconstrued."

J. K. Gleeson, Commander of the Department of the Potomac, Grand Army of the Republic, presented President Wilson to the large audience.

In his introduction of Speaker Clark, Dr. Gleeson spoke of the Missourian as "the man who has always been a friend of the soldier, who always is fair and fights in the open." Clark's reception was tumultuous. President Wilson said in part:

"I have not come here today with a prepared address, but I will not deny myself the privilege of joining with you in an expression of gratitude and admiration for the men who perished for the sake of the Union.

"A peculiar privilege came to the men who fought for the Union. There is no other civil war in history, ladies and gentlemen, the stings of which were removed before the men who did the fighting passed from the stage of life. So that we owe these men something more than a legal re-establishment of the Union.

"We owe them the spiritual re-establishment of the Union; for they not only reunited States, but they reunited the spirits of men. That is their unique achiement, unexampled aywhere else in the annals of mankind, that the very men whom they overcame in battle join in praise and gratitude that the Union was saved. There is something peculiarly beautiful and touching about that.

Service to the Nation.

"Whenever a man, who is still trying to devote himself to the service of the nation, comes into a presence like this, or into a place like this, his spirit must be peculiarly moved.

"A mandate is laid upon him which seems to speak from the very graves themselves. Those who serve this nation, whether in peace or in war, should serve the nation without thought of themselves. I never can speak in praise of war. You would not desire me to do so. But there is this peculiar distinction belonging to the soldier: He goes into an enterprise out of which he himself cannot get anything at all. He is giving everything that he hath, even his life, in order that others may live, not in order that he himself may obtain gain and prosperity. And, just so soon as the tasks of peace are performed in the same spirit of self-sacrifice and devotion, peace societies will not be necessary. The very organization of society will be a guarantee of peace.

"Therefore, this peculiar thing comes about, that we can stand here and praise the memory of these soldiers in the interest of peace. They set us the example of self-sacrifice which if followed in peace will make it unnecessary that men should follow war any more.

"We are reputed to be somewhat careless in our discrimination between words in the use of the English language and yet it is interesting to note that there are some words about which we are very careful. We bestow the adjective 'great' somewhat indiscriminately. A man who has made conquest of his fellow men for his own gain may display such genius in war, such uncommon qualities of organization, leadership, that we may call him 'great,' but there is a word which we reserve for men of another kind and about which we are very careful; that is the word 'noble.' We never call a man 'noble' who serves only himself; and if you will look about through all the nations of the world upon the statues that men have erected—upon the inscribed tablets where they have wished to keep alive the memory of the citizens whom they would most honor—you will find that almost without exception they have erected the statue to those men who had a splendid surplus of courage to spend upon their fellow men.

No Patent of U. S. Nobility.

"Nobility exists in America without patent. We have no House of Lords, but we have a House of Fame in which we elevate those who are the noble men of our race, who, forgetful of themselves, study and serve the public interest, who have the courage to face any number and any kind of adversary, to speak what in their hearts they believe to be the truth.

"So that this flag calls upon us daily for service and the more quiet and self-denying the service the greater is the glory of the flag.

"It has been a privilege, ladies and gentlemen, to come and say these simple words, which I am sure are merely putting your thoughts into language and I thank you for the opportunity to lay this little wreath of mine upon these consecrated graves."

June 4, the United Confederate Veterans will unveil a monument to their dead in Arlington Cemetery and the G. A. R. will participate in the ceremonies. President Wilson also will speak.

WINTERS, WIFE AND BOARDER HELD IN SEARCH FOR CHILD

Clothing of Daughter, Missing Year, Found in Wall of Indiana Doctor's Home.

NEWCASTLE, Ind., May 30.—W. R. Myers, County Prosecutor, has announced he will file informations against Dr. and Mrs. William A. Winters and William R. Cooper, a boarder in their home, who were arrested today in connection with the disappearance of Catherine Winters, 10-year-old daughter of Dr. Winters. He says he will take the case to the grand jury. The girl disappeared more than a year ago. The present Mrs. Winters is her stepmother. Winters and his wife were released tonight in $5000 bail each.

The father hinted that the girl's relatives might know more of the case than they cared to admit, but insisted that the child was alive. Mrs. Winters insisted that she believed the girl was dead.

Dr. Winters and his wife had been to Terre Haute in connection with the display of moving pictures which were shown to raise funds to aid them in their search for the child.

Catherine Winters disappeared March 20, 1913, and a nation-wide search has been made for her.

Prosecutor Myers says he will file affidavits against the three in the Circuit Court and that a grand jury investigation will be begun immediately.

Police and detectives are digging up the entire floor of the cellar.

Dr. Winters was indignant over his arrest and charged that his predicament was due to Mayor Watkins, with whom he has not been on friendly terms.

The arrests followed the discovery of a child's red sweater, red hair ribbon and a man's undershirt secreted in the concrete cellar of the Winters home. The authorities say the undershirt is splotched with human blood. Detective Robert H. Abel, of a Chicago agency, found the garments.

$5000 Bonds Are Asked.

Abel charged all three with conspiring to commit a felony. They were held for $5000 bail each. All deny any knowledge of any crime.

Dr. and Mrs. Winters returned from Terre Haute this morning. Their arrest followed at 10 a. m. Newspaper men were not permitted an interview with any of the prisoners.

Mrs. Ritter, mother of Mrs. Byrd Winters, stepmother of Catherine Winters, said the Winters house had been searched three or four times. She led the way to the basement. Detectives dug into a wall and found a red hair ribbon and a small red sweater. The sweater has several holes in it, which, the police say, appear to have been caused by burns. A red undershirt also was found beneath a furnace pipe. This bore stains.

"I don't know nothing," was the only statement Cooper would make. "You ain't got nothing on me in this case." He accused Mayor J. L. Watkins of Newcastle of trying to "get something on him." Watkins told him he was doing only his duty by bringing him before him.

Mayor Accuses Prisoner.

Watkins told Cooper he thought he knew something about the case. "I believe so yet; I won't say positively that you had a part in it, but I certainly do believe that you know something about it and that you are suppressing the news," Watkins said.

The detective was hired to solve the mystery by Mayor Watkins, who paid him from funds raised by giving motion picture shows throughout the State, which was undertaken by a committee of citizens.

The red sweater and the red hair ribbon found in the cellar wall are similar in color and texture to those worn by Catherine the day she disappeared. The ownership of the red shirt has not been determined.

Raised Reward of $2000.

Dr. Winters, a member of many lodges and societies, had no difficulty in raising $2000 as a reward for the finding of the girl after the announcement of the disappearance. Police and private detectives took up the search and money was offered to the Winterses by hundreds of sympathizers to carry on the hunt. Gypsy bands were trailed across Indiana and Illinois in the belief that the girl had been kidnaped and Dr. Winters visited scores of cities in an effort to find trace of the child.

NOTE.—A first place counts 5 points; a second place 3 points; a third place 2 points; fourth place 1 point.

SEVEN conference records were broken and two were equaled when Chicago University won the seventh annual Missouri Valley Conference track and field meet, held at Francis Field yesterday morning, defeating a field of twelve university track teams with a total of 44 2-3 points. Leland Stanford Jr., of California was the winner's closest rival, finishing with a total of 34.

The first three places in the meet were annexed by outside-the-conference schools, as Colorado ranked third, totaling 15.

The highest of the seven conference teams was Nebraska, which by winning two places in the pole vault alone, brought its final score up to 13½, finishing ahead of Kansas, Missouri and Northwestern, who were tied for fifth berth, to[illegible]ing an even dozen points each[illegible] sas Aggies, Rolla, Drake and [illegible] followed in the ultimate standing, with scores of [illegible] 6, 5 and 4 1-3 points(respecti[illegible] Washington U., the hosts of the [illegible]ay, failed to show in any event, the field proving too speedy for the Pikers.

Chicago's victory came as a surprise to the close followers of the big meet, as Stanford's team of nine coast stars was looked upon to have everything their way, according to preliminary figures. The hard journey from the coast, however, left its mark on the Western athletes, and the injury to McKee, their best dash man in the preliminaries, robbed them of a possible eight points that the maroon team finally won.

Stanford Athletes Die Hard.

At that, though, the race for first place was a close one, as the coast team led the maroons for over half the meet, and it was not until the mile relay, when Chicago placed second and the cardinal team failed to score, that Chicago took the lead. From then until the finish Stagg's boys were never headed. The Chicago team placed in all but two of the 15 scheduled events, four firsts, five seconds and four thirds being include in the total. The greater part of Stanford's total was the result of five firsts, showing that they depended mainly upon individual performances for their scoring.

The crowd of approximately 3000 spectators which took advantage of the ideal day to see the season's greatest local track event, was treated to one thrill after another when se[illegible] of the conference records were [illegible]ed and two tied. The good [illegible] began early when in the first [illegible], the 100-yard dash, Knight of Chicago tied the Valley mark of 10 seconds flat. He was pushed hard by his teammate, Barancik, while Cline, the fast man from Colorado, who collapsed after Friday's preliminaries but gamely came back in yesterday's finals, took third.

The Valley record was also equaled when Hazen of Kansas went over the high sticks in 15 2-5 seconds, John Patrick Nicholson's old mark.

Cowman Runs Wonderful Race.

The first actual record smashing, though, came in the quarter-mile, the best event of the program. Here it was that Gerard Cowman of the Missouri School of Mines made the trying 440 yards in only 48 2-5 seconds, 1 3-5 seconds better than the previous mark of 50 flat, held by Guy Reed of Nebraska and G. Stahl of Drake. This is within 2-5 seconds of the intercollegiate record and, incidentally, is better time than Ted Meredith, the Olympic quarter-miler, made in winning the same event in the big Eastern meet, yesterday. In the conference meet last year Cowman, Rolla's "one-man team," led the field until within 10 yards of the tape, where he collapsed and was carried from the track. The miner also won a place in the 100 yards dash, scoring his team's total of six points.

Hurdle, Dash and Middle Distance Records Are Shattered in Succession

THEN came in rapid succession three more record-breaking events. Fred Murray of Stanford clipped 1-5 second from Kirksey's mark of 25 flat in the low hurdles. Bonnett, also of Stanford, beat the 880 mark by a whole second, going it in 1m. 56s. and Barancik, the maroon dash man, made the 220 in 21 4-5 seconds. This new mark beats the old record by 1-5 second.

The only other track mark to fall was the Illinois relay team's mark of 1m. 30 4-5s., which was lowered to 1m. 29 2-5s. by the relay quartet from Chicago University.

This team, composed of Barancik, Knight, Ward and Boyd, running in the order named, took the lead at the end of the first half lap and, although pushed hard by Drake and Nebraska, finished winners by a margin of eight yards. It was thought that this record of the star Illinois team, practically world's record time, was destined to stand a long time, and its reduction by 1 1-5 seconds, was one of the big surprises of the day.

Field Records Fall.

Two marks went down in the field events. The most notable of these performances was the jump of 23 feet 8 inches made by Richard Boyd of Chicago, which makes a new conference record, better by 7¼ inches than the old. Boyd also ran the best 220 yards for Chi's relay team in the half-mile event.

The seventh new record was set when Herb Thatcher, captain of the Missouri delegation, bested his old throw of 126 feet 5¾ inches in the discus event by 5¼ inches. Des Jardiens, the all 'round star from Chicago threw a close second to the tiger captain.

Contrary to last year's meet, which was little more than a gathering of strong individuals, yesterday's meeting was one of teams. The highest individual score was 8 points, as compared with J. P. Nicholson's total of 11 in last year's show. Both Barancik and Knight of Chicago scored 8, while Thatcher of M. S. U. totaled 7. Cowman and Hazen of Rolla and Kansas came tied for third with 6.

Mechanically the meet was handled with more than ordinary rapidity and precision. The events were run off according to the program and the interminable waits that mar so many track meets were avoided. Megaphone men, before each event, announced what it was, at what moment it was likely to start, what the conference records were and who of the contestants appeared to be favored by the "dope" on their past performances. After each event the results were announced promptly and clearly.

From time to time the promoters checked over the entire score so that spectators, who were making their own records, could compare them frequently with the official record. In the field events, bulletins showed by feet and inches what the current performances were.

Summary:

100-yard dash—D. Knight, Chicago, first; M. Barancik, Chicago, second; C. Cline, Colorado, third; G. Cowman, Rolla, fourth. Time, 10s., equaling the conference record.

One-mile run—P. R. Wilson, Stanford, first; William Fleming, Colorado, second; Leroy Campbell, Chicago, third; Hartman Goetze, Nebraska, fourth. Time, 4m. 22 3-5s.

440 yards dash—G. Cowman, Rolla, first; E. P. Campbell, Stanford, second; J. D. Chace, Stanford, third; J. Iverson, Ames, fourth. Time, 48 2-5s., breaking conference record by 1 3-5s.

Interscholastic 100-yard dash—Dover, Soldan, first; Epp, McKinley, second; Cox, Yeatman, third. Time, 10 3-5s.

120-yard high hurdles—Hazen, Kansas, first; Ward, Chicago, second; Norton, Stanford, third; Arthur Perry, Kansas, fourth. Time, 15 2-5s., equalling the conference record.

Interscholastic half-mile run—Rowse, Smith, first; Williams, Soldan, second; Schuster, McKinley, third. Time, 2m. 5 3-5s.

220-yard low hurdles—Fred S. Murray, Stanford, first; J. K. Norton, Stanford, second; Francis T. Ward, Chicago, third; Dan Hazen, Kansas, fourth. Time, 24 4-5s., breaking conference record by one-fifth second.

220-yard dash—M. Barancik, Chicago, first; D. Knight, Chicago, second; Carl Cline, Colorado, third; W. G. Kaiser, Ames, fourth. Time, 21 4-5s.

Half-mile run—E. M. Bonnett, Stanford, first; H. Osborn, Northwestern, second; M. Carlson, Colorado, third; S. J. Stegeman, Chicago, fourth. Time, 1m. 56s., one second below the conference record.

Pole vault—Reavis, Nebraska, first; Robert Krohn, Stanford; Ed Thomas, Chicago, and A. C. Lindstrum, Nebraska, tied for second; splitting points; height, 11 ft. 9 in.

Discus throw—Thatcher, Missouri, first; P. R. des Jardien, Chicago, second; Glen Simons, Drake, third; Charles Meyers, Nebraska, fourth; distance, 126 ft. 11 in., breaking Thatcher's previous record of 126 ft. 5¾ in.

One-mile relay—Colorado, first; Kansas, second; Chicago, third; Ames, fourth. Time, 3m. 27s.

Two-mile run—D. D. Moss, Missouri, first; O. J. Stout, Chicago, second; L. C. Teeter, Kansas Aggies, third; W. T. Maakestad, Ames, fourth. Time, 9m. 48 4-5s.

Shot-put—G. W. Bedeau, Stanford, first; John Reber, Kansas, second; Thatcher, Missouri, third. Distance, 42 feet 3¾ inches.

Half-mile relay—Chicago, first; Drake, second; Nebraska, third; Kansas, fourth. Time, 1m. 29 2-5s., breaking the former Conference record of 1m. 30 4-5s.

Running high jump—M. James, Northwestern, first; H. Frizzell, Kansas Aggies and Charles Meyers, Nebraska, tied for second; N. B. Burrus, Ames, and Frank S. Whiting, Chicago, tied for fourth. Height, 5 ft. 9¾ in.

Running broad jump—R. D. Boyd, Chicago, first; [illegible], second; E. P. Campbell, Stanford, third; [illegible], fourth. Distance, 23 ft. 8 in., beating the Conference record held by Wilson 7¼ inches.

Two Open Races Will Feature Regatta at St. Louis R. C. Today

The annual opening regatta of the St Louis Rowing Club, with two open races as the feature, will be held on the Mississippi River, opposite the club quarters at the foot of Chouteau avenue this afternoon.

One of the races is an event for four-oared shells for a trophy presented by Senator Ed Block. The barges will compete for a cup offered by Tony Loeffler. The first race will start at a point a mile above the clubhouse at 4 o'clock.

McKINLEY TRACK TEAM GETS SCHOLASTIC TITLE

As a result of McKinley High School's victory over Soldan in the relay race, yesterday morning at the Missouri Valley Conference track and field meet, the interscholastic meet will be awarded to the South Siders.

When the high schools met on the track, two weeks ago, McKinley protested Soldan's victory in this event because of a foul committed on the part of Dover, the gold and brown captain. As the meet rested on the outcome of this event, it was decided to decide the matter by the outcome of the special relay race yesterday. McKinley surprised and won the event.

However, Soldan took the point cup, yesterday, by winning first place in the 100 and taking second in the half-mile run, and relay. Dover was the hero in the century event, making the distance in 10 3-5s, which equals the high school record. Rowse, a Smith Academy boy, took the half-mile run in 2m 5 3-5s, three-fifths of a second slower than the best mark. It is probable that had Snyder of McKinley entered in this event and had Asakainan not injured himself before the race, the time of the event would have been faster.

T. B. BOYD WINS CARDINAL PASS AT ALGONQUIN CLUB

Golfers Have Busy Decoration Day Schedule on All Local Links.

In spite of the many counter attractions, Decoration day brought out its usually large number of golfers to the various country clubs. Numerous special tournaments were arranged at some of the clubs, while all of the links were fairly well occupied. Algonquin, Glen Echo and Midland Valley were the busiest. The army worm bugaboo seemed to put a stop to all festivities at the Country Club, while the city tournament at Forest Park was postponed because of the Pageant and Masque.

The Algonquin players certainly put in a busy day as three tournaments were completed, besides the introduction of several novelty matches. The opening tournament of the season was won by C. C. Bandeman, who defeated H. K. Calhoun in the finals of class A 9 up and 7 in a 36-hole match. Class B was taken by S. S. Andrews as a result of his victory over G. S. Harrison. However, the prettiest match of the day was for the championship of Class C, in which D. S. Stephens defeated G. M. Brown, 1 up, in a 37-hole match.

Milliken Wins P. & M. Cup.

The Pageant and Masque tournament was won by L. R. Milliken, who turned in a score of 64. W. C. Beracy was runnerup with a 66. This was a handicap affair, the lowest scratch score being turned in was an 82 by T. B. Boyd. As a result of his victory Mr. Boyd won the season pass to the Cardinals donated by Mr. Schuyler P. Britton.

Another feature of the afternoon was the Memorial Day Sweepstakes. Results were as follows: First Sweep—J. B. Shiplet, 78, with a handicap of 14. Second Sweep—S. O. Hale, 79, with a handicap of 17. Third Sweep—J. W. Wright, 79, with a handicap of 22. Fourth Sweep—T. B. Boyd, 86, with a handicap of 5. Fifth Sweep—C. L. Martin, 82, with a handicap of 16. Mr. Boyd also took the scratch prize in this event.

Midland Opens New Course.

Decoration Day marked the opening of the 18-hole course at the Midland Valley Country Club, and considering the change from the former 12-hole course, some mighty good cards were turned in yesterday. The chief event on the program, however, was the annual Decoration Day tourney, in which a record number of 116 parcipitated. It was a handicap affair in which the winners were duely decorated in honor of the day, while the 4 high men were awarded golf balls.

Those so honored were G. D. Mix, 79—(15), Corbin Smith, 80—(9), J. W. Bowman, 81—(6), and D. H. Fisk, 82—(12.) Bogey on the revised course is 82.

At Glen Echo the flag tournament was the big feature of the holiday's play on the course. P. E. Blankeship, with a handicap of 18 above bogey, led the day's play, finishing on the first green. Three of the large number that took part, tied for second at the 18th hole, namely T. B. Campbell, A. T. Halliday and F. C. Rand.

There are some low scores being turned in on the Glen Echo links in preparation for the Trans-Mississippi Tourney to be played in Kansas City in the near future. Walter Michener, J. W. Bemis and Jesse Carleton are all making the 18 holes in less than bogey in their practice rounds, and their followers are counting on them to make a showing in K. C.

Browns and Tigers Divide Well Played Double Bill

Coveleskie Heaves a One-Hit Game and Beats Hamilton, 2—1, While Weilman Outdoes Main, 2—0.

By Clarence F. Lloyd.

RECEIVING 18 innings of high class left-handed pitching the Browns failed to make enough runs for Earl Hamilton to bag the opening contest of the twin bill with the Tigers of Detroit yesterday, but came across in fine style for Carl Weilman. The teams broke even. Hamilton bowed to Harry Coveleskie, the Polish southpaw, who hurled a one-hit game, 2—1, while Weilman triumphed over Miles Main and Mark Hall, right-handers, 2—0

Hits were a scarcity. Coveleskie was the stingiest, as he gave but one blow. His performance crowded Hamilton in the shade, although Earl heaved well enough to win nine out of ten games. A boot by Jimmy Austin hurt his cause or he would have gotten a 1—1 draw at least. He allowed only four nicks.

Weilman scattered three hits over nine rounds. The Browns got only that many off Main and Hall—two off the former in seven rounds—but got the break and pushed over a pair of markers.

One Run for Ham.

For seven innings it looked as if a fluke run by the Browns would win for Hamilton, as he was dishing out blanks with great regularity. This one run came off Coveleskie in the fifth as follows: Walker opened the frame with a ripping double down the left field line, the only blow off the big Pole. He moved to third on Leary's sacrifice. The squeeze was then called for and Wares bunted the ball as Walker dashed for the plate. Coveleskie fielded the bulb cleanly and turned to try for Walker. Clarence retreated and then Coveleskie heaved to Burns in an effort to stop Wares. His chuck was late and low and Wares was safe. It was a close play and the Tiger infield gathered around Umpire Dinneen, protesting. While thus engaged and leaving second base unguarded, Wares pilfered the middle bag, much to the delight of the large mob.

Shotton Misses Opener.

Coveleskie decided to take no chances with Agnew and purposely passed the broad-shouldered blond. With the cushions packed, Hamilton stood by and let a third strike glide over. Ivan Howard, who subbed in center while Bert Shotton was having a chunk of cinder removed from an eye, then rolled to Moriarty. Morrie obligingly fumbled the roller long enough for Walker to score and the other hands to reach the next bags. Austin ended it with a lift to Kavanaugh.

An error by Austin of Veach's grounder, starting the eighth, put Hamilton in the bad. Burns fouled to Agnew, but Moriarty coaxed a pass and with Veach moved up on a passed ball. Stanage then inserted a single to left on which Veach tallied. Coveleskie later made the mistake of dropping a Texas leaguer over Pratt's head on which Moriarty chalked up the run that proved the winner.

Weilman's Control Perfect.

Coveleskie's one-hit game was quite a feat, but Weilman really pitched just as good if not better baseball in the second game. Three hits were made off Weilman and as many Tigers were left stranded on the bags. Weilman's control was perfect, nary a batter reaching the initial cushion via the four-ball or hit-by-pitched-ball route. For a left-hander that's quite a feat.

It was Clarence Walker who made a valiant effort to win Hamilton's game in the opening tilt and it was Walker who came through for Weilman. After suffering a shutout for six rounds, Walker clouted one of Main's shoots midway between High and Crawford, starting the seventh, for a triple. He scored a moment later on Leary's sacrifice fly to Crawford.

The second and final run of this round was something of a freak. With Walker in and one down, Wares struck out, but reached first base when Stanage missed the ball. Clyde then coaxed a wild throw from Main, trying to pluck him off first, and the shorter raced to third. The squeeze play was then put on excellently, Wares dashing over the plate when Crossin bunted and was being retired by Main and Burns. It was quite a play.

Walker Gets Two Blows.

But four hits were made by the Browns in the two shows. However, three of the quartet were for extra bases. Walker's double was the only nick in the opener while Clarence poled a triple in the second. Leary got a double. The only one-spot was Bert Shotton's roller to Bush with Hall heaving in the eighth.

The Browns and Tigers meet in a single engagement at Sportsman's Park this afternoon. The curtain goes up at 3 o'clock.

THOMAS WINS 500 MILE AUTO RACE AND BREAKS RECORD

Driver of French Car Makes Average Time of 82.47 Miles an Hour on Indianapolis Speedway as Crowd of 100,000 Looks on—Six Are Hurt in Accidents—Oldfield, in Fifth Place, Heads Americans

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 30.—Rene Thomas, driving French car, won the fourth annual 500 mile race on the Indianapolis motor speedway today. All speedway records from five to 500 miles, were broken. The first American to finish was Barney Oldfield, who crossed the wire in fifth place.

Thomas' time was six hours, three minutes, 45 and 91-one-hundredth seconds. The winner maintained an average speed of 82.47 miles an hour. The former record of six hours 21 minutes and three one-hundredths seconds was established by Joe Dawson in 1912. The record established today was due in a large measur to the ideal weather conditions.

Arthur Duray finished second, seven minutes after the winner. Albert Guyot, teammate of Thomas, was the third driver to be given the checkered flag, and Jules Goux, winner of the 1913 race, finished in fourth place, six minutes ahead of Oldfield.

Six men were injured, none of them seriously, in the contest. Joe Dawson suffered a broken collar bone and minor injuries when his car turned over on the south turn after trying to dodge the wrecked machine of Ray Gilhooley. Vere Barnes, Dawson's mechanician, was hurt and Gilhooley and Nino Conai, his mechanician, also suffered minor injuries. Jean Charsagne and Albert Mitchell, handling an English car, limped away from their machine after it rolled over on a turn.

Winner Made One Stop.

The races was exciting from the start and the rivalry among the foreign teams made one of the most exciting finishes that has ever been witnessed at the Indianapolis course. George Boillot, in a desperate effort to overhaul Thomas, pushed his car to such excessive speed that in the 147th lap he was forced out, when leading the field, because of a broken frame.

Duray thrilled the spectators by his sensational effort to catch Thomas in the latter part of the contest and Goux seemed always to be a contender for first place. Thomas made one stop at the pits, Duray two and Guyot one. In the first 100 miles some drivers stopped on almost every lap. The race began to settle down after the 100-mile mark was set and the average speed increased. Thomas drove the last 100 miles at an average of more than 84 miles an hour.

Thomas Gets $40,000.

Thomas' car was No. 16. Goux carried the same number to victory last year. Thomas won first prize of $20,000 and accessory prizes and trophies will swell this amount to about $40,000.

Josef Christiens, in a Belgian car, finished sixth; Harry Grant, in an English machine, was seventh; Keene and Rodgers, in an American car, placed eighth, and William Carlson was ninth. E. V. Rickenbacher, in an American car, finished tenth, the last of the prize winners. Haupt, Mulford and Burman, in Knipper's entry, finished the race in the order named.

The showing of Bob Burman was regarded by many spectators as a disappointment, as was that of Tetzlaff, Disbrow, Mulford, Cooper and other stars.

It is estimated that 100,000 persons watched the contest. Thomas was heartily cheered when he drew up to the pits and embraced his mechanician, but through the last 50 miles the crowd was shouting for Oldfield and urging him to regain the honor America lost to France over the same course last year.

The following were the drivers of the cars in the race:

Number of Car, Driver, Country Name of Car—1, Disbrow, United States, Burman; 2, Cooper, United States, Stutz; 3, Oldfield, United States, Stutz; 4, Wilcox, United States, Grey Fox; 5, Keane, United States, Beaver; 7, Boillott, France, Peu 8, Tetzlaff, United States, Max 9, Christiaens, Belgium, Excelsio Guyot, France, Delage; 12, Chas Great Britain, Sunbeam; 14, Duray France, Peugeot; 15, Klein, United States, King; 16, Thomas, France, Delage; 17, Burman, United States, Burman; 19, Wishart, United States, Mercer; 21, Bragg, United States, Merce 22, Mulford, Germany, Mercedes; Anderson, United States, Stutz; Carlson, United States, Maxwell; Dawson, United States, Marmo 27, Grant, Great Britain, Sunbeam; Knipper, United Sates, Keeton; Friedrich, Germany, Bugatti; Chandler, United States, Braende 42, Richenbacker, United States, Dusenberg; 43, Haupt, United States Dusenberg; 48, Brock, United States Ray; 49, Gilhooley, Italy.

Kansas City to Get Valley Track Meet; St. Louis Can't Support It

Although the Missouri Valley Conference meet was a wonderful success as far as records are concerned, according to several of the officials, it was a decided failure financially. It was estimated that there were 3000 persons in the stands, with only about 2500 of these paid admissions. The receipts are certain to fall below the expenses.

It was stated before the meet that an attendance of 4000 would be necessary in order to break even. It also was stated that unless the desired number turned out, the meet would go to Kansas City next year.

Kansas, Kansas Aggies and Nebraska are in favor of moving the big classic, while Ames and Nebraska remain neutral, with Missouri standing pat on St. Louis. This matter will be taken up when the conference committee meets here in December.

As was expected, Washington failed to score a point in the meet. The locals had about 10 athletes entered, but the nearest they came to scoring was when Nelson finished sixth in the shotput.

In an interview after the meet Coach Stagg of Chicago said: "The victory of my boys certainly came as a surprise to me. I knew that I had a good team, but I did not know that it consisted of any record-breakers. I had conceded the meet to Leland Stanford, as I heard of their excellent performances on the coast. However, since we did win, our chances of taking the Big Nine meet next Saturday have received a boost."

The track was without a doubt one of the fastest in the country, according to assertions of the visiting athletes. It was a trifle dry for the prelims yesterday, but the rain put it in excellent shape.

The Stanford boys undoubtedly had a tough [illegible] of luck when McKee, their star sprinter, sprained a tendon in the 100-yard dash preliminary Last yesterday. McKee is a 10-flat man and was [illegible] winning chan by the [illegible]

The [illegible] which a runner repeated [illegible] of last year was the two-mile [illegible] won by Moss of Missouri. The [illegible] took this event as easy [illegible] as he did last year, [illegible] the [illegible] in 9m. 48s.

A remarkable incident occurred in the low hurdles when, with six participants, not a hurdle was knocked over in the race.

M. BROWN SAVES TERRIERS FROM DOUBLE DEFEAT

Local Manager Pitches Way to Victory in 2d Game, 4—3, Packers Win First, 4—2.

Even Without Ty Cobb, Organized Ball Teams Outdraw Federal League

ORGANIZED baseball scored a huge victory in an attendance way over the Federal League in St. Louis yesterday. The count was 16,000 in favor of the Browns-Tigers game at Sportsman's Park to 3000 for the Terriers-Kawfed show at Federal League Park.

The peculiar feature of the attendance test was that the American League bargain bill outdrew the twin show at the Fed park, without the services of Tyrus Cobb, the greatest drawing card in baseball. Cobb is not with the Tigers because of a fractured rib.

By W. J. O'Connor.

efore a small but intensely cultured crowd—about 2400 in round numbers — the Terriers yesterday afternoon lost the "pageant," 4-2, but won the "masque," 4-3, in their Decoration Day celebration with Kansas City.

The first portion of the entertainment was a gigantic fizzle because one of the visiting actors, Eugene Packard, "crabbed" the act from the start. Packard always was disagreeable, at no time being willing to share the spotlight with any of his conferees in the big production. However, Boucher, a local spear-carrier, rushed forward in the third act with a home run, tangoing around the hassock in the wake of Johnny Tobin, but this was the only time the local performers were up stage.

M. Brown at His Best.

In the "masque" performance Mordecai Brown, one of the early settlers, impersonated "gold," and assayed 99 per cent pure. He forgot his lines in the seventh epoch and the enemy got gay to the extent of tieing the score, but the home talent promptly got busy and won out.

Brown had dished up six successive ciphers when Stovall opened the seventh with a double. Perring walked, and when Misse fumbled Coles' roller the bases were filled. Goodwin's out, Misse to H. Miller, scored Stovall, while Easterly's single scored Perring and Coles, knotting the count. In the locals' portion of this round, a pass to Boucher, W. Miller's sacrifice and Drake's infield out put a runner on third, whence he scored on Hugh Miller's single to right. That won the game.

Tobin and Misse Star.

he playing of Tobin and Misse, newcomer, was a distinct feature the entertainment. Tobin walked hree times in the first game and mote three singles in the second. isse had two walks and three hits his credit. Score:

FED LEAGUE HEAD SEES REVOLUTION IN 60 DAYS

CHICAGO, May 30.—President Gilmore of the Federal League in a brief statement today said:

"Within 60 days there will be a revolution in baseball."

That was all he had to say, but the startling statement followed a general talk on conditions, especially those relating to the possible jumping of stars from the major leagues to the new organization.

Gilmore indicated that the result of the "Johnson case could make no difference in the coming revolution. He said he believe that there would be wholesale raiding of National and American League clubs within the next months, but gave no indication how soon the battle would start.

Foell said yesterday that he would give a decision on Pitcher Johnson injunction suit on Tuesday. The result of that case may be known, provided another postponement doesn't take place.

Chinese U. Nine Beats Columbia.

NEW YORK, May 30.—The Chinese University of Hawaii baseball team, which has lost fewer than 10 games of nearly fourscore against American universities from coast to coast, defeated Columbia, 4 to 2, here today. The locals played a poor game in the field, errors figuring in all of the visitors' runs.

FEDERAL

CHIFEDS DIVIDE DOUBLE SHUTOUT WITH HOOSIERS

CHICAGO, May 30.—(Federal)—Chicago and Indianapolis split shutouts this afternoon in the first meeting of the season. Rooney's home run and star fielding helped Falkenberg win the first for the visitors over Brennan, 5 to 0. Hendrix was victor over Billiard in the second, 1 to 0. Two bases on balls, followed by Farrell's single, gave the locals their run. Tinker hurt his right leg in the first game and did not play in the second.

SPORT SALAD by L. C. DAVIS

A Panacea for All Trouble.

WHILE the Judge in a $40,000 lawsuit in San Francisco was out of the room looking up a point of law, the contesting parties got together and affected a compromise for $750 in order that they might all go out and see the ball game.—News Item.

IF your wifey is running you deeply in debt,
Shake hands and go out to the ball game.
Don't get a divorce from the dear little pet,
Shake hands and go out to the ball game.
Invite her politely to powder her nose
And put on a fine pair of ten-dollar hose
(Though how you can pay for 'em, Lord only knows)—
Shake hands and go out to the ball game.

If you and your neighbor should have a dispute,
Shake hands and go out to the ball game.
Don't go to your lawyer and threaten a suit;
Shake hands and go out to the ball game.
Don't raise a rough house, if you happen to catch
His hens in your amateur veg'table patch;
For nature ordains that the chickens must scratch—
Shake hands and go out to the ball game.

SALLEE AT BEST, CARDINALS BREAK EVEN WITH CUBS

Willie Doak Starts Well in Opening Contest, but Blows in the Fifth.

By W. L. Veeck,

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 30.—The Cardinals didn't do anything marvelous on this Memorial Day. Neither did they do anything that they need to be specially ashamed of.

They played the Cubs two games of ball before the largest crowd of the season, this afternoon, and when they quit they were both bad and good. They were bad in the first game which they dropped 6 to 4; but they were good in the second, for they grabbed that one, 4 to 2. Sort of a fifty-fifty club, as to success and failure. Nothing to make you rant with enthusiasm, but not the kind of a ball club to make you tear your hair with anguish. Young Doak can be held responsible for the defeat. He got the impression that four innings constituted a ball game. That is, when a double-header is to follow. In the first four rounds, he allowed one run and one hit. But in the fifth he ascended so high and fell so far that he was still dazed when the shades of evening fell. He allowed the Cubs to score five runs in the fifth, which were quite sufficient.

Sallee in Fine Form.

It's difficult to bestow praise where it is due in that second. Sallee was immense. He gave six hits, but three of them, and all the Cubs runs, were made in the ninth when he felt he could be lenient.

Butler, up four times, drove out three hits, more than half made by the Cards, and scored two runs.

Wingo also starred. He walloped a drive against the brick clubhouse in center for a homer and was across the plate and swallowing the last of a long drink when they finally got the ball back.

Magee was bad in the second. He kept saying naughty things to Umpire Byron and was finally chased to the clubhouse.

BOSTON MAN WINNER IN SOUTHERN TENNIS CHAMPS

NEW ORLEANS, May 30.—Irving Wright of Boston became Southern singles tennis champion today, when he defeated Esmond Phelps of New Orleans in the final match of the tournament, which began with 52 players. The score was 7—5, 6—1, 6—3.

Miss I. Murphy of New Orleans lost the ladies' singles championship to Miss E. Legendre, also of New Orleans.

Miss Murphy and R. B. Logan of New Orleans won the mixed doubles championship.

Captain of Davis Cup Team Loses in Special Match

H. H. Hackett and Dean Mathey Are Beaten by Little and Inman in Straight Sets.

NEW YORK, May 30.—The top class tennis players of the country, including six men who have held national championships and contested for the Davis cup met in the special tournament for the Cedarhurst cup today on the turf courts of the Rockaway Hunting Club. William A. Larned was the chief figure of interest. By a vigorous net attack he beat W. M. Hall, former Middle States champion, 6—4, 3—6, 6—4. E. P. Larned outplayed A. H. Man Jr., Yale's ex-champion; and Dean Mathey, Princeton, beat C. F. Watson Jr. easily. Robert Leroy, ex-intercollegiate champion, won a place in the semi-final round.

The doubles were enlivened by an upset. H. H. Hackett, captain of the Davis cup team, and Dean Mathey were beaten by R. D. Little and F. C. Inman at 6—3, 3—6, 6—4.

Two Runs in Ninth Give Princeton First Game With Yale, 2 to 1

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 30.—After Yale had played an uphill game and tied the score in the eighth inning, Princeton came to bat in the ninth and batted in two runs, winning the first game of the annual series, 2 to 1. Yale outbatted the Tigers, but Devo kept the hits scattered. Gile kept his hits widely separated excepting in the ninth, when Green's liner to right sent in two runs. Both teams played errorless ball, and three fast double plays featured. Score:

SHEA'S WORK IS FEATURE OF C. B. C. TRACK MEET

The surprise of the annual field meet of Christian Brothers' College yesterday was the performance of Tom Shea, accredited one of the best football players of St. Louis, who captured the coveted diamond medal in the college championship 100-yards event. His time was 10 2-5 seconds. Everybody had figured Clinton Willett as the only possible winner. Besides the 100 yards championship, Shea also won the shot put from scratch.

The competitors finished in the following order in the 100 yard dash—T. Shea, C. Willett and A. Sprick. Time, 10 2-5s.

CORNELL RUNNERS WIN I.-C. CHAMPS; PENNSY SECOND

D. S. Caldwell, Ithacan Star, Lowers John Paul Jones Record in Half Mile.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 30.—Represented by one of the best balanced track and field teams that has come out of Ithaca in some years, Cornell won the thirty-ninth annual championship of the intercollegiate amateur athletic association here, scoring a total of 43 points out of a possible 195.

With the championship went permanent possession of the intercollegiate trophy, the victory giving Cornell the final leg on the silver vase necessary to complete its capture. Twelve points behind the Red and White finished Pennsylvania, with Michigan third with 29½ points, Dartmouth fourth with 23, Yale fifth with 22, California sixth with 18, Harvard seventh with 11, Princeton eighth with 7½, while Columbia, Pennsylvania State, Brown and Johns Hopkins, completed the field.

Two Records Fall.

Nearly 10,000 spectators watched the athletes from 5 colleges compete under almost perfect weather condition. Two new records were established. J. S. Hoffmire of Cornell clipped three-fifths of a second off the two-mile record formerly held by P. R. Withington of Harvard, running the distance in 9m. 23 4-5s. Another Cornell runner, D. S. Caldwell, won the 880 run in 1m. 53 2-5s., reducing by 2-5s. the time made by John Paul Jones, also of Cornell, at Philadelphia two years ago, and equaling the collegiate record made by the famous runner, C. J. Kilpatrick, while a student at Union College years ago.

Summary:

Running high jump—Oler, Yale, and Nichols, California, tied for first at 6 ft. 2 in.; Davey, Princeton, and Morrison, Cornell, tied for third at 6 ft. 1 in. Maker, California, fifth, 6 ft.

Mile run—Speiden, Cornell; Madeira, Pennsylvania; MacKenzie, Princeton; Poucher, Yale; Mardeau, Dartmouth. Time, 4m. 20 1-5s.

Two-mile run—J. S. Hoffmire, Cornell; McCurdy, Pennsylvania; Potter, Cornell; Coop, Brown; Lee, Johns Hopkins. Time, 9m. 23 4-5s., a new intercollegiate record.

440-yard dash—Meredith, Pennsylvania, first; Barron, Harvard, second; Jansen, Michigan, third; Wilkie, Yale, fourth; Bingham, Harvard, fifth. Time, 48 3-5s.

Shot-put—Beatty, Columbia, 48 ft. 4 in., first; Whitney, Dartmouth, 48 ft. ½ in., second; Harbison, Yale, 45 ft. 6½ in., third; Dorias, Pennsylvania, 44 ft. 6½ in., fourth; Kohler, Michigan, 44 ft. 3½ in., fifth.

120-yard hurdles—Braun, Dartmouth, first; Preble, California, second; Brodt, Cornell, third; Hammitt, Pennsylvania State, fourth; Ferguson, Pennsylvania, fifth. Time, 15 3-5s. Score of leaders: Pennsylvania 13, Dartmouth 10, Cornell 8, Yale 7.

100-yard dash—Bond, Michigan, first; Reiler, Cornell, second; Seward, Michigan, third; Ingersoll, Cornell, fourth; Smith, Michigan, fifth. Time, 10s.

Pole vault—Camp, Harvard, Milton, Cornell and Buck, Dartmouth, tied for first, at 12 ft. 3 in.; Nichols, California, and Carter, Yale, tied for fourth place at 12 ft.

Points of leaders—Cornell, 28½; Pennsylvania, 16; Dartmouth, 14; Michigan, 13.

880-yard run—Caldwell, Cornell, first; Brown, Yale, second; Meredith, Pennsylvania, third; Capper, Harvard, fourth; Hayes, Princeton, fifth. Time, 1m. 53 2-5s., new intercollegiate record and equals American record.

Broad jump—G. Nordell, Dartmouth, first; distance, 22 ft. 6 in.; Brodt, Cornell, second; distance, 22 ft. 4¼ in.; Bradway, California, third; distance, 22 ft. 2¾ in.; LaHame, Pennsylvania, fourth; distance, 21 ft. 9½ in.; Ferris, Michigan, fifth; distance, 21 ft. 4 in.

Points of leaders: Cornell, 37½; Pennsylvania, 21; Dartmouth, 19; Yale, 7.

AUTO JAM AT PAGEANT PUNCTURES GAS TANKS

That the old saying that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" is still true, was indicated by an incident during the parking of the cars at the Pageant on Thursday night, which at the same time brought out a weakness in motor car construction.

The large number of cars in Forest Park compelled them to follow each other very closely and in consequence some small collisions occurred, with the result that gasoline tanks suspended at the rear were damaged and some punctured. A number of cars had to be towed in as a result.

This incident, noticed by F. H. Ehnts, sales manager of the Dorris Motor Car Co., brought to mind the feature in the construction of the Dorris car which entirely eliminates the danger of having the gasoline tank thus damaged.

The Dorris gasoline tank is securely suspended from the left frame member beneath the floor of the car and fully protected by the car, the running board and the frame. In fact, it is necessary to wreck a Dorris car before the tank can be damaged. This tank is nine inches in diameter and 60 inches long and made of heavy gauge steel, the same as the tanks which are suspended at the rear.

There is another advantage in having the tank in this position, as the filler cap and the gasoline gauge, instead of being at the rear, where they can be covered by dust and dirt and in an awkward position for filling, are on the Dorris placed under the front floor board, fully protected from the dirt and in an accessible position.

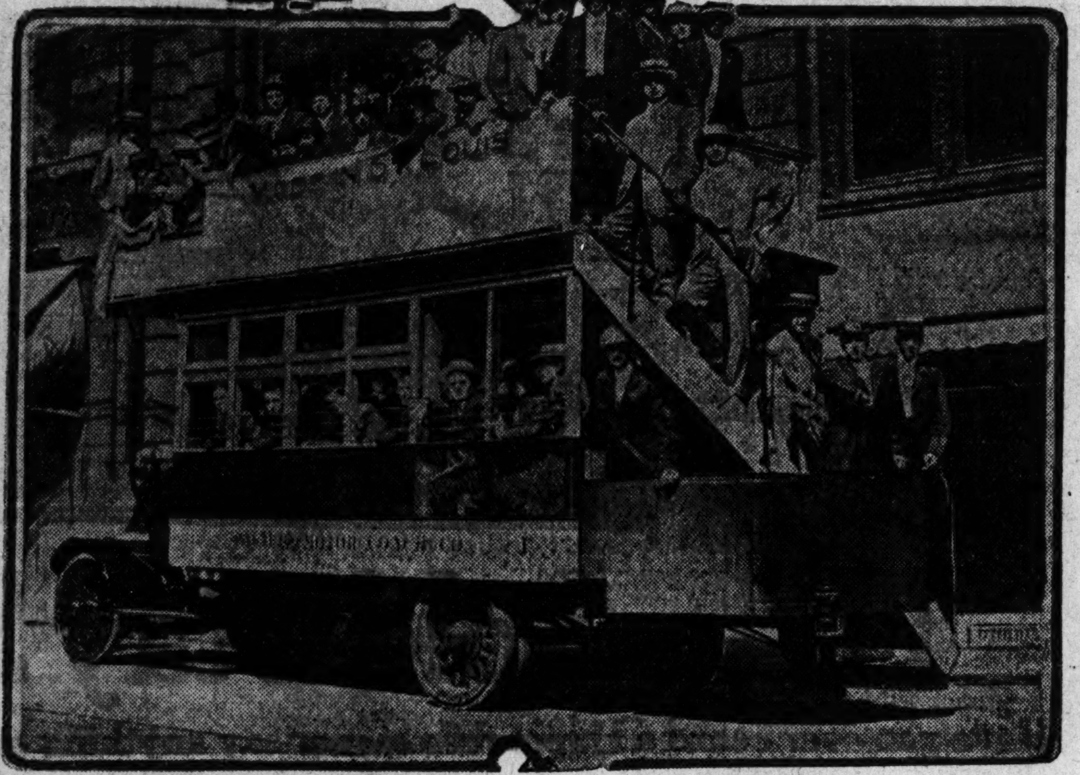
First of 105 Motor Buses, Built in St. Louis, to Be Used Around Los Angeles, California



Much attention was attracted on the streets of St. Louis Saturday by a double-decked motor bus, painted leaf green and carrying 54 passengers seated and possibly a dozen others hanging by straps and railings. It was the first of 105 exactly similar buses which are being built in St. Louis by the St. Louis Car Co. to be shipped to Los Angeles, Cal., to the Pacific Motor Coach Co. The St. Louis Car Co. is building the double-deck bodies only for the Kelley-Springfield Truck Co. of Springfield, O., by which the big order was sold.

The "lower floor" of the car is fitted with cross seats and a separate compartment is provided for smokers in the rear. The upper deck is reached by broad steps from the rear and the conductor is stationed there to collect fares on a pay-as-you-enter basis.

The entire fleet of buses will be shipped to Los Angeles at the rate of 12 a month. There they will be used in service between the various resort towns surrounding Los Angeles. W. H. Anderson is St. Louis representative of the Kelley-Springfield truck.

KANSAS CITY USES 62 CARS

One city seemingly has solved the transportation question to its entire satisfaction by installing an equipment of Fords for the city officials and other municipal employes whose duties make it necessary for them to do a good deal of traveling about. A letter recently sent by M. A. Flynn, City Comptroller of Kansas City, Mo., to the Kansas City branch of the Ford Motor Co. shows beyond doubt that the city fathers have never regretted for a minute selling an equipment of heavy cars and replacing them with Fords:

"About a year ago we sold nearly all of our high-priced heavy machines and replaced them with Fords," says the Comptroller. "The city is now operating about 62 machines, of which more than two-thirds are Fords. They have given satisfaction in every particular. The first cost and the upkeep cost, of course, is a great deal less than for our other cars, and they do the work we require of them easier and better. Any municipality figuring on installing an equipment of cars cannot do better than to buy Fords."

REGAL AGENCY TO MOVE

The Anselm-Ganahl Motor Car Co., distributers for Regal cars in Missouri, Illinois, Arkansas and Kentucky, now located at 1512 Locust street, has closed a five-year lease on the building now occupied by the Pierce-Arrow agency at 4701 Washington boulevard. Extensive alterations will be made and the building occupied by July 15. The number of sales and the volume of business handled by this company in the past nine months necessitates immediate removal to larger quarters.

NEW MODEL LOCOMOBILE

The first of the new model Locomobiles received in St. Louis was sold in 15 minutes after arrival by A. L. Elwood, manager of the local Locomobile branch house. The feature of the new car is that "you push the button to start it." The new car has been greatly beautified as to lines and finish and the equipment has received more thought than is given to the average house in building. It has one man top with plate glass windows in the back, rainproof wind shield, hidden curtains, quickly put in place, and it is electrically locked, a Yale key disconnecting every electrical attachment if desired or the side and tail lights may be left burning on the streets. The closed bodies of the Locomobile Co. this year will comprise those built by the company and others by Hollbrook of New York and foreign bodies built in Paris. If desired, exclusive patterns will be furnished.

GOTSHALL QUITS ST. LOUIS

Announceemnt was made Saturday that Nelson S. Gottshall, vice-president and general manager of the Cole Motor Co. of Missouri, has withdrawn from that company to take up a new line in Chicago. Mr. Gotshall came to St. Louis about three years ago and made his mark in the St. Louis automobile trade by his push and energy and his selling ability, as demonstrated on the Cole line. H. B. Graham, president of the Cole Motor Co. of Missouri, has not yet announced a successor to Mr. Gotshall, but will do so in a few days.

HEAVY CARS MADE BEST RECORD ON TIRE USE

The fact that the relation of weight to upkeep and maintenance is sometimes distorted in the public mind is clearly evidenced in the list of prize winners announced by the Ajax-Grieb Rubber Co., who distributed $5000 to motor drivers showing the highest mileage, starting April, 1912, and ending last month, on Ajax tires. Fifteen prizes were awarded and the first three who pulled down the big money—$500, $300 and $200—are all drivers of cars which are not placed in the light weight class. The three winning cars and their mileage records were a Locomobile, owned in Marlboro, Mass., which rolled up the high score of 16,-782 miles; a Packard, owned in Detroit, 13,900 miles; and a Cadillac, owned in Victoria, B. C., 13,761 miles.

Light cars were entered and occasionally appear in the list of winners—but not up at the top.

ANOTHER CHANDLER RECO

Word has just been received by T. L. Hausmann of the Overland Automobile Co. of another economy test made by the Automobile Club of America at New York City, which credits Chandler with 24.3 miles to the gallon of gasoline. The record is considered remarkable, in view of the fact that it was made driving through the traffic of Central Park, at an average speed of 21 miles an hour, on a very windy day, rain threatening and the temperature registering 38 degrees.

PAIGE

$44,000 $
$1,250,000

The Paige—and Public Demand

In Three Years, Paige Sales Have Increased From $44,000 to more than $1,250,000 a Month

These astounding figures are indisputable evidence of Paige supremacy in the medium price field.

They indicate an increasing demand for Paige cars that is without parallel in the middle division of the Automobile Industry. They affirm plainly and clearly that the Paige is a "preferred" investment with the motor buying public—the "first choice" of men who weigh motor car values.

As you turn these figures over in your mind, remember that increased sales can only come as a result of increased demand. The public does the buying—the public alone determines whether automobile sales shall increase or decrease.

So—above all—these figures mean that the motor public has rendered an overwhelming verdict in favor of the Paige. In the most substantially convincing way—by an investment of over $1,250,000 a month—Motor Car buyers have selected the Paige as the best value of the medium priced field.

With the facts before you—in the faceof such sweeping evidence—can you afford to purchase any car until you have carefully investigated the Paige? Isn't it logical to assume that there is a tangible, practical reason back of this marked preference for one car.

See the Paige today. The answer is in the car itself.

Much Thicker Tires

You get out of a tire in real wear just what the manufacturer puts into the tire.

Actual measurements of cross-sections of the leading makes of rough tread and smooth tread tires prove that the tread of "Nobby Tread" Tires is very much thicker than other tires.

This unusual extra thickness in addition to the extra thick, strong shoe underneath means just so much more real tire wear.

This is one of the reasons why experts call "Nobby Treads"

Business Basis Tires

Automobile owners everywhere are rapidly learning to buy tires on a real business basis, viz:—the basis of ultimate economy.

And remember this—investigations prove that with "Nobby Tread" Tires punctures are 90% less than with the average tire.

These are the reasons why "Nobby Tread" Tires are today the largest selling high-grade anti-skid tires in the world.

MADE 41.5 MILES ON GALLON OF GASOLINE

What is claimed to be the highest mileage on one gallon of gasoline ever made by an automobile west of the Mississippi River was the record of a Franklin car last Thursday over St. Louis County roads. The Franklin, the 1914 demonstrator of the Franklin Auto & Supply Co., a six-cylinder, air cooled car, weighing 2900 lbs., was driven by Joseph B. Dryer, president of that company and Robert E. Lee was the official observer.

The record of the car was 41½ miles on a measured gallon of gasoline. The car was driven from the Franklin salesrooms on Grand avenue to the filling station at Clayton and Skinker roads and the observer poured into an auxiliary tank one gallon of Pennant grade gasoline, the regular tank having been previously drained. The measure used was certified by the St. Louis Inspector of Weights and Measures.

The route taken was out Clayton road to Kerr's Mill and Clarkson roads, the highest point in St. Louis County and then on Baxter road back to the Clayton road, east to the Ballast road, thence to Manchester road, east to Denny road, north on Denny road to Clayton road, then east to Skinker, north on Skinker to Lindell drive and east on the drive to a point opposite the Jefferson Memorial, where the engine died, the last drop of gasoline being exhausted. Just as it stopped the speedometer clicked 41.5 miles.

The speedometer was then tested on a measured two miles from Blair monument to Skinker road, after a fresh supply of gasoline had been put into the tank and returned to the garage where it was found that the total distance traveled was 58.2 miles and that the consumption of lubricating oil had been less than one quarter pint.

Legions More Adopt Goodyear Tires

This Year's Increase So Far—55 Per Cent

Please mark this fact:

After men have tried millions of No-Rim-Cut tires, this year's sales jump 55 per cent.

After going by leaps from bottom place to the top, this tire in one year wins 55 per cent more users. And wins them, mark you, by the mileage test; for most users today meter mileage.

The Highest Court

This verdict comes from the highest court. There is no appeal from users. They bought last year more Goodyear tires than of any other tire in the world. On top of that, they this year buy one-half as many more.

That's because we ended rim-cutting in the only feasible way.

It is because we saved men countless blowouts with our "On-Air" cure. And no other maker does that.

It is because one method—used by us alone—lessens loose tread danger by 60 per cent.

It is because of our All-Weather tread—a double-thick, resistless anti-skid, which runs on dry roads like a smooth tread.

No other tire offers one of these features. And the verdict of users tells you what they mean.

Half Former Prices

No-Rim-Cut tire prices are about one-half what they were in 1909. Part of the saving comes in lower-cost rubber, but a very large part is due to quantity output.

There are 16 makes of tires today which sell at higher prices—up to one-half higher. The cost of three of some of them will buy you four of Goodyears.

Yet we give you in all ways the utmost in a tire. And in four ways we give you more than any other maker offers.

If you consider these facts—with the verdict of users—you can't doubt what tire to buy.

FINE ROADS CAN BE BUILT WITHOUT ADDITIONAL TAX

Plan Proposed by Automobile Chamber of Commerce to Satisfy All, Without Curtailing Mileage.

Highway authorities may reconcile the demands of automobilists and business men for permanent intercity highways and of farmers for improved tributary roads with the objection of taxpayers to increased road taxes by following these rules formulated by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce after a study of the opinions of prominent highway authorities:

Take a census of traffic to ascertain the number and kinds of vehicles using the State roads at different points.

Build brick, concrete or other durable roads wherever there is much heavy teaming, motor trucking and automobile driving.

Such roads should be built wherever the cost of properly maintaining any other kind would amount to more in 25 years than the cost of maintaining the durable roads plus its extra first cost and interest on the excess.

Issue 15-year to 25-year bonds to pay for permanent work if sufficient funds are not available. It is sound, economic policy to raise money with bonds for all road work that will outlive the term of the bonds.

Pay out of current funds provided by general taxation and assessment the cost of surfacing with any material that is not as durable as brick or concrete.

Make gravel roads where traffic is comparatively light and there is not much automobile travel, first grading and draining the foundation thoroughly.

Extend the mileage of permanent highways with money saved by building gravel roads instead of macadam roads.

Confine construction as much as possible to durable roads and gravel roads, so that the total cost will not exceed that of an equal mileage of macadam roads, nor increase the State or county expenditure.

Use quartz, shells, burnt clay or a mixture of sand and clay where gravel is not readily obtainable. They are all good substitutes.

Grade and drain the earth roads and insist upon having them dragged in spring and fall. If necessary, get a drag law passed similar to those in Iowa and Ohio. Drag the gravel roads also in spring and fall and apply new gravel to ruts and depressions.

Concentrate the expenditure of State funds on the improvement and maintenance of intercity or trunk lines, because they carry about 80 per cent of the total traffic.

Instead of depending for road funds upon uncertain appropriations by Legislature, provide by law for an annual levy on all taxable property.

Work convicts on the roads and in the production of road materials, thereby cutting down the labor cost.

Have the State or county acquire or lease gravel and sand pits and install modern excavating, sifting and washing machinery to reduce the cost of materials.

Select the most suitable materials nearest the roads to be improved, remembering that haulage is a large item of expense.

Call for bids on long stretches or big mileages of road in one locality to be built at one time, thus enabling contractors to use motor trucks or tractors for hauling and other special labor and time-saving machinery.

Test all materials before use and see that the contractors live up to specifications.

Adherence to these policies will be pretty sure to satisfy all road users and taxpayers and win approval for the highway commissioner who adopts them.

TO PROTECT FACTORY MEN

Steps are being taken by the Lozier company to safeguard its workmen against bodily injury. A welfare committee consisting of members of the recently organized Young Men's Club has been chosen to look after the welfare of factory and office employes in the plants at Detroit and Plattsburg, N. Y.

"The work of the welfare committee will embrace every phase of welfare work from visiting the sick to placarding all parts of the factories with "Safety First" notices.

A great deal of new machinery has been added in the past few months in both plants and it was necessary that steps should be taken to instruct every operator how to observe the rules of "safety first."

NOVEL USE FOR FIR TREE

In his new book "Trail of the 'Bull-Dog,'" a journey of 50,000 miles by automobile, Dr. Charles G. Percival, editor of Health Magazine of New York City, tells of a high fir tree on the banks of the Lewis River in Washington that has been leased by its owner, Mrs. Mary Bratten, to the Aetna Telephone Co. for a period of 15 years for $10. The span of the river at this point being considerable, the telephone company entered into this peculiar contract because it was cheaper to lease the big tree than to go to the expense of putting in a regulation pole of sufficient height to keep the wires above the navigation in the river. The wording of the lease gives the company in the event of the death of the tree, or it being destroyed by fire or wind, power to erect a pole in its place.

MARMON WINS HILL CLIMB

A Marmon owned by Dr. Frank Edmonton and driven by W. T. Edgar won the free-for-all hill climb at Atlanta, Ga., May 9.

The contest was held under the auspices of the Atlanta Auto and Accessory Association and is an annual event.

The hill is the Stewart avenue grade, which is nine-tenths of a mile long, and the Marmon time was 47 1-5 seconds, or a rate of speed of 68.7 miles per hour.

There were 13 cars entered. Second place was taken by a Pope Hartford and third by a National.

JEFFERY WEEK IN ST. LOUIS

"Jeffery week" in St. Louis will open Monday at the salesrooms of the Jeffery Motor Sales Co., 5133 Delmar boulevard. Half a dozen models of this new car of an old-time manufacturer, the Thomas B. Jeffery Co., will be shown, both in the four and six cylinder types. The Jeffery motor is a high-speed, high-efficiency block type, which approximates the motor used in the best European cars. The success of the car, which is in its second year, is indicated by the increase of 100 per cent in the orders from dealers for the 1914 line over the 1913 distribution, which was 7000 cars.

Hups Sold Stay Sold

Have you ever heard a Hupmobile owner say anything but good of his car?

Haven't you noticed that when he wants to dispose of it to get a new one, he never has any difficulty in so doing?

Haven't you observed how willing any dealer is to take a Hup in trade at a good figure—and how few of them you see on the floor of the second-hand dealer?

If you haven't noticed these things ask any Hup owner—and you'll get the answer as to why Hups sold stay sold.

Ask Any Hupmobilist

The Hupmobile's reputation for lesser maintenence cost, for longer life, and for a higher cash value in the second-hand market is founded on the experience of Hup owners.

It is not a thing of recent growth.

It is as old as the Hupmobile itself.

Owners of other cars can't understand the Hup owner's intense loyalty and enthusiasm for his car.

Their own experience knows no such economy as typifies the month-in and month-out use of the Hup.

They see Hup owners actually going out of their way to make Hupmobile sales to their best friends.

You can easily verify all this, possibly in your own neighborhood.

A chat with a Hup owner will reveal to you phases of economy and car service you have never perceived.

The Hupmobile dealer can give you scores of names and specific instances equally enlightening and convincing.

Call on him today.

MISSOURI WOMAN IS WELL AND HAPPY AFTER HEALTH MIRACLE

She Leads Active Life in Country After Recovery by Using Remarkable Remedy.

Mrs. J. B. Trullinger of Norborne, Mo., was ill for months with derangements of the digestive tract. She suffered terrible pain and was seldom able to be about.

She took Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy with results that most happily surprised her and astonished her physician.

Mrs. Trullinger lives out on Rural Route 1, out of Norborne, and leads an active country life. She writes:

"I take great pleasure in telling you what Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy has done for me. When I wrote you last March I was hardly able to be up at all. I endured awful suffering. I would get so bad I would become unconscious, and the nauseating spells I had would leave me as weak as if I had had a long spell of sickness nearly as bad as typhoid.

"Words cannot express the appreciation I have for your medicine. I am now able to work all day long. All this summer and fall I have felt just fine, gaining in strength and flesh."

Just such happy stories are told by thousands who write after taking Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy. The first dose convinces.

Because of the remarkable success of this remedy there are many imitators, so be careful. Be sure it's MAYR'S. Probably it is known among your neighbors; ask them. Go to Judge & Dolph and Wolff-Wilson drug stores and ask about the wonderful results it has been accomplishing—or send to Geo. H. Mayr, Mfg. Chemist, 154-156 Whiting St., Chicago, Ill., for free book on stomach ailments and many grateful letters from people who have been restored. Any druggist can tell you the wonderful results.—ADV.

AUTO NEWS AND GOSSIP

Mrs. H. B. Graham of St. Louis and sister, Miss Ruth, spent last week with relatives in Springfield, Ill. Mrs. Graham drove there and back in a Cole six-thirty touring car. The return drive via Alton, was made in five hours, with three stops en route.

Fred S. Beckwith, manager of the Mogul Motor Truck Sales Co., departed Thursday for a two weeks' trip to the Texas lumber district.

Twelve Blackfoot Indian chiefs were driven around St. Louis Saturday afternoon in White cars furnished by H. M. Rosenberg of the White company's St. Louis branch. They were attired in full war garb and some carried tom toms. They visited the Mayor and Chief of Police and then went to Jefferson Barracks. They went to the Shriner convention with the Oklahoma delegation.

George Weber of the Weber Implement and Auto Co. spent a day last week at the Hupmobile factory. His company represents this car in St. Louis.

F. L. Pierce, sales manager of the Regal Motor Car Co., was in St. Louis Friday, in consultation with the local Regal distributers, the Anselm-Ganahl Motor Car Co.

NEW FOUR IS POPULAR

J. V. Hall, sales manager at Olds Motor Works, Lansing, Mich., is closing some remarkable contracts on the new Model 42, four cylinder Oldsmobile.

Mr. Hall says, "We had not planned to open our newapaper campaign on the new Model 42 until the latter part of July, since we are only able to produce 200 cars as the first allotment which we are distributing one to a dealer, until we begin manufacturing in quanities August 1.

"News of the new model has spread over the entire country by some mysterious means and we have dealers wiring and writing daily for cars in greater quantities than they have ever ordered from Olds Motor Works in the past."

The Oldsmobile is handled in St. Louis by the De Luxe Automobile Co.

MADE NEW RECORD FROM NASHVILLE TO ST. LOUIS

D. R. Dorris, agent for the Dorris Motor Car Co. at Nashville, Tenn., accompanied by Mrs. Dorris and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Davis of Nashville, drove a Dorris car from Nashville to St. Louis in 22 hours' running time from the Court House in Nashville to the Jefferson Hotel in St. Louis. This is the fastest time for this trip ever made by any automobile and stands as a record.

The car was a regular stock model 1914 Dorris car and the trip was made without mechanical adjustment and fortunately not a puncture. The roads were found in good condition, which was a help in making the exceptional time.

Mr. Dorris does not attribute the record to any great speed, but simply to consistent running and a good average speed at all times, which was made possible by the balance and spring suspension of the car.

NEWEST 2-DOOR CAR

The most significant announcement of the year in the automobile industry is the introduction by the Kissel Motor Car Co. of a two-door body as a standard construction. This revolutionary style is offered as an optional feature of the new Kissel Kar 48-"Six," known as series B.

For some months the Kissels have been building this body type on special order, and with such increasing success that it was decided to manufacture it in quantity.

The two-door body is very handsome, giving the car a notable distinction as well as grace and smartness. It is a perfect, unbroken stream line from the bow of the bonnet to "midships." Both driver and passengers enter the tonneau from 26-inch doors set at the rear on either side of the car.

The front seats are individual, and between them is an eight-inch aisle permitting free passage from the rear. Both a four and five passenger model is offered, the rear seats in the four-passenger being separated by an arm.

HORSE USE DECREASES

The number of horses in commercial service has shown a rapid decrease during the past year, according to statistics compiled by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. This decrease in some cases has reached over 14 per cent, as in the instance of Indianapolis. In New York the number has decreased 8 per cent and in Chicago 5 per cent.

"In New York the decrease in the number of draft horses is very noticeable," says H. E. Harding, of the Motz Tire and Rubber Co.'s New York branch. "Scarcely a week passes that we do not equip trucks which have been purchased to replace horse-drawn vehicles. The severity of the past winter resulted in a heavy mortality among horses in commercial service. Many of those who lost horses replaced them with trucks."

LOZIER HAS NEW LIGHT SIX

Before the end of May the Lozier Motor Co. will have in the hands of its dealers a new light six, selling at $3250. This new car is a larger edition of the light-weight Lozier six which has been on the market for over a year's time. The passenger capacity of the car has been increased and a number of other improvements have been made.

The wheelbase has been lengthened from 127½ to 132 inches, allowing ample room for seven passengers. The car is equipped with vanishing seats, like those seen in the Lozier light four.

The stroke of the motor has been increased to 6 inches, the bore remaining 3¾ inches. On block test the new motor shows a minimum of 65 horsepower.

FEW USE SHOCK ABSORBER

"A recent canvas among owners of Jackson automobiles, covering 300 names, disclosed the astonishing fact that only one in every 100 Jackson owners use shock absorbers," said Jos. A. Schlecht of the Mound City Buggy Co. "While this showing is remarkable, it is easily accounted for by the fact that all Jackson cars have full elliptic springs both front and rear.

"Most spring breakage occurs in snubbing the rebound and it is right here that the full elliptic spring, with its travel of eight inches, instead of about four, shows a tremendous advantage. Full elliptic springs give the widest possible range of action and have surprising resiliency. It is an open secret that the Jackson is one of the easiest riding cars in the world."

HINTS FOR OBTAINING INCREASED TIRE MILEAGE

An automobile tire, like the human body, does a magnificent service if treated fairly; if abused, it wears out long before its allotted time. As a help to those who would get utmost mileage, the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. offers the following suggestions to motorists:

(1) Don't drive with underinflated tires; (2) don't neglect the little cuts in your tread; (3) don't encounter severe jolts; (4) don't delay tire repairs; (5) don't ruin your tubes; (6) don't start or stop suddenly; (7) don't drive with wheels out of alignment; (8) don't fail to use French talc in casing; (9) don't run in ruts, or scrape against the curb; (10) don't drive in car tracks; (11) don't use chains—use all-weather tread tires; (12) don't allow your tires to encounter sharp obstructions; (13) don't allow grease, oil or acid to touch your tires (14) don't allow clincher rims to become bent or rusty; (15) don't let rust collect on the rims; (16) don't carry spare tubes unprotected; (17) don't fail to keep your spare tires in a cover.

Why Drag Through Life

Wearing Worthless Trusses?

90% of the Suffering and Trouble Ruptured People Go Through Is Caused By Spring and Leg-Strap Trusses

Aren't you sick and tired of wearing trusses you can't make hold, which you can't feel safe in, or which hurt so they scarcely give you a minute's peace?

Don't you know that such contraptions will sooner or later let your rupture get the best of you?

Don't you know they are almost sure to cripple you up, so you won't be able to keep at work, won't be able to make a living.

Aren't you afraid they'll gradually let you get so bad that sooner or later you'll have to face a dangerous operation?

Aren't you willing to make a sixty-day test—without having to risk a cent—and see for yourself what a relief it is to get rid of such misery-causing makeshifts?

No More Belts, Leg-Straps or Springs

We have found a way to hold any man's rupture without harmful pressure, without any belts or springs around your waist, without having to wear leg-straps.

It is our guaranteed rupture holder.

It is as big an improvement over elastic and spring trusses and so-called "appliances" as the modern locomotive is over the first steam engine ever built.

60 Days' Trial to Prove It.

We have so much faith in it—have seen what it has done for so many others—that we are willing to make one especially for your case and send it to you for sixty days' trial. Willing to give you plenty of time to see for yourself just how good it is.

If it doesn't keep your rupture from coming out or from bothering you in any way, then you can send it back and it won't cost you a single penny.

It is the only thing we know of for rupture that you can get on long enough trial to make sure, because the only thing good enough to stand a long and thorough test.

All About It in Free Book.

Don't send any money. Just write for our free book—cloth bound, 20 separate articles, 96 pages—and find out everything you want to know. It is full of facts never before put in print.

It shows just why operation is nearly always a gamble with death and why those who manage to live through it often have to keep on wearing a truss.

It exposes the fakes and humbugs—puts you on guard against being fooled and against throwing money away.

And it tells all about our guaranteed rupture holder—the famous Cluthe Automatic Massaging Truss. Shows how simple it is. Why it needs no belt or leg-straps. How it instantly and automatically protects you against every strain, so your rupture can't be forced out. How it provides the only way ever discovered for overcoming the weakness which is the real cause of rupture. How it has brought complete cure in thousands of cases that seemed almost hopeless. How it is waterproof and will hold in the bath. How you can get it on 60 days' trial and how little it costs if you keep it.

Explains the care and attention we give you and why, because of our long experience and thorough knowledge of rupture, we are successful in cases that would utterly baffle your local truss fitters.

Write for the book today. That will take only a minute. But it may free you from trouble and worry for the rest of your life.

LACLEDE'S 5-TIMES GREAT GRANDSONS SEE STATUE RITES

Pierre Chouteau, 16, and Pierre Charles Laclede, 17, Attend Unveiling in City Hall Square.

ZOLNAY IS THE SCULPTOR

Many of Most Prominent Persons Socially Are Descended From Founder of St. Louis.

Two great - great - great-great-great-grandsons of Pierre Laclede stood on the pedestal of the new statue of the founder of St. Louis as it was unveiled yesterday morning in City Hall Square. Pierre Chouteau, 16 years old, of 5579 Clemens avenue, a Soldan High School student, pulled the cord which removed the covering from the statue. Pierre Charles Laclede, 17, of Ste. Genevieve, who was not scheduled for an official part in the ceremony, stepped upon the pedestal and stood near Chouteau as the covering fell from the figure of their common ancestor.

A large party of the Laclede descendants, who occupied seats of honor, welcomed young Laclede when he appeared with Mrs. Charles P. Johnson of 4300 Washington boulevard, a former neighbor of his family in Ste. Genevieve. At the moment of the unveiling he ascended the platform and stood near Chouteau and his mother.

Pierre in Each Generation.

Chouteau was introduced by George D. Markham as "Pierre Chouteau, the son of Pierre Chouteau, the son of Pierre Chouteau, the son of Pierre Chouteau, and the five-times-great-grandson of Pierre Laclede, through the oldest branch of the family."

Young Laclede, according to members of the family, is descended from Pierre Chouteau, only son of Pierre Laclede, through Chouteau's second marriage, in the same degree as the young Chouteau of today is descended through the first marriage. Pierre Chouteau took his second wife in Ste. Genevieve and the descendants of this branch of the family have lived there ever since. The family name was Chouteau until about 20 years ago, when the late Fred Chouteau, by an act of the Legislature, changed his name to Laclede. He was the father of the present Pierre Charles Laclede.

Only Surviving Descendant.

Some of the Laclede descendants familiar with family genealogy were surprised to read, a few days ago, the published statement that young Laclede was "the only surviving direct descendant of Pierre Laclede." They said he was a descendant in the same degree as Pierre Chouteau of St. Louis, and that there was no difference in the directness of the descent of the two young men. Laclede has been a student in St. Mary's College, St. Mary's, Kan., and is here as the guest of Mrs. Johnson and her husband for the Pageant.

The statue, of which George Julian Zolnay was sculptor, was intended to represent Laclede as he looked when he founded St. Louis in 1764. Laclede visited the site of St. Louis in the fall of 1763, selected it as the site for a village and blazed trees here. In the following February he sent his stepson, young Auguste Chouteau, here with a party of men to make the first clearing, and in April Laclede arrived himself. In the Pageant, the action is hurried somewhat, and Laclede arrives almost before the ripples from young Chouteu's barge have cleared from the water.

How Family Is Classified.

Theophile Papin Jr., one of the Laclede descendants, sent out 554 invitations to the unveiling in the week before the ceremony. The family, as classified by Papin, has five distinct branches, headed by Auguste Chouteau, Pierre Chouteau, Charles Gratiot, Sylvester Labadie and Joseph Marie Papin, the sons and sons-in-law of Laclede and Mme. Therese Chouteau. Many of the most prominent person in St. Louis society are included in these different branches. Papin's list contained 178 heads of families. It was impossible to learn the exact number of the descendants, as many have long since removed from St. Louis and have reared families, but the number is believed to exceed 1500.

A delgation of members of the Women's Relief Corps, who had just decorated the Grant statue on the south side of the city hall, attended the Laclede statue ceremony.

DEMAND CLEAN CUT BODY

With adoption of the left-side drive, one-man top, stream-line body, electric lights and starter, the automobile of today presents a wonderful advance over the cars of only a few years back. The most noticeable improvement to the eye, of course, has been the adoption of the stream-line body, which gives to the vehicle at once a grace of line and dignity of appearance most marked in contrast to the car of yesterday.

The new 1915 Premier bodies show nothing outside the body itself; the invisible door hinges and clear running boards, lack of side lights and the straight, harmonious lines of the hood gives the impression of strength and beauty. The popularity of this type of body will shortly bring all the makers face to face with the necessity of providing it as a regular stock model.

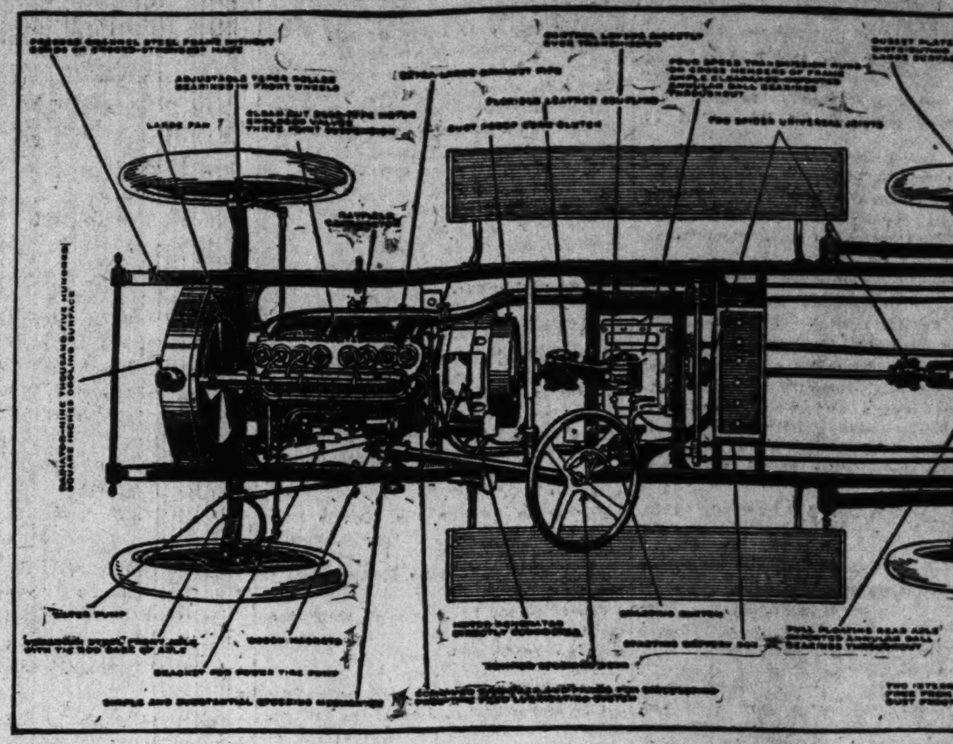
GAY COLORS PREDOMINATE

According to Edward F. Gerber, president of the Abbott Motor Car Co., Detroit, Mich., this company is finishing at least one-half of its output in fancy colors.

Touring cars and roadsters in both six and four cylinder models are being turned out daily in violet, purple, lake, napier green, golden brown, French carmine, town car blue, as well as the standard black.

The demand for fancy colors seems to be unusually insistent this spring, which is probably occasioned by the use of special colors on all of the high-priced foreign cars. With hardly an exception every foreign car is being finished in some special shade, principally those above mentioned.

This new demand is causing automobile factories much extra work. It means carrying three or four stocks of bodies and in addition to this it takes considerably longer period of time to finish a body in special color than in standard black.



Jeffery Paid $1,000,000

A huge fortune for super-quality. A million dollars for your satisfaction and protection. That is what Jeffery spent, and more, for quality alone when he introduced into the market America's first light weight, high grade car of quality, economy, comfort and distinctive beauty at a moderate price—$1550.

Had Jeffery been guided by prospects of volumes of quick sales alone, when he selected the units of the chassis illustrated above, he could have saved a million on this year's output.

And none but the engineer and the expert mechanic would have known the difference until the test of super-quality came—hard and continuous service.

Jeffery was not satisfied to pioneer in the introduction of the light, economical high speed motor alone. He insisted that Jeffery cars embody the same essential features of quality which had been so prized by owners of the best American and foreign cars.

So he added a million dollars to his costs and bought imported annular ball bearings, the most expensive starting and lighting system, put vanadium steel into springs, axles and drive shafts, four speed transmissions, full floating rear axles, Bosch duplex ignition and the same super-quality into upholstery and equipment, down to spark plugs. You will find these things only in the Jeffery and in the high priced cars.

Bear in mind this million represents simply what Jeffery could have saved by trimming quality and still produce a pretty good automobile.

This accounts for Jeffery success. This explains Jeffery leadership. The trade journals are literally full of comments by well known engineers endorsing the light, high speed motor first introduced by Jeffery.

The best dealers in the country caught the situation at a glance and bought 7000 Jeffery cars. The early purchasers are enthusiastic and their appreciation grows as their speedometers pile up thousands of miles. That's what Jeffery paid a million for.

Jeffery crowded all this unequalled quality into the Jeffery car to guarantee to you years of satisfaction. But not one cent of the added cost is charged to you.

Jeffery can sell this car of super-quality at $1550 because he has no stockholders to demand dividends. Because he can buy the best materials at the lowest prices. Because no bill has ever been allowed to pass discount in the history of the Jeffery business.

Finally because the car is built in one of the largest and most complete motor car plants in the world—$5,500,000 in assets, $3,000,000 in up-to-the-minute labor saving machinery.

Study the chassis illustrated above and you will know what there is in the Jeffery. Why it is the best and first light weight high grade car of quality, economy and comfort at a moderate price. Then go to the Jeffery dealer and ask him to show you what the car will do.

$30,000 VERDICT AGAINST PAPER FOR WARDEN M'CLUNG

Amount Half That Asked in Suit Against the Star-Chronicle Publishing Co.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

FULTON, Mo., May 30.—A verdict for $30,000 was given this afternoon by the jury in the case of D. C. McClung, Warden of the Missouri Penitentiary, against the Star-Chronicle Publishing Co., on account of criticism in the New St. Louis Star of McClung's administration of the prison. It was signed by 11 of the jurors, the twelfth man refusing to sign. The jury was out less than two hours.

The suit was for $60,000 and was based on two editorials and a communication. The jury's award was [illegible]000 actual and $5000 punitive damages on each of the counts.

A suit for $40,000 brought by McClung against the Pulitzer Publishing Co., on account of an editorial and a communication printed in the Post-Dispatch, which had been set for trial Monday in the same court, was continued until September.

The suits grew out of publication of comment and criticism following the published stories of the "stringing up" in "the rings" for 21 days of Steve Willis for having in his possession a bottle of whisky and refusing to tell where he had obtained it.

Instructions to the Jury.

The taking of testimony in the case tried was concluded yesterday evening. At the opening of court this morning, Judge Harris' instructions to the jury were read. For the plaintiff, he gave the jury the statutory definition of libel. Malice, in the legal sense, he said, meant a wrongful act done intentionally and without just cause or excuse. The law presumed the natural consequence of acts. Privilege was limited strictly to fair and reasonable comment and criticism.

Words used in the publications complained of were defined by the Judge. Barbarous, he said, meant acting like barbarians, cruel, savage. Inhuman meant having characteristics of the brute, resembling the brute, savage. Twelfth century torture methods meant torture akin to that inflicted by the iron boot, the rack, the thumbscrew and the wheel, agony.

Rights of the Newspaper.

For the defendant, the Judge instructed the jury that the newspaper had a right to publish a full report of all the acts and proceedings of the plaintiff as Warden and of his subordinates and deputy wardens in managing and conducting the prison and in punishing the prisoners and also had the right to state its opinions and comments and criticise the plaintiff for acts of himself or subordinates reasonably justifying such criticism.

The penitentiary was declared by the instruction to be a public institution, concerning which and the acts of the warden and his subordinates and the treatment of the inmates, the citizens had a right to be informed.

The jury was instructed that the provision of the constitution of the State against cruel and unusual punishment extended to prisoners of the penitentiary, and if the jury found that Steve Willis had been punished in violation of the constitution and laws, the newspaper had a right to comment on it and criticise the plaintiff for it.

30,000 GATHER AT BARRACKS TO PAY TRIBUTE TO DEAD

G. A. R. Memorial Services at National Cemetery Bring Throngs to Decorate Graves.

Jefferson Barracks was thronged with many thousand persons at the memorial services of the G. A. R., held in the National Cemetery yesterday. They came by street car, boat, train and automobile An army Sergeant who has witnessed many similar celebrations estimated that the crowd exceeded 30,000.

An oddly contrasting note was imparted to the ceremonies by the presence of 12 Blackfeet Indians—nine braves and three squaws—who are returning to their reservation in Glacier National Park, Montana, after accompanying the Montana Shriners to the Masonic convention in Atlanta. They occupied seats on the stage with the veterans, and later strewed flowers upon the graves of the American soldiers.

Military Parade Given First.

A military parade, reviewed by Col. John H. Beacom, United States Army, opened the exercises. A salute by the minute guns was fired at intervals of five minutes during the demonstration. The various posts and camps then assembled, and to the accompaniment of music by the United States Army band, marched in column to the rostrum, at the outer inclosure of the cemetery, where the program was presented.

Features of the afternoon were patriotic music, the reading of the National and State Department orders by Louis C. Hesse, and the dramatic recital of Abraham Lincoln's immortal address at Gettysburg by Thomas Moore, a G. A. R. veteran. The Rev. Thomas H. Hagerty said a prayer from the G. A. R. ritual.

As a closing incident the graves of the 12,517 dead buried in the cemetery were visited. Six men in the employment of Edward S. Past, superintendent of the cemetery, were kept busy all day Thursday and Friday decorating these graves with small American flags, furnished by the Government. The visitors reverently added flowers to the slabs.

Blue and Gray Side by Side.

The democracy of the burial ground was strongly emphasized not only by the friendly red men but also by the fact that it is the final resting place of both Union and Confederate soldiers, as well as those of the Spanish-American War and about 250 Indian war veterans, who fought in the early frontier engagements. All the tombs were cared for.

A number of ancient mausoleums are scattered throughout the grounds, the oldest of which is that of the child of Col. Zeb M. Pike, who died Nov. 23, 1806. Col. Pike headed a military expedition into the West to explore the region near Pike's Peak, which he named after himself. This is the oldest interment in the cemetery. When a soldier dies his widow may be buried with him, and there are a number of such graves in the park.

REBEL CHIEFS RUN BREWERY TO AID THE REVOLUTION

Plant Is at Monterey and Is in Operation at Full Capacity.

BY L. C. SIMONDS.
(Staff Correspondent of the World at Mexico City.)

Copyright, 1914, by Press Publishing Co. (New York World.)

MEXICO CITY, Mexico, May 29 (delayed in transmission).—The Interior Department has information that the rebel leaders, Berrera and Chao, at Balleza, have quarreled with Villa. Meantime Rodriego Quevedo, in Northern Chihuahua, is actively pushing a counter revolution.

The Interior Department's advices from Monterey indicate the rebels have seized a brewery and are operating it at full capacity, selling the output all over Northern Mexico. Funds thus obtained are being used for needs of the revolutionary exchequer.

The property at Monterey of Miguel Quiroga, Fernado Ancia and Dr. Gregorio Martinez and other persons, regarded as sympathizers with the present Mexican administration, has been confiscated by rebels.

Dr. Gregorio Martinez is held by the rebels in the penitentiary and it is reported that various secret executions have taken place.

The Mexican Consul at San Antonio, Tex., reports that one of the chief causes of discontent among Villa's followers is that he has appropriated to himself the fruits of his lootings, refusing to make a fair division with his officers and men.

Gen. Huerta was guest at a luncheon given at the Jockey Club by Hacenado Javier Torres Rivas today.

The Senate, at a late hour, took action regarding the extension of the period of sessions of Congress and passed a bill for extension sine die. The bill was hurried to the Chamber of Deputies and there approved by unanimous vote.

3 SISTERS AND NEPHEW SENT TO INSANE ASYLUM

Women, Who Resist Officers, Are Children of Parents Who Are First Cousins.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., May 30.—Three sisters and one nephew were adjudged insane today in the La Salle County Court and ordered committed to the asylum at Kankakee.

The father of the girls, John Roberts, once resided at Pittsburg, Pa., and served several terms as Justice of the Peace. He appeared to be above the average in intelligence, and when he and his family went to Peru, 20 years ago, no one suspected anything wrong in their mentality.

It was learned, however, that Roberts and his wife are first cousins.

Sheriff Mischke and a deputy who accompanied him got an unexpected reception. Mary, one of the younger of the girls, seized a clothes pole and struck the Sheriff on the head, while Elizabeth, an older girl, threw a flat iron with unerring accuracy, striking the deputy. The girls then entered the house and barricaded themselves. When the officers recovered from the first assault they broke down the door.

The girls finally were controlled and taken to court. Clothes were provided for Joe, the nephew, before he could be carried from home. The boy declined to wear shoes. It was said that he never had worn a pair and never had been outside of the house since he was born.

MOTORCYCLIST SERIOUSLY HURT WHEN HIT BY AUTO

Rider Is Thrown as Truck Causes Car to Skid—Chauffeur Is Arrested.

Ben Hoeing, 24 years old, of 4714 North Twentieth street, was seriously injured at 11:30 a. m. yesterday, when a motor cycle he was riding was struck by an automobile owned by Curtis Vain, of 6027 Etzel avenue, and driven by John Vierherlig, 21 years old, Vain's chauffeur, at Twelfth and Benton streets.

Vierherlig was driving north on Twelfth street, and was hastening, he said, to take a friend of Vain's to Granite City. At the Benton street crossing, the automobile side-swiped a two-horse truck of the Holstein Commission Co., 1000 North Broadway, then skidded into the motor cycle, which Hoeing was driving west on Benton street.

Hoeing was taken to the City Hospital, where physicians found his left hip had been fractured, his head, arms and body lacerated and internal injuries suffered. His condition, they said, was critical. Vierherlig was arrested.

JUDGE HORNBLOWER IS CRITICALLY ILL

Jurist Named by Cleveland for Supreme Bench and Rejected by Senate Has Heart Disease.

NEW YORK, May 30.—Judge William B. Hornblower, who has been ill of chronic heart trouble in his country home at Litchfield, Conn., was reported tonight as in a critical condition. He went to Litchfield about a month ago suffering from bronchitis. The malady failed to yield to treatment and Friday night Dr. Lloyd Deming, his physician, warned the family to prepare for the worst.

The report from the bedside tonight was that the patient had grown worse through the day and hope had been nearly abandoned.

Judge Hornblower was president of the Bar Association when Gov. Glynn appointed him to the bench of the Court of Appeals last January. He then resigned from the Bar Association and withdrew from the law firm of Hornblower, Miller & Potter, of which he had been the head for many years.

Although long one of the most prominent attorneys in the city, his first judicial service was with the Court of Appeals. President Cleveland named him in 1893 for the bench of the Supreme Court of the United States. The nomination failed in the United States Senate, owing to the antagonism of Senators David B. Hill and Edward Murphy Jr.

Judge Hornblower continued his activities for reform government, but he did not thereafter permit himself to be considered for public office until last winter.

MAN BADLY HURT WHEN HIS WAGON COLLAPSES

Charles Brodhage, 25 years old, of 3727 North Twenty-first street, was dangerously injured when driving a two-horse ice wagon toward the foot of East Grand avenue, at 8 p. m. yesterday, when the front end of the wagon collapsed, throwing him beneath its wheels.

He was taken to the North End dispensary, where physicians found he had suffered a fracture of the left leg, a fracture of the right arm, lacerations of the head and serious internal injuries. Brodhage was taken to his home.

ELKS DECORATE GRAVES OF 19 IN BELLEFONTAINE

Following Ritual for Occasion, Bugler Blows "Taps," Closing Memorial Services.

The graves of 19 Elks in Bellefontaine Cemetery were decorated yesterday afternoon by the St. Louis Lodge of Elks. At 3 o'clock several hundred members of the order gathered at the upper gate, Florissant avenue, and with a band playing Chopin's funeral march, walked to Elks' Rest, in the cemetery.

The solemn ritualistic service of the Elks was conducted there, followed by all singing in unison, "Great Ruler of the Universe."

After the invocation had been pronounced, the Elks' Temple Quartet rendered Rhodes' "Remember Now Thy Creator." The memorial address was delivered by Albert M. Baker.

While the band played, very softly, "Hearts and Flowers," the members went to each grave and placed flowers, until the plot was a bower of roses and lilies and carnations.

The ritual for the occasion was here read, and those assembled sang the Closing Ode.

Then came the benediction, and "America," sung by all. And just at sundown a bugler stepped to the head of the Elks' statue and sounded "taps."

SENATE COMBINE IS HOLDING UP TRUST MEASURES

Obstructionists Hope to Delay Action and Force Adjournment Late in August.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—With the hope of preventing the enactment of trust legislation at this session, a tacit agreement to delay the legislative progress is believed to be guiding the actions of many Senators. These obstructionists hope that by dragging out debate on the tolls exemption repeal bill, and on the various appropriation bills, they can prevent adjournment before late in August or September, if any trust legislation is to be enacted.

Their plan is that just before the last appropriation bill has been taken up, and after the tolls question has been settled, to begin their active and open work to obtain adjournment.

In view of the fact that one-third of the Senators will be eager to get back to their states to run in the popular elections, they count on much backing in their demand for time to mend their fences. They also count on support from the House, where every member wants to get back to his district.

Friends of the President, however, say that no matter if these tactics should draw out the present session of Congress until it merges with the new session, beginning Dec. 7, the trust legislation must be enacted. They hope that when this finally dawns upon the obstructionists, the delay program will be abandoned.

The passage of the agricultural appropriation bill through the Senate required 40 days. A week or so is, normally sufficient for the discussion of such a measure. Passage of all kinds of bills and work in general in the Senate has been delayed through the eagerness, at every opportunity, of Republican Senators to make speeches attacking the Democratic tariff law, which Democratic Senators feel obliged to answer, much as they deplore the waste of time.

The rivers and harbors bill, increased in the Senate committee by a round $10,000,000, will be reported out next week. This is one of the prize packages in the way of a "pork barrel" bill, with every Senator wanting all he can get for his own state. A long, drawn-out battle is expected, with set speeches for distribution in the approaching campaign plentifully ornamenting the Congressional Record, and incidentally taking up the Senate's time.

The tolls debate, that is the heavy, set-speech part, has been almost concluded. Catron, of New Mexico, who will speak Monday, is the only remaining Senator who has given notice of his intention to speak, though several others undoubtedly will make long addresses. When the time comes for the vote, it is likely that about a day will be consumed in roll calls.

BAND MUSIC NAMED FOR GOVERNOR CAUSES RIOT

EL PASO, Tex., May 30.—The disturbance at Hermosillo reported earlier today was caused by public disapproval of music played by the Sonor State band and did not take the form of street fighting, declared Constitutionalist agents here tonight. The trouble which occurred last night resulted in the imprisonment of Rodolfo Campodonico, the director of the official band, which is rated as one of the finest in Mexico.

According to information said to have been received directly from Hermosillo Campodonico insisted in spite of hisses and cat calls in playing a piece of his own composition. The title of the selection, "Viva Maytorena," evidently occasioned the public disapproval as Maytorena is the Governor of the State against whom there has been directed such political activity.

When Campodonico, the composer, played "Viva Maytorena" a second time the crowd took a hand which ended in a general melee, the breaking of drumheads, the denting of horns and the imprisonment of the band director.

TITANIC SURVIVOR TO GET DIVORCE JUNE 15

PHILADELPHIA, May 30.—A divorce is recommended for Mrs. Lucile Polk Carter from William E. Carter, in a report filed today. The decree will be signed on June 15.

Mrs. Carter is well known in New York and Newport society. She and her husband and their two children are survivors of the Titanic disaster, having escaped in the same boat with J. Bruce Ismay, managing director of the White Star Line. The records of the proceedings were kept a secret and no intimation was given as to the ground on which the suit was brought.

64 Pupils to Be Graduated.

A class of 64 pupils will be graduated at the commencement exercises of the Farragut School, Thursday afternoon, June 11. Addresses will be made by Dr. Edgar James Swift and Richard Murphy.

The Magic Charm of the Pianola

Now you may instantly become a musician.

No longer is it necessary to spend tedious years in practice before becoming a pianist. You or anyone may sit down before a Pianola and instantly, without previous musical training, bring forth music, any music you choose.

You may from the very first instant play to suit your own fancy or you may rely upon the wonderful Metrostyle, Themodist and other musical guides and actions exclusive to the Pianola.

You may play artistically and follow minutely the playing of Paderewski, Moskowski, Chaminade, Grieg and other great pianists without previous training, if you have a Pianola.

Steinway Pianola

In one instrument are combined the world-renowned Steinway Piano and the equally famous Pianola player-action. The combination is the greatest achievement in the musical world and it enables you or anyone to possess not only the greatest piano in the world but the ability to play it artistically and instantly.

Stroud Pianola

This is the latest achievement of the great Aeolian organization of player and piano experts. As a piano it has received the highest indorsement from musicians the world over. Combined in the one instrument is the Stroud piano and the Pianola with the same exclusive actions which have given the Pianola its world-wide musical reputation. You are invited to visit Aeolian Hall and to play the Stroud Pianola for yourself.

There is no longer any good reason why you should consider any mere imitation, when you can secure at Aeolian Hall a genuine Pianola Piano for as little as $550. $550 Terms, $3 Weekly

Marquette Victory Closes Banner Season of Post-Dispatch League

THE victory of the Marquette school team over the Delmar school team yesterday closed the 1914 season of the Post-Dispatch Public School Baseball League. It was the banner season of the league since its organization in 1901.

Forty-six of the 65 eighth grade schools in St. Louis entered the league. The out-of-the-city teams, the Delmar of University City, and the Maplewood, also entered, making a total of 48 teams.

The league was organized with the idea of fostering athletics, school spirit and fairplay. It is hoped that the entry in 1915 will exceed the 1914 record.

A fitting climax to the Post-Dispatch Public School Baseball League's season was witnessed at Sportsman's Park, yesterday morning, when, in the final championship game, the Marquette School won the pennant by defeating the Delmar School team of University City, in 12 innings, 6 to 4. The Marquette School is at 4001 McPherson avenue.

About 5000 enthusiastic fans, most of whom are students in schools which had been represented in the Post-Dispatch Public School Baseball League, were kept upon the qui vive after the ninth inning, when the Delmar School tied the score with one run. For the next three innings the fans cheered lustily for their favorites, the Marquette School finally, in their half of the twelfth inning, putting two winning runs across the plate.

Game Goes Twelve Innings.

The contest was of a zig-zag nature, and all the way through afforded the followers of the two teams ample opportunity to cheer for their favorites. The Delmar team's supporters, although outnumbered by the Marquette rooters, made themselves heard when the score was tied in the ninth inning.

The game brought together Pitcher John Brockschmitt of the Marquettes and Pitcher Godfrey Weidlich of the Delmars, probably the two best schoolboy hurlers in the city.

Weidlich had the better of the argument, as he allowed only five hits, while the Delmar players poled 10 safeties off winning team. A special banner little control, and during the 12 innings issued 15 bases on balls besides hitting a batter. This lack of control had him continually in trouble, and was the chief reason the Marquettes scored so often.

Despite the 10 hits made off Brockschmitt, he would have had easy sailing but for ragged support. Third Baseman Byron Jones made a wild throw to the plate in the eighth inning that permitted two runs, and placed the Delmar team in a position to score the tying run in the following frame.

Long Made Winning Run.

That was the costliest error of the game and for a time it seemed that it might prove disastrous for the Marquettes after they appeared to be certain winners.

Credit for hitting in the winning run goes to Curtis Long, the Marquette left fielder. It was a long two-base drive in the twelfth inning. Weidlich's lack of control got him in trouble at the beginning of this inning. He passed Cannefax for a starter. Then Long followed with his double to center, a drive that let Cannefax score from first. Long stole third base a moment later and scored while Weidlich and Rathert were retiring Fox after the latter's tap to the pitcher.

The Marquette team, which batted first, was the first to score, one run coming in the first inning. Broughton started the game by drawing a base on balls, but he was thrown out trying to steal by Brazier. Reno also walked and stole second. Hawthorne sacrificed and Jones scored Reno with a single to left Score Tied in Second.

The Delmar team tied the score in the second inning. Weidlich opened this inning with a single and reached second on Long's error, but was thrown out trying to steal third. Brazier walked, but he, too, was thrown out trying to steal second. Pannell singled, stole second and went to third when Fox missed Brazier's throw. Then Baker doubled and Pannell tallied.

The second Marquette run came in the third when, with one out, Weidlich issued three bases on balls, filling the sacks. Jones' effort was a roller to Pannell, who threw out the batter while Broughton scored.

Lack of control proved costly to Weidlich in the fifth inning, when another Marquette run was scored. Brockschmitt was safe at the start when Pannell fumbled his roller. Broughton struck out, but passes to Reno and Hawthorne filled the bases. Jones forced Hawthorne and Brockschmitt scored.

The Marquettes raised their run total to 4 in the seventh inning when a run resulted from Hawthorne's pass, steal and Cannefax's single to right field.

It wasn't until the eighth that Brockschmitt weakened and permitted the Delmars to again break into the run column. Rathert and White singled successively at the beginning of this inning, but Rathert was forced by Swords. Another single by Waldron filled the bases. Elder popped to Fox, making the second out. Weidlich then rolled to Jones at third, who only had to tag third base to retire the side. Instead, he elected to try for White at the plate, but threw past Catcher Cannefax and two runs came over. That made the score 4 to 3 in favor of Marquette.

Another Tie in Ninth.

Delmar tied the score in the ninth on Baker's double and White's single. Weidlich steadied in the tenth and eleventh, but was scored on in the twelfth. Brockschmitt pitched to only ten batters in the last three innings and was not in danger.

Weidlich's game was not so good as the one he pitched a week ago when he defeated the Bryan Hill team. He received excellent support, the fielding of the Delmars being one of the features. The University City boys made only one error in the 12 innings, handling cleanly 52 of their 53 chances, quite a record, even for a major league team. Weidlich also struck out 12 batters.

With two runs in, two out and two on bases in the twelfth, Weidlich went to third base and Pannell took up the pitching, striking out Reno, the last batter.

Jones proved the best hitter of the Marquettes, getting two of the five safeties made by his team. Weidlich, Pannell and Rathert each got two hits off Brockschmitt.

After the game the championship banner was presented to the winning Marquette team. Gold medals will be presented to the members of the winning team Monday. A special banner went to the Delmar team. The Garfield, Sigel, Shaw, Jackson, Farragut and Bryan Hill teams, which won the championships in their respective divisions, also received banners.

ROBBED IN RESTAURANT

Owner Identifies Prisoner as One Who Held Him Up.

Paul Liriangis, a restaurant keeper at 319 South Grand avenue, was robbed at 5 p. m yesterday by a man who placed a revolver at his head and commanded him to open his cash drawer. Liriangis handed over $5.75, and the intruder backed out of the front door.

Later in the evening a patrolman arrested a man giving the name, J. H. Page, and the address 3558 Pine street. He had been drinking, and denied any knowledge of the crime. He was taken to the restaurant and was identified by Liriangis as the man who had robbed him. Tom Kontoa, a buss boy, also said he was the man.

STEFANSSON SHIP WRECKED; CREW IS SAFE ON ISLAND

Explorer Was Not on Vessel When It Was Crushed by Ice on Arctic Trip.

By Associated Press.

NOME, Alaska, May 30.—News has just reached here that the wooden 320-ton steam whaler Karluk, flagship of the Canadian Government's Arctic exploring expedition under command of Villjalmur Stefansson, was crushed in the ice and sunk Jan. 16 near Herald Island, northeast of Siberia. The entire crew, except Capt. Robert A. Bartlett, is now at Wrangel Island, with plenty of food and wood.

Capt. Bartlett of the Karluk made his way across the frozen ice to North Cape, Siberia, and then proceeded overland to Whaler Bay, Siberia. There he was taken on board the whaler Herman, which carried him to St. Michael, where he now is.

Frozen Sea Safe for Travel.

It is assumed by authorities on Arctic conditions that when the ice closed on the Karluk last January, the 24 men on board got their supplies out on the ice, along with the dog teams, and were able to reach land well equipped for the remainder of the winter. It is assumed, also, that as soon as the days became of sufficient length to permit of travel, Bartlett, accompanied probably by some of the five Eskimos on board, set out for Bering Sea. The frozen sea was quite safe for travel.

It is assumed that he drove his dogs over Siberia from North Cape to Whaler Bay, on the Bering Sea shore of Siberia, where he met the whaler Herman, which sailed from San Francisco about March 25. The Herman took him to St. Michael, where there is a cable station. The mouth of the Yukon and the roadsted at Nome are free of ice already, an unusually early melting.

The Herman will go to the relief of Karluk's crew as soon as she can get through Bering Strait into the Arctic.

Found Karluk Blown Away.

Stefansson is at the mouth of the MacKenzie River, having left the Karluk Sept. 10 to hunt caribou ashore. When he returned to the point where he had come ashore he found that the Karluk had been blown away by a storm. About Oct. 5 an Eskimo saw her driving westward. It is apparent that the westward drift continued until the shipwreck.

It will not be possible to send dog teams to Herald Island now, as the ice is rotting. There were 19 white men of the Karlak and five Eskimos. It is supposed 18 white men remain in the camp of the castaways.

Newbro's Herpicide

Is the Original Germ-Remedy for Dandruff

WITHOUT dandruff the hair must grow as nature intended, except in chronic baldness, which is incurable. Dandruff is a contagious disease. To eradicate this contagion and keep it out of the scalp, intelligent care and a suitable remedy are needed. We can supply only the remedy which is NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

A Woman to Be Pretty Must Have Pretty Hair

Beautiful locks have a subtle charm, for the poet says, "fair tresses man's imperial race ensnare." The unpoetic and intensely real dandruff contagion makes the hair dull, brittle and lusterless with later dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair. NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE eradicates this enemy of beauty and enables the hair to resume its natural luster and beauty.

Almost marvelous results sometimes follow the intelligent use of HERPICIDE. It overcomes excessive oiliness and makes the hair light and fluffy. HERPICIDE contains no grease or dye. It stops itching of the scalp almost instantly.

Discriminating ladies who have used NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE, speak of it in the highest terms, for its almost magical effect upon the scalp, and also for its excellence as a regular hair dressing. It is delightfully fragrant and refreshing.

Send 10 cents in stamps to The Herpicide Co., Dept. 112B, Detroit, Michigan, for sample.

Two Sizes—50 cents and $1.00. Sold and guaranteed at all Toilet Goods Counters.

*Ex-dividend during the week.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 30.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review today, says:

"Both the New York and London Stock Exchanges were closed today for holiday; all American commercial markets were also closed. The week, in its financial aspects, ended rather curiously. In two respects, developments at its close were not at all what had been expected.

"The extraordinary heights to which foreign exchange advanced at the opening of the week had caused general expectation, first of a very large increase in the movement of gold from New York to Europe, and second, of a sharp decline in the New York bank position. But in the gold market the result, after only a moderately large total of gold withdrawals had been made, was so rapid and instantaneous a fall in sterling rates that no important lot of gold was taken Tuesday.

"In the bank position, the gold withdrawals were so far offset, by inflow of interior currency and curtailment of liabilities, that reduction in the week-end surplus reserve was only $1,900,000.

More Exports Are Likely.

"So far as now appears, the outward gold movement will continue; it remains to be seen if the large idle surplus of the banks will continue also.

"Since the year began, $33,000,000 gold has been sent from here to Europe and the surplus reserve of the New York clearing house institutions is $5,000,000 above the highest figure of last January. This, on its face, would simply appear to mean that the actual money, released from the channels of trade, where the need for it is reduced by smaller hand-to-hand payments, or from inland banks, where the smaller demand for credits calls for smaller cash reserves, has heaped up in the city institutions, whence it is flowing abroad in the form of gold to markets which have use for it and which can bid for it.

"To say that we can spare the gold that we are exporting is not, however, equivalent to saying that the situation is satisfactory, which releases it. That slack financial and industrial activity is the primary cause for the outward gold movement, and that the outflow would stop if business in general were to mend, nobody doubts; so that the real source of perplexity and dissatisfaction, after all, is not the gold export in itself, but the business conditions which make it possible.

Trade Is Quiet.

"President Wilson laid stress, in his answer this week to the Western Manufacturers' delegation, on the fact that the present halt or depression in trade is psychological in its origin. He was not alone in that diagnosis of it; some of the most experienced financiers and manufacturers, especially in their private conversation, have described it in exactly the same way. But the explanation is rather unsatisfactory, for the reason, first, that it is vague, and second, that it leads to no definite conclusion.

"Psychology has, beyond any doubt, a powerful influence in emphasizing tendencies already operative, for other reasons. Force of example is contagious; in panic times, as everybody knows, a great many people economize who do not need in the least to do so—precisely as in 'boom times' a good part of the community lives beyond its means, because of the general atmosphere of prosperity.

"But in either case, some sort of real situation, in the community at large, is usually back of these imaginary movements. The psychological influence may merely put a more striking color on the situation, after the legitimate cause for it is past.

"The question at present, is in which of these two ways the mental influence is operating? If it is merely emphasizing real conditions, then the problem remains, as to what is causing those conditions. If it is artificially prolonging a situation, whose actual cause has ceased to operate, then forces are accumulating, which must greatly accelerate the movement of recovery, when the truth of the matter is visible to every one. No doubt we shall soon be able to determine, which of the two situations now exists.

Some Event Indicates Trend.

"That is usually tested when some event of the first importance occurs. Sometimes it is a public speech; sometimes a legislative vote; sometimes a crop estimate; sometimes an election. If the markets or general business activity respond to any such incident, we can take our bearings accordingly, if not, we must begin our inquiry again.

"In the present case, a definite harvest outcome might provide the test, or an actual settlement in Mexico might do so. This is why the situation of the movement contains some interesting psychological possibilities of its own.

"The weekly bank statement, published at the close of business yesterday, because of a holiday today, was interesting, for two reasons—because of last week's very large gain of $11,200,000 in the surplus, and because of the $5,000,000 gold withdrawn this week for export, in addition to $2,000,000 sent by last Saturday's boat and which, therefore, might not have influenced the Saturday bank return.

"The showing was unexpectedly favorable, the actual loss of $4,300,000 cash being offset by a $2,900,000 decrease in loans, and by so large a decrease in deposits—doubtless due to shifting of accounts with outside correspondents—that surplus reserves decreased only $1,900,000.

"Banks in the Clearing House now hold a $17,000,0900 larger surplus than at this date in 1913 or 1912, and much the largest in half a dozen years."

BANK OF ENGLAND MAY RAISE DISCOUNT RATE

Paris Is Bidding Too Strenuously for Gold in Open Market.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, May 30.—"I have reason to believe that Paris will discontinue, at least for a few weeks, its policy of attracting gold. The French market recognizes that, if the Bank of England does not shortly get its share of the gold arriving in Europe, its official discount rate will have to be advanced.

"Our own bank's reserve is more than 2,000,000 under that of a year ago, whereas the French bank's stock of gold is £17,000,000 higher than last May, the Imperial Bank of Germany has also added £17,000,000 and the Bank of Russia £18,000,000.

"It is now believed that the Bank of England should get considerable gold in the next few weeks, possibly including consignments from New York. This week's extraordinary strength in your foreign exchange market is believed to have been partly connected with maturities in short term American securities of the industrial class, an exceptionally large amount of which have lately occurred on this market.

"All things considered, present indications favor moderate improvement on our Stock Exchange during the next few weeks; unless it should again be checked by the new security issues, which in June and July are likely to be numerous.

"In considering the chances for improvement, however, it is essential to remember that the recent recovery has been largely due to the closing out of bear positions, on the basis of hopes for improvement in the credit position, gain in gold by the Bank of England and better news regarding Mexico.

"If therefore, these hopes were not to be fulfilled, the sequel might easily be renewed reaction, even before the capital flotation, just referred to, come in sight.

Situation in Ireland.

"There is also reason for the market to watch the Irish situation. Unless there is an actual settlement of that controversy very soon, it may reassert its influence towards June 23, when the home rule bill comes before the Lords.

"The dramatic incident of the arrest of the well-known Paris bankers, involved in the recent failure, may mark the unearthing of a great financial scandal. Yet the episode, as a whole, represents a situation already fully understood. So far as regards Paris, favorable or unfavorable developments in Mexico and Brazil are more important than any local difficulties.

"The strong points in our own situation are that the lately embarrassing credit position has nearly been arranged, and the feeling that Brazil's financial rehabilitation is progressing favorably.

"Important Brazilian representatives will arrive in London next week, at which time negotiations between the French and English bankers and Brazil will probably enter an active stage. The negotiations, however, will take considerable time."

QUOTATIONS ON LOCAL MARKET FAIRLY STEADY

Week's Range of Prices Shows No Wide Changes; Bonds Are Firm.

There was a light demand for securities on the local Stock Exchange last week, but prices were fairly well maintained. Bankers' Trust and National Bank of Commerce reflected some investment buying and there was a slight increase in the inquiry for several other bank and trust shares.

United Railways stocks and bonds about held their own on the week, although reports on the company's earnings are favorable. Miscellaneous shares are influenced more or less by mixed reports from trade and industry.

There was a slight betterment in the investment inquiry for bonds, and dealers made more over-the-counter sales than in some weeks past. Quotations on this class of securities showed a firm range.

POOR CONDITION REPORTS BOOSTING PRICE OF COTTON

Continued Rains in Texas and Oklahoma Have Become a Very Serious Factor.

More rain on Texas cotton fields. There were two days of sunshine, some hope of better weather and then disappointment. Rains in Texas and Oklahoma are serious in the extreme; they are wide-spread, covering nearly the entire state of Texas daily with averages of more than one; in some places the streams are swollen and doing damage.

The coming condition report issued by the Department of Agriculture will be interesting. It will show the condition of the crop May 25, and will be issued June 1. This is the one report that can be relied upon as disinterested. It is compiled from information gathered by first hands and from many men in each county of the cotton growing region.

How critical the condition of the growing crop is considered, is shown by some private estimates by well-known cotton authorities. The average of these is probably around 73, some several points higher and some lower. The lowest condition reported by the Government at this time was in 1907 when the report was 70.5. That year the acreage was 32,060,000 and the crop was 11,500,000 bales.

Abandoned Acreage a Problem.

What the abandoned acreage will be this season is difficult to estimate. Conditions in Texas and Oklahoma at this time lead to the belief that the abandoned acreage will be large. Even the natural increase in acreage should offset the abandoned acreage, leaving the area planted the same as last year, 36,000,000 acres, the present outlook is not good.

The general opinion is that in the outcome will be found a very substantial decrease in acreage. The only surprise the report can occasion would follow a favorable report. Once in a while a man may be found who is not inclined to believe the reports of damage but it is seldom that opinion regarding conditions is so fixed in the general mind.

Last year the condition May 25 was given as 79.1. It is safe to say that the present opinion is so fixed on a poor condition that 75 would be considered a bearish report in so far as its immediate effect on the market is concerned.

Any condition, however low, will be largely improved by a week or 10 days of good weather. In the eastern part of the belt, while rain is badly needed in some sections, they have the advantage of unusually good cultivation and showers within the next week, even, will correct present lack of moisture. Somewhat retarded by cool nights, the plant is healthy and ready to take on new growth.

Texas and Oklahoma Big Factor.

In forecasting the Government report, attention may be called again to the large area of Texas and Oklahoma, where the worst conditions prevail, and an extremely low average should not cause surprise. There is likelihood of an excited market in Liverpool should the report be extremely bullish. That market is closed June 1 and if shorts there are driven to cover it will be after American markets have had time to digest the report and obtain a possible advantage. Abroad these reports of the Government are taken seriously.

Spot markets in this country and abroad have gone on advancing quotations steadily but not in proportion to the advance in futures. The May option in New York is being squeezed and prices advanced rapidly all along the line; the fear of a like operation in July and August and the difficulty of obtaining tenderable cotton for delivery in those months has led to considerable buying and it is possible that a large long line will be carried over the Bureau report.

Should the report prove bullish, large buying of fall and winter months by European interests may follow both in Liverpool and American markets. The spot demand has improved a great deal, as is usually the case when prices show an advancing tendency, and buyers are a little more inclined to pay asking prices; for all of that sellers of cotton maintain that their prices are cheap when compared to the price of futures, as measured by the same two weeks ago.

In the dry goods markets business is better; the warm weather has started retailers to buying a little more actively and they do not find stocks of goods large. This has created a little more business between jobbers and mills. Spinners are not yet eager buyers of cotton but are more inclined to consider offers made on a higher basis than has been used for some months. It is likely that their attitude will be affected by the condition report.

HEAVY SUPPLIES FORCE DOWN THE PRICE OF CATTLE

Dry Weather Sends Large Number of Natives on the Market in a Rush.

Receipts National Stock Yards.

	Cattle	Hogs	Sheep
This week	14,000	34,300	15,716
Last week	17,000	32,000	16,207
Year ago	11,300	33,300	13,385

Receipts of beef cattle at this market for the last period was the heaviest of the year. The total was close to 14,000 head. This was larger than receipts the preceding week or a year ago.

The supply of native cattle was large. No doubt the dry weather that has prevailed throughout Southern Illinois and Missouri has forced some cattle to market before they were fully ready to come. Several droves of Kansas, Colorado and Nebraska steers were received during the week, although the bulk of the offering came from Missouri and Illinois.

Owing to the heavy supplies of cattle available, buyers were bearish and bore down heavily on the market. Steers and heifers were generally 15@25c lower. Heavy steers, good to choice, sold largely at $8.25@8.75. Yearlings, good to choice, sold from $8.50 to $9.00. There were more yearlings offered this week than for some time past.

Butcher Cattle Decline.

The trade in cows continued slow as this class of cattle are meeting with competition from the large lots of Texas grass stock. The cow market was 10@15c lower than last week or 35@50c along the high time a couple of weeks ago. Canning cows suffered less than the butcher kinds.

The bologna bull trade was slow with the market inclined to a lower basis.

The stocker cattle market shows a loss of 10@15c for the week or a good half dollar from two weeks ago. All classes of stockers and feeders shared in the decline although the choice grades have held up better than the commoner kinds. It takes a very good class of stock steers to bring $7.50@7.75 now.

The quarantine cattle supply for the week has been liberal, coming mostly from Texas. The quality of Texas cattle is not as good as it was earlier in the season. The choicer grades of Texas grass steers have been selling around $7.50 to $7.80. Oklahoma yearlings brought $8.65.

The liberal run, combined with the decline of native cattle, resulted in the Southern trade dropping 10@15c this week. From now on receipts of Texas cattle should be generous as this is the shipping season for the southern part of that State. A load of Mississippi steers fed at Holly Springs sold at $8.75 this week, which is the highest price that Mississippi steers have ever brought.

Hogs at Year's Low Mark.

The receipts of hogs were quite good but the demand was sufficient to take care of the supply each day. Other Western markets were well supplied and as a result the market was around 20c lower for the week and reached the lowest basis it has been on this year. The top got down to $8.20 the last of the week, while the bulk of the offerings went at $8.10@8.20.

Good hogs of all weights found ready sale but the poorer grades went very slow at all times, especially was this true of the pigs and lights that did not grade as strictly good. The high day of the week was Monday when the top was $8.45 and the bulk went at $8.30@8.40. Shippers took most of the good hogs but the packers were good buyers for the best offerings.

Best grade of lights that did not weigh more than 165 lbs. sold largely at $8@8.30, fair grades went at $7.60@7.90, best quality pigs under 125 lbs. $7.65@8.00, fair to medium classes $7.10@7.50 and the poor grades $6.50@7. Rough packers sold largely at $7.75@8 with good smooth stags up close to the top of the market.

Sheep, Too, Are Cheaper.

A right good supply of sheep and lambs arrived each day last week and as a result the market declined around 25c on all kinds and it was a dull trade towards the close of the week. A good proportion of the arrivals were spring lambs and most of them came from Tennessee and Kentucky but still Missouri and Illinois furnished a pretty good number for so early in the season.

Best spring lambs sold at $9@9.50, medium grades went at $8@8.75, good clipped lambs $7.75@8, fair $7.40@7.65, mutton sheep $5@5.50, however none above $5.25 after the middle of the week. Heavy ewes sold at 4.75@5, and were slow sellers. All sheep, of course, were clipped. Buyers were anxious for the good killing kinds but others found a dull trade.

Choppers, which is a class between stockers and mutton sheep, found sale at $4@4.40, best grade of stockers $3.50@4, others $3@3.50 and bucks $4.25@4.50, but none above $4.25 after Tuesday. Most of the dipped lambs were western fed in local territory.

A fair supply of horses was received and the market was on a basis much the same as the previous week. There was a good trade from the Eastern states and prices that were being paid were fully steady. The southern market opened on a lower basis but as the week advanced buyers came out stronger and the level of the market was shoved a little higher.

The mule trade was a minus quantity as buyers were all supplied and they would not pay the prices. The extra good quality mules met with sales satisfactory to shippers but these were the only ones. Common mules were very poor sellers all the way through and shippers should keep them off the market at present.

Wheat futures developed some selling pressure in the late markets last week, when needed rains fell over a considerable area of the winter wheat belt, and authentic advices indicated that the recent reports of Hessian fly damage had been exaggerated. Estimates on the crop in Kansas and the Southwest were most optimistic in tone, and unless the unexpected happens the ultimate harvest will largely exceed last year's record yield of 523,000,000 bushels.

Reports from the spring wheat territory also were highly optimistic, and there has seldom been a year when the early promise has been so high. Of course, the crop has chances of dry weather and black rust damage ahead of it, which appear as a factor every year, in a more or less degree, but rust has only made a real market once since it was discovered by some St. Louis grain men touring the Northwest in 1904. Then it advanced prices 24 cents a bushel in less than 30 days, the advance starting late in July.

The Deal in May Wheat.

The feature of the week's trade was the closing of the May wheat option. In this market the price went out without a ripple of excitement, and the same might be said of Chicago; but there were underlying factors that made the deal an interesting one in the Windy City.

Seldom in the history of the trade has Chicago May wheat gone out at practically the $1 mark, while the July option is selling at 87½c, as it is at present. There is nothing in the market situation to warrant the wide disparity of values, and the deal resulted from the accumulation of Chicago wheat supplies in the hands of a leading grain house, that has manipulated the May option consistently for a number of years. Chicago advices, as the week closed, were that a quiet investigation of the entire transaction was being made by Government authorities.

May corn in the Chicago market went out in a blaze of glory, the price advancing 3¼c to 74c on the final day of delivery. There is considerable of humor in the recent action of corn futures.

Sixty days ago May corn sold well above 70c. Then several Chicago houses flooded the commission house wires with bearish news of what the Argentine, which had prospects of a large corn crop, would do to American markets, by shipments, owing to the recent free tariffs from that country.

On the strength of these reports corn was driven to 63⅝c; and despite a shortage in the American harvest last year of 700,000,000 bu, every farmer and speculator was scared into selling his corn at cheap prices.

When the Chicago houses had accumulated all the corn they could, the talk of the Argentine competition suddenly ceased, and it is estimated that not more than 3,000,000 bu have come to the United States from the southern country. Some contracted for was immediately diverted to foreign countries, when the Chicago crowd was ready to turn the market.

The result was a rebound of 11c in the May option, and the entire country milked by speculators on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Le Count wired from Topeka, Kan.: "Small per cent of the wheat badly affected by Hessian fly, but in general wheat is in splendid condition, and will make full crop, if it fills well. Crop expected to be early, and needs about 20 days' more favorable weather to mature, as nearly all headed now."

Kansas Crop Is Large.

Allen Logan wired: "I am willing to go on record at 150,000,000 bu for Kansas. Covered yesterday Hutchinson to Dodge, big belt. It's all good for 18 to 30 bu. Took motor from Dodge north through Jetmore, Ness City to Wakeeny, 100 miles. Never saw a field that promised less than 20 to 25 bu."

Floating quantities of wheat and flour this week are 46,056,000 bu; last week, 45,192,000; last year, 57,600,000. Corn this week, 11,534,000; last week, 13,668,000; last year, 19,168,000, decrease 2,134,000. Last year wheat increased 696,000 bu and corn increased 2,918,000.

The domestic wheat visible decreased 1,432,000 bu, last week. Corn, 1,404,000 bu; oats, 1,071,000 bu.

The total visible grain shows:

	Today.	Last Year.
Wheat	31,660,000	40,063,000
Corn	4,092,000	2,644,000
Oats	8,240,000	6,542,000
—CHANGES—	Last Wk.	Last Yr.
Wheat	5,013,000	2,792,000
Corn	1,781,000	1,686,000
Oats	451	762,000

Broomhall's special Russian news service said:

"The weather generally is fine and summer like. Rain has fallen over a large area and further moisture is not essential, but would be beneficial. It is necessary for warm weather to continue. Crop outlook is considered up to this time generally satisfactory, but prices are rising daily and the higher the prices offered from abroad the smaller the transactions, and grain sellers have almost entirely withdrawn. Much is sold ahead, and with light arrivals it is difficult to cover. Everything is being held firmly."

Wheat—United States and east of Rockies, decrease 1,451,000 bu; United States and west of Rockies, decrease 195,000; Canada, decrease 2,356,000; United States and Canada, decrease 4,062,000; afloat and in Europe, decrease 2,400,000; total decrease, 6,432,000. Corn—Decrease 1,661,000. Oats—Decrease 2,230,000.

Milling and Grain News said: "The area of Hessian fly damage in winter wheat has increased slightly, and in all the important producing States is prevalent to a more or less extent. In Missouri, counties bordering on the Missouri and Mississippi Rivers show losses ranging from 30 to 50 per cent, and some fields are being plowed up. Illinois is in a slightly better condition than Missouri, but has severe visitation of the pest in central and southern counties. Kansas, generally speaking, maintains a high promise, although sections of McPherson and Saline counties and a district north of the Kaw River show considerable damage. Southeastern Nebraska is infected slightly, and Ohio and Indiana report scattered attacks. The present promise still indicates a crop well above last year's record yield of 523,561,000 bushels, but the harvest may be further reduced by dry weather, which is becoming a serious menace in Missouri and Illinois, where moisture is needed over a wide area."

The European wheat visible this week amounts to 74,464,000 bu., against 76,324,000 bu. last week, showing a decrease for week of 2,260,000 bu. Last week there was an increase of 2,560,000 and last year an increase of 1,600,000 bu., when the total amounted to 87,600,000 bu.

Chicago stocks: Wheat, 5,664,000 bu., increase 1,145,000; last year, 4,052,000. Corn, 2,153,000; decrease 772,000; last year 720,000. Oats, 3,139,000; increase 53,000; last year 3,263,000. Contract: Wheat, 3,300,000; increase 584,000; last year 3,504,000. Corn, 1,472,000; decrease 297,000; last year, 144,000. Oats, 394,000; increase 104,000; last year 1,610,000.

T. R. CALLS PRESENT TRUST AND TARIFF ACTIONS FAILURES

Attacks Administration Policy as He Sails to Attend Son's Wedding in Madrid.

WOULD CLEAN NEW YORK

Announces His Determination to Break Political Machines of Murphy and Barnes.

NEW YORK, May 30.—The Wilson administration has failed to handle, satisfactorily, either the trust or the tariff question, was the charge made by Col. Roosevelt in a statement before he departed for Europe today.

"The cost of living has not been reduced. Not the slightest progress has been made in solving the trust question," he said.

"It has been shown that the reduction of the tariff in no way helps toward this solution. The economic conditions are such that business is in jeopardy and that the small business man, the farmer and the industrial wage worker all are suffering because of these conditions."

Col. Roosevelt said he would put in his hardest work of the campaign in New York State.

"I believe the time has come to clean house in New York," he declared.

He assailed the "Murphy and Barnes machines," but made no reference to the tentative plan of the Progressive leaders for indorsement of the Republican nominee in this State, provided he meets their requirements.

Will Get Busy Upon Return.

"Since my return from South America," Col. Roosevelt's statement continued, "I have received hundreds of telegrams and letters from all over the country requesting statements from me on the political situation. It has been utterly impossible to reply to these communications; first, because of lack of time, and second, because it must be remembered that I have been out of the country for nearly eight months and have been home only 10 days, and therefore have not been able to acquire the necessary information that will enable me to respond, intelligently, to many of the inquiries made of me.

"When I return from abroad, I shall at once take up actively the political situation. It goes without saying that I intend, to the utmost of my ability, to do all that I can for the principles for which I have contended and for the men throughout the country who have stood so gallantly in the fight that the Progressive party is waging for these principles.

Says Poverty Abounds.

"There is widespread apprehension among our people. The pinch of poverty is felt in many a household. We cannot ignore the conditions which have brought about this state of things. The cost of living has not been reduced. Not the slightest progress has been made in solving the trust question.

"The truth simply is that the only wise and sane propositions, the only propositions which represent a constructive governmental progressiveism and the resolute purpose to secure good results instead of fine phrases, were the principles enunciated in the Progressive platform in connection with the trusts and the tariff alike. Our policies would have secured the passing around of prosperity and also the existence of a sufficient amount of prosperity to be passed around. Throughout the country, all I can do is to emphasize these facts.

"But I believe that, this fall, my chief duty lies right here in the State of New York. I doubt whether there is a state in the union that shows more conclusively than this State the dreadful evil of the two-boss system in political life.

"The people of this State, the good citizens, who wish clean and efficient government, no matter what their party affiliations may be, are growing bitterly indignant with a system which provides for the see-saw of the Murphy and Barnes machines in the government of this State.

Opposes New York Bosses.

"There is not a state in which the evils of bi-partisan boss rule are more concretely illustrated than right here. Under such rule it is absolutely impossible to get decent and effective government. It is impossible to secure fair treatment for the honest business man, for the honest wage earner or for the honest farmer.

"Each branch of the government has been administered primarily with a view to the political advantage and, often, with a view to the personal enrichment of different political leaders. No advantage whatever to the people at large can possibly come by keeping this system and substituting under-bosses of Mr. Barnes for under-bosses of Mr. Murphy as the beneficiaries of the system. I believe the time has come to clean house in New York.

"And I believe that all right-minded people ought to act together, without regard to their ordinary party differences, in a determined effort to accomplish this task and to destroy the malign and baleful influence of both of the Barnes machine and the Murphy machine in this State."

On His Way to Madrid.

Roosevelt, accompanied by Philip Roosevelt, a young cousin, and his eldest daughter, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth of Cincinnati, sailed on the steamship Olympic to attend the wedding of his son, Kermit, in Madrid, June 10, to Miss Belle Willard, daughter of the American Ambassador to Spain.

On the steamer Col. Roosevelt conferred with George W. Perkins, Alexander P. Moore of Pittsburg, Medill McCormick of Chicago and several other Progressive leaders. He will go to Cherbourg and thence by train to Madrid. The ex-President expects to return June 24.

Roosevelt May Go to Louisiana to Boost Progressive Candidate.

NEW ORLEANS, May 30.—Theodore Roosevelt is expected to come to Louisiana early in the summer to aid in the campaign of Progressive State candidates.

In a letter to John M. Parker, Progressive national committeeman of Louisiana, made public today, Col. Roosevelt wrote that "the first place I must speak, if I am still wanted, is Louisiana."

Louisiana Progressives today prepared a call for a State convention in New Orleans, June 18.

Kermit Roosevelt and Fiancee Received by King of Spain.

MADRID, May 30.—King Alfonso today received in audience Kermit Roosevelt, his fiance, Miss Belle Willard, Col. Joseph E. Willard, American Ambassador to Spain and Mrs. Willard.

His Majesty conversed for some time with young Roosevelt, questioning upon his recent experiences in Brazil and listening attentively to the narrative of the explorations made by the party.

The King said he desired to meet Col. Roosevelt when he came to Spain to attend the wedding ceremony.

The church wedding as well as the civil wedding is to take place on June 10 instead of June 11, owing to the latter being Corpus Christi day.

2 BADLY HURT, 60 LIVES ENDANGERED, IN WRECK

Six Coaches Are Thrown From Rails, but Trainmen Are Only Ones Injured.

SPRINGFIELD, O., May 30.—Two trainmen were seriously injured and the lives of 60 passengers endangered when train No. 1 on the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad, known as the Detroit Flyer, was wrecked shortly after noon today at Wharton, Wyandot County. Six coaches left the rails.

Baggagemaster K. H. Gallagher and the chef of the dining car were badly hurt, but aside from being badly shaken up, none of the passengers were injured. Just what caused the accident is not known.

Eleven Killed in Mine Explosion.

LEEDS, England, May 30.—Eleven coal miners were killed and several others were injured today by an explosion of gas in the Silkstone colliery at Wharncliffe.

ST. LOUISANS ON TOUR GET CENSORED WAR NEWS

Secretary Saunders Wires Home That He Hears Mexicans Have Invaded Arizona.

Members of the Business League now touring South American countries on a trade-boosting trip are thirsting for news from home. According to a telegram received at the League's offices yesterday from Secretary Saunders, their tidings of the Mexican situation are of the censored variety.

"We have found it very difficult," Secretary Saunders said, "to get any information about the Mexican trouble. While we were aboard ship after leaving Uruguay, we got a wireless that the Mexican soldiers had invaded Arizona. This is about all the news from Mexico we get down here."

Saunders' telegram was dated at Peru. He announced that the party was well; that work was progressing satisfactorily and that more than 20 cities in Brazil, Uruguay and Peru were visited.

GIRL GRADUATE DROWNS WHEN BOAT OVERTURNS

WEBB CITY, Mo., May 30.—Emma Cleaver, 18 years old, was drowned this afternoon while boating with a party of friends near Lakeside Park, east of here. Miss Cleaver's boat was overturned and went down before she could be reached by friends.

Her home is in Carterville. She was a member of the high school graduating class of this year and was with classmates.

In loving remembrance of our dear son and brother, Vincent Browner, who departed this life May 27, 1906. In the sad year just gone by no one missed you more than father, mother, sisters and brother.

MR. AND MRS. BROWNER.

In Memoriam.

In memory of our beloved son and brother, Eddie Hueppner, who died May 26, 1913.

Since we had a fragrant blossom,
Full of sweetness, full of love,
But the angels came and claimed it
For the glorious realms above.
Eddie was our own sweet darling,
Pride of all the hearts at home,
But the angels, floating lightly,
Came and whispered, "Eddie, come."

Sadly missed by heartbroken
MOTHER, KATIE HUEPPNER.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of my dear husband and our dear father, John Keller, who departed this life May 29, 1912.

There are griefs that cannot find comfort,
And wounds that cannot be healed;
There are sorrows so deep in the human heart
They cannot be half revealed.
I could not realize what was said
When the message came that he was dead,
But God, who loved him best,
Has taken him home to rest.

Sadly missed by
WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In memory of my beloved son and brother, Charles A. Gellhausen, who died, May 29, 1913.

Silently the shades of evening
Gather around our lonely door,
Silently it brings before me
My loved ones that I see no more.
Sleep sweetly in thy grave,
Yes, slumber in peace eternal,
Till we all the last of this our mortal number
Answer for sleep the last, last call.
With tears we come today and offer
Remembering love's sweet flowers thee,
Some day we cease to wait and sigh,
How nice will then reunion be.

Sadly missed by his mother and brothers.

LOST

THAT LOST ARTICLE MAY NOT BE FOUND TODAY

Or tomorrow or next week. In fact, a month or more may elapse before it turns up. A little persistency may be necessary. Often the articles may be unfound; often fear of prosecution or hope of more satisfactory reward may delay the restoration. Then the belated awakening of the finder's conscience explains many delays. But persistency and Post-Dispatch Wants will usually recover a lost article if an honest person finds it. The service of the Post-Dispatch Lost and Found Bureau is also enlisted in behalf of advertisers. (93)

COUNTRY MERCHANTS, TAKE NOTICE.

We have moved our main office from Kansas City to St. Louis and are now located in the Drygoodsman Bldg., 1627 Washington av.

Last year we turned merchandise into $750,000 cash for merchant clients. This year we will put over a million dollars into merchants' pockets. Years of right methods, fair dealing and highest efficiency are the reasons for our great success.

THE CANNONBALL SPECIAL SALES CO. are proud of their record. We are proud, too, of the co-operation and thorough appreciation of our many merchant clients. We have moved to St. Louis for a more central location and a larger field of operation. Mr. W. S. Paul, president, and his large force of expert salesmen are at your disposal. If you are feeling the effects of business depression and slack trade, write us and we will outline to you a plan to give your business new life and quickly turn your merchandise into cash. We at the same time help you collect your outstanding accounts. Every business needs new treatment occasionally. You of course want proper methods and lasting results, and you want a DEPENDABLE firm to conduct your cash getting sale. If you do not know us already, investigate—ask us for references from many who have had our services. When you know who we are you will want us and we want to number you among our patrons. When you come to St. Louis make our office your headquarters.

Twenty big sales going on this week. We solicit correspondence from merchants in the Central, South and Western States.

THE CANNONBALL SPECIAL SALES CO.
W. C. PAUL, PRESIDENT.
DRYGOODSMAN BLDG., ST. LOUIS, MO.

AUTO ON TIME?

You have possibly been reading our advertisements some time and seriously considered calling on us to get our plan of financing the purchase of an automobile or motor truck. A mistaken idea is possibly keeping you away. A customer who purchased a car from us last week made the following remark: "If I had known you asked no premium on the purchase price of an automobile, and asked only a legal rate of interest on the deferred payments, I would have purchased a car months ago from you." Similar remarks are made to us every day. Come and let us explain how you can become the user at once of any automobile or truck of your own selection.

"PLAYER-PIANOS."
"You don't want to buy a player more than once—then why not come and see, at least, what we offer our patrons to hold their trade and good will? Just think—we represent 9 different standard makes (not a cheap, dark horse among them) ranging in price from $400 to $900. We're the third generation in the business and know lasting tone and piano quality. Neither are we controlled by any factory so that we represent our players absolutely impartially. It will pay you to come in before you buy elsewhere. Terms arranged to suit you and your old piano taken in trade. F. Beyer & Son, 17th and Locust. (c68)

THE TOUK PIANOS AND PLAYER-PIANOS
Have been persistently improved until they have reached a place of excellence entitling them to a place in the foremost ranks of America's finest instruments. Their strictly honest, scientific construction and exceptional tone qualities, coupled with grace and beauty of design, finish and durability, have won for these instruments the highest estimation of the dealer as well as the customer at home and abroad. Our location and inexpensive way of conducting our business enables us to sell these high-grade instruments at $150 to $200 cheaper than downtown prices. For honest dealing and fair treatment call on Fred Homeyer, 6426 Easton av. Sold on time payments; old pianos taken in exchange. (c)

WHY DON'T YOU QUIT PAYING RENT?
BE YOUR OWN LANDLORD

Get money from this Association and pay it back in monthly installments, just like paying rent, only YOU will own the property in 10 years.

When you join this Association and borrow, you become a partner and share in the profits, which cuts down the interest you pay until the actual rate your loan costs you is less than 5%, without commission or the expense of renewals.

Your savings may be withdrawn at any time with 4% interest, or remain until maturity and receive the full gains, which have never been less than 7½%.

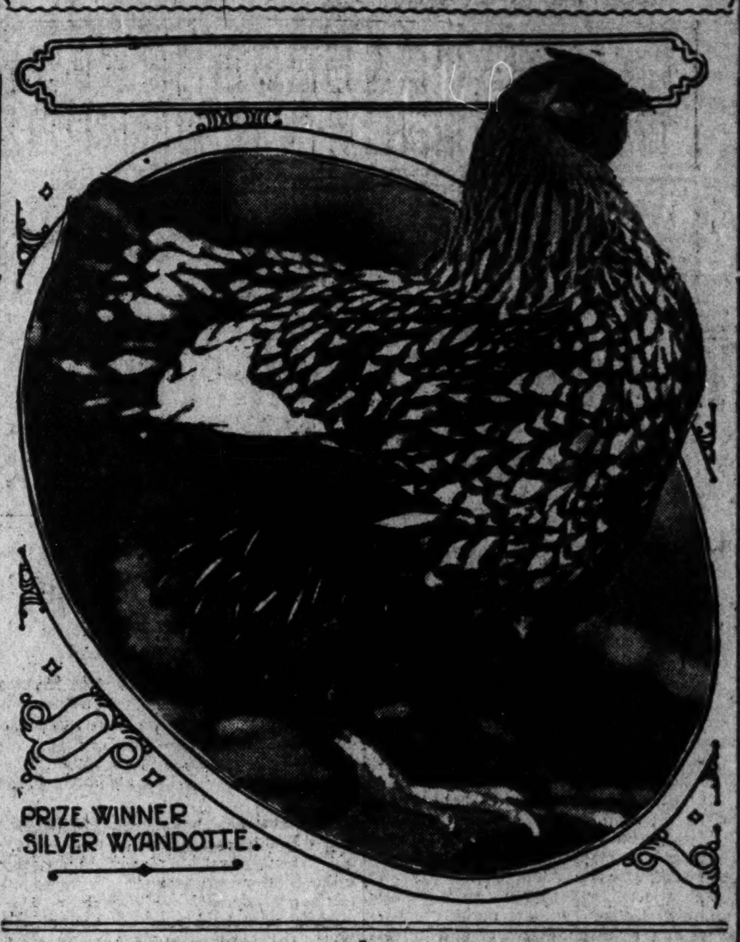
Splendid Tyye of Beautifully Marked Silver Wyandotte Hen



PRIZE WINNER SILVER WYANDOTTE.

SILVER WYANDOTTE LURES BREEDERS BY COLOR SCHEME

Female Often Called Most Beautiful Bird and Is a Splendid Layer.

The Silver Wyandottes are the oldest of the Wyandotte family or breed. They have been in existence over thirty years. They were first called American Sebrights. They have undergone wonderful transformation since their origin. They were then quite inferior specimens, judged by the present day requirements. They have always been popular, and are exceded in popularity among the Wyandottes only by the White Wyandotte.

They have the same characteristics as to shape and size as the other varieties of the Wyandotte breed. They are round, blocky and of medium size.

Certainly no fowl is more beautiful than the Silver Wyandotte female. Its color is black and white. The characteristic feature is the large white center in most of the feathers, faced with a thin, regular border of white. The male is not quite so beautiful in the opinion of many.

The eye of the Silver Wyandotte is a bay or reddish bay. The neck of the male is silvery white, with a clean white stripe down each feather. The wing color is quite complicated. The primary feathers are black, with a narrow stripe of white along the lower edge of each feather. There is a double bar of laced feathers across the middle of the wing.

The back is silvery white. The saddle feathers are similar to the neck feathers, though there is a center of white in the concealed portion of the feathers. The tail is black. The lesser tail feathers are black, laced with white.

The breast feathers have large white centers, with a narrow outer lacing of black around each feather. The fluff is laced, though not usually so distinct as the breast. The legs and toes are yellow.

The color of the female is similar on the whole to the color of the breast of the male. The neck is striped as in the male, instead of being laced.

It may be said, as a general rule, that the larger the white centers and the narrower the black lacing, the better. But the white should be white, not mossy or "spattered," and the black lacing should be really black. The white should not break through the black. It is claimed that the English Silver Wyandottes surpass the American in large open-laced centers. Of course, I know I am treading on thin ice when I say the white centers, provided they are clear and regular, cannot be too large. Some breeders will dispute this. Some American breeders of Silver Wyandottes are afraid of going to extremes in the matter of the so-called open lacing. But if I were breeding them, I should want the centers as large as I could get them.

Silver Wyandottes approaching color perfection are rare. It requires skill to produce really fine specimens and that is why some breeders like the Silver Wyandotte. They say that pure white is too easy to breed to be a real test.

I do not now breed White Wyandottes but I have bred them. I don't claim they are the best of all layers, but I will say that the particular Silver Wyandottes I owned were decidedly the best layers I ever owned.

Probably the best Silver Wyandottes in the country are found in the Middle West, while the best White Wyandottes are found in Canada and New England.

Poultry Problems Solved

Improper Feeding.

My chicks seem well till they get drowsy and soon fall dead. They do not have any disease so far as I know. My runner ducks seem to be affected in the same way. What shall I feed them?—Mrs. U., Medford, Ok.

Improper feeding is a common cause of this trouble and if you had given the ration used and general conditions under which the chicks and ducks are kept, a more definite reply would have been possible. Give them plenty of green feed, bran and sour milk along with their regular feeds, and see if the ailment will not disappear.

Leg Weakness.

I have some chicks that are four to ten days old, that are apparently healthy, eating well, but in five hours they get weak legs and sit on their knees with their legs out forward. They keep up a peep, peep, until they die. They do not seem to grow well.—W. J., St. Louis, Mo.

This trouble is leg weakness and is caused by too strong feed or damp, crowded quarters. It is most common in cold, spring weather. Reduce the amount of meat meal or beef scrap if you are feeding it and see that the chicks have plenty of room that is dry and well ventilated. Let them have more green feed, milk and bran. A remedy that has been highly recommended is made as follows: Phosphate of lime, 5 grains; sulphate of iron, 1 grain, sulphate of quinine, ½ grain, and strychnine, 1-16 grain. This quantity will be enough to make a dozen pills. For five chicks a month old, mix one of these pills in some soft feed for the chicks once a day. The dose should be increased as the chicks grow older until, when mature, the birds should receive one of these pills a day.

Weak Eggs.

Can you tell me what is the trouble with my incubator? It is a 140-egg machine of the hot water type. It has two ⅜-inch holes about 12 inches apart in the back for ventilation. It has a double glass top, but we kept it covered with cloth to make it dark inside. We got only 42 chicks out of 125 eggs that were fertile. Nearly all the chicks were wet with a substance like mucilage. Some eggs were pipped, but the chicks could not get out. I kept the machine in a bed room where there was no fire and turned and cooled the eggs according to directions.—G. E. H., Washington, Ind.

If you followed the directions carefully, the fault was undoubtedly with the eggs. It is our opinion that this is one of the characteristic cases of chicks dying in the shell just before hatching time, that have been so prevalent this spring. This is one of the baffling problems poultrymen have been wrestling with, but it seems to be the consensus of opinion among a majority of them that eggs from weak, poorly-mated breeding stock are at fault more than any other condition, assuming that the incubator has been properly managed. The best incubator on earth will not bring off a good hatch when eggs from rundown hens or from pullets that are too young, or eggs that have been kept too long, are used. Faults in incubator management that also will cause this trouble are a lack of moisture or too much moisture, lack of ventilation or too much ventilation, or insufficient turning of eggs.

Apoplexy.

I had 40 hens in April, seemingly in fine condition, but since that time eight have died suddenly. All were laying hens of last spring's hatch. They die with a full craw. Their heads, mouths, legs and plumage were all in good condition and I saw nothing wrong with their droppings. I keep oyster shells, lime, sand and water where they can get it at all times. They also have dry bran most of the time. They have a large run in a straw yard and I feed corn in the morning. The combs turn real dark just as the birds die.—N. B., Carlyle, Ill.

The blame for this trouble must be laid on your methods of feeding. According to your statement, corn and bran is all the actual nourishing feed your flock is getting. They receive no green feed nor meat feed in any form. This is decidedly an unbalanced ration. The direct cause of the sudden deaths is the ovesupply of corn they get. The disease is a form of apoplexy, very common in warm weather where birds get too much corn or other fattening feeds. The dark combs you mention are characteristic of this ailment. We have known instances where birds have fallen off the roosts at night stricken with this disease. There is, of course, no remedy. There wouldn't be time to apply it should there be one. But prevention is easy. It would be well to drop corn from the ration entirely for a time. Give milk, green feed and meat in some form and let the grain feed be wheat, oats, bran, etc., rather than so much corn.

Maine Chickens Can Digest Even Aluminum Leg Bands.

Investigations at the Maine Experiment Station show that chickens have some ability to digest, or rather dissolve, aluminum. It is the custom there to reband the chickens with a different type of band when they get larger. The old bands were slipped off and thrown to the ground. It was found that many of these slipped bands disappeared and in dissecting a chicken they found 11 pieces of these bands in the gizzard. All of them were in a state of dissolution and some of them were nearly all dissolved. Aluminum is soluble in dilute hydrochloric acid which is present in the gastric juice and the resulting salt, aluminum chloride, is not poisonous. These pieces undoubtedly serve the same purpose as grit until dissolved small enough to pass out with the feces.

die of bowel trouble more than any other cause. It is estimated that of every 1000 chicks hatched each year less than 400 reach marketable size. Germozone users raise, usually, 90% of chicks hatched. Germozone keeps the bowels regular. It prevents diarrhoea from overdrinking of water; from eating musty or spoiled food, etc. It should be given in drinking water twice a week from the day they are hatched. It stops the loss. Every chick that dies cuts badly into the profit from the rest. Every chick saved will pay the cost of a bottle of Germozone.

PLANS REVIVED FOR OFFICE BUILDINGS, THEATERS, HOTELS

Structures Are to Be Erected on Grand, Near Washington and on Olive—$2,500,000 Busch Memorial Hotel Planned for Twelfth Street.

GRAND AVENUE VALUE DOUBLED IN 10 YEARS

Former Presbyterian Church Property Near Olive Is to Be Site of Hostelry or Business Offices—Washington Avenue Property Is Sought.

While the Pageant and Masque has diverted attention more or less from realty and building, the consensus of opinion is that it has been an inspiration to the city.

Notwithstanding the fact that the vacation season is at hand, negotiations for the erection of large office buildings, hotels and theaters on Grand and on Washington avenues, and on Olive street, have been revived with new display of confidence.

The most important contemplates a 16-story hotel structure on the west half of the block on Twelfth street, extending from Market to Chestnut streets, as a memorial to the late Adolphus Busch. The cost of the project, the details of which are given in another column, is estimated at $2,500,000.

Two notable projects are proposed for the site of the former Grand Avenue Presbyterian Church, situated on the west side of the thoroughfare between Olive street and Washington avenue, one contemplating an office building and the other a combination hotel and theater. Isaac T. Cook has the office building plans, while the hotel project, it is said, is sponsored by Dan Nugent and William Preston Hill.

Hotel Probably Will Be Built.

While both projects at this time, however, are speculative, that for the hotel and theater is regarded as the more likely one.

Plans for the Grand avenue hotel are being drawn by Moran, Russell & Crowell, architects. Russell, it is said, will have a pecuniary interest in the hotel, which will be the most elaborate west of Twelfth street.

E. A. Cella has just acquired the title to the Grand Avenue Presbyterian Church site, which he purchased two or three months ago through John W. [illegible], sales manager of the Mercantile Trust Co., for $1000 a front foot, or [illegible]000.

The University Club, it is understood, has definite plans for replacing its building at the southwest corner of Grand and Washington avenues with a modern and costly home. Construction is to begin as soon as the architectural details can be perfected, which, according to J. H. Farish, will require two months.

The corner, which embraces 150x150 feet, is one of the most valuable and imposing on Grand avenue. The stately residence which now occupies the site was built originally for a home for George H. Allen.

Values Jump in Ten Years.

As showing the skyward trend of ground values on this thoroughfare, the northwest or the southwest corner of Grand and Washington avenues, according to Thomas Wright, president of the Third National Bank, could have been purchased 10 years ago for $80,000, while now, he declares, either is worth twice that amount. The University Club paid [illegible],000.

Gus W. Niemann, at that time, was considering the southwest corner, now the site of the Humboldt Building, as a site for the Tuscan lodge, while Wright was trying to interest him in the northwest corner. So sanguine was Wright of the future of Grand avenue, that he offered to become one of a syndicate of 10 with Niemann to buy the site of the University Club, then owned by Allen, at the foregoing price.

Then Wright and Niemann were staking claims in the St. Louis realty market that enriched them.

The Humboldt Building site, 100x150 feet, according to Niemann, who was formerly the president of the Title Guaranty Trust Co., was for sale in 1880 at [illegible],000.

Scalzo Gets Drummond Site.

Another recent uptown purchase was that of the Drummond site at the northwest corner of Grand avenue and Morgan street, by Felix Scalzo, a client of Eugene Altheimer, who is having plans made for an al fresco resort.

The Lawyers Investment Co., of which James C. Campbell is president, two months ago executed contracts for the purchase of the old Scruggs mansion, situated on the north side of Olive street, about [illegible] feet west of Grand avenue, at $100,000. In this instance $1000 was paid down as earnest money. As yet the sale has not been completed, while the contracts will expire June 3, if not extended.

The nine-story hotel building, C. C. Nichols Jr., agent for the purchaser, announced, would be erected on the site, the northeast corner of Washington avenue and Nineteenth street, 150x77 feet, held by Mrs. Grace A. Leathe, it was reported yesterday, is about to change control. The Hildenbrandt & [illegible] Real Estate Co., her agent, advises that a deal is pending for the site. The prospective purchasers, it is said, have plans for the erection of a large commercial building, the site [illegible] admirable adaptation for an improvement of this character.

Negotiations are pending for other Leathe holdings, including the southwest corner of Washington avenue and Eighteenth streets, which, incidentally, was wanted about a year ago as a site for a skyscraper home for the Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co.

Leathe Holdings $3,336,000.

Other large Leathe holdings include the following list, with the prices, according to realty circles, at which she holds them: Southwest corner of Washington avenue and Nineteenth street, 150x150, $400,000; north side Washington avenue, between Twentieth and Twenty-first streets, 376x137 feet, $564,000; Washington avenue, south side, between Nineteenth and Twentieth streets, 50x150, $75,000; Poplar street, south side, west of Fourteenth street, 562x135 feet, $1,000,000; Locust street, northeast corner Jefferson avenue, 125x147 feet, no estimate; 1223-25 Spruce street, 60x140, $17,500; Chestnut street, northeast corner Seventh street, 85x115 (reported sold) $500,000.

The total valuation, including the northeast corner of Nineteenth and the southwest corner of Eighteenth streets and Washington avenues, which are quoted respectively at 60,000 and $530,000, is $3,336,500.

All the Leathe holdings are in centers whose futures are assured.

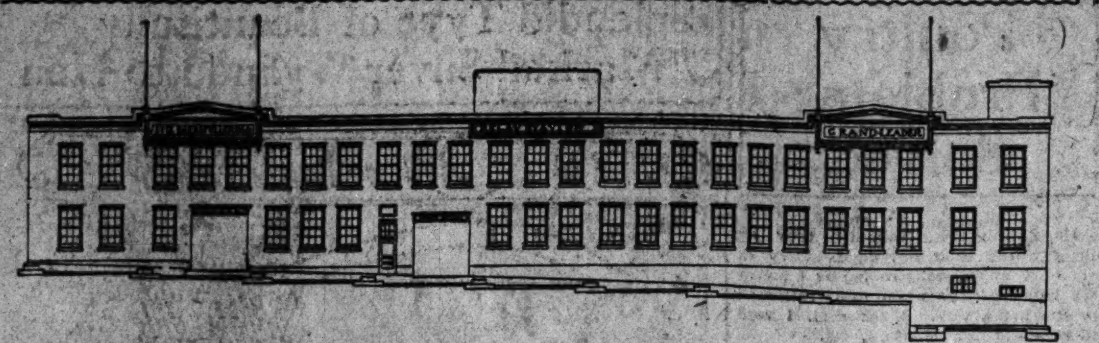
Two downtown sites are being exploited for skyscraper hotels—the northeast corner of Broadway and the northwest corner of Fourth street and Washington avenue, embracing the entire south side of the block, and the northeast corner of Olive and Twelfth streets. The Broadway and Washington avenue corner is owned by E. C. Simmons, and the Fourth and Washington avenue corner, the site of the defunct M. A. C., by the Boatmen's Bank. These sites are valued respectively at $500,000 and $350,000 by their owners it is said.

Simmons, as are other property owners, east of Fourth street, is enthusiastic over the project, which, it is believed would tend to rejuvenate this district.

Many hotels have been proposed for the northeast corner of Olive and Twelfth streets, each being virtually a repetition of the other. Accordingly, reference to the latest, which has been introduced by the same parties, is unnecessary.

Olive and Twelfth is considered, however, as the most attractive location in downtown St. Louis for a hotel structure of magnitude, which manifestly, sooner or later will grace it.

Relay Station to Facilitate Deliveries From Store Will Soon Be Ready for Use



The relay station for the delivery department of the Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co. (Grand Leader), which is being erected on Laclede avenue, between Spring and Vandeventer avenues, is nearing completion and soon will be ready for occupancy.

It is a two-story structure of brick, with a frontage of 200 feet. In the new quarters, because of improved methods, it is expected the work of making deliveries will be greatly facilitated.

TRADING ACTIVE IN FOUR FIRST-CLASS SUBDIVISIONS

Washington University Place Lots to be Auctioned Thursday Night at Delmar Garden Instead of Being Drawn By Lot

Sales are still brisk in the high-class subdivisions, including Washington University place, Hillcrest, West Portland place and Maryland terrace.

Washington University place is exciting new interest with the announcement that the property will be disposed of by auction for cash, rather than by lot, which bore the semblance of lottery.

Music and moving pictures will be attractions of the auction.

The auction will be held on Thursday night, at Delmar Garden, under the auspices of the Goodnow Realty and Investment Co., of which Richard H. Goodnow is president. It will be unreserved and without protective bidding, its promoters say. The property must be converted to provide for a first deed of trust of $171,000, which is due now.

This tract, formerly known as Tesson Park, was purchased a fortnight ago by speculators at $22 a front foot and immediately was offered for sale in lots to suit at $24 a front foot.

Plan Was to Draw Numbers.

According to the provisions of the earnest money contract, the distribution of the lots was not to be made until the entire subdivision had been subscribed for. Numbers corresponding with those of the lots of the subdivision were to have been placed in a hat and the distribution was to have been made accordingly.

Lots had been sold to Archbishop Glennon and to Dr. W. J. Williamson of the Third Baptist Church, who, the agents announced, would officiate in the proposed distribution, by which every subscriber would have gotten a lot.

About 124 of the 190 lots comprising the subdivision had been subscribed for, when, according to Bernard Geiger, the Federal authorities frowned on the plan. The sale by this method accordingly was withdrawn and the earnest money returned to the subscribers.

Many of the subscribers have announced their intentions to bid at the auction, which is attracting wide interest from both speculators and homeseekers.

Embraces 10,000 Front Feet.

The subdivision, which embraces 10,000 front feet, is situated at the southwest corner of Forsyth boulevard and Pennsylvania avenue. There will be two streets, Forsyth boulevard and Berkley avenue. Only the former, however, will be restricted, while the latter will be open to flats and apartments.

The locality includes Brentmoor, Forest Ridge, Forsyth Place and Maryland Terrace.

Arrangements have been made with Julius Pitzman for grading and improving Washington University Place on a scale commensurate with the surrounding subdivisions.

Sales of houses and of lots in Hillcrest, the Skinker Road addition, have received new impetus with the advent of summer. Notable sales of the week in this section included four houses on the south side of Arundel avenue, between Skinker and DeMun, which have just been completed by Nolte & Wilman. Ground has been broken for five other houses in this block, which is owned by this concern.

A dozen or more lots in Hillcrest also were disposed of to persons who plan to build.

The contract will be let this week for the oiling of Arundel and Aberdeen avenues in Hillcrest, whose upbuilding is eclipsing all records.

Many Maryland Terrace Sales.

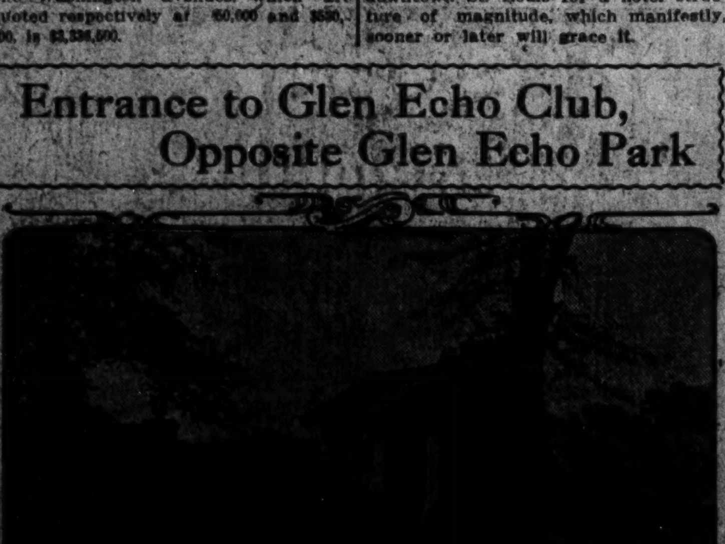
An active week also was reported at Maryland Terrace, which is being sold by the Davis Realty Development Co. on a square-foot basis. This tract, which has just been completed, is being marketed at special prices for quick disposition. The situation of Maryland Terrace on the west side of Pennsylvania avenue, overlooking Washington University, is superb.

Many lots were sold in University City, on Kingsbury and Washington, which are restricted to $5500 houses and which are destined to be the most exclusive streets in this section. Houses are being erected on these thoroughfares ranging in cost from $15,000 to $30,000.

Work is progressing on the Ames tract, which is virtually a continuation of Parkview, so far as the character of its improvements is concerned.

Kingsbury boulevard, its north line, will be the principal street in this addition, connecting Parkview with University City.

Entrance to Glen Echo Club, Opposite Glen Echo Park



PAGEANT VISITORS SAID TO BE BUYING LOTS LIKE STAMPS

Active Week Is Reported at Glen Echo Park No. 2, Southampton and Bryan Park.

Another active week was reported at the medium priced subdivisions, notwithstanding the attractions of the Pageant and Masque.

Several nonresidents purchased lots as they would have purchased postage stamps as souvenirs, according to agents.

Glen Echo Park No. 2 and Southampton were the features, increased sales being reported at both tracts.

Investors, as well as homeseekers, are buying in Glen Echo, which are quoted at $8 to $25 a foot. The terms of sale are $5 and $10 cash and $1.50 to $3 a week, without interest or taxes for two years.

Heirs Are Provided For.

There is a mortuary or insurance clause in the Glen Echo contract, which gives the lot or lots in the event of death to the widows or heirs of the purchaser, without additional payment or if she or they elect, the money paid in will be refunded.

Paul Jones & Co., the agents, with G. Irving Lowe as sales manager, announce a large special sale of lots at Glen Echo Park No. 2 for next Saturday, with refreshments for prospective purchasers or visitors.

The tract, according to those who have seen it, is a Sylvan dream and ideally situated for the middle class, to whom the promoters of the sale doubtless appeal.

Southampton promises to eclipse all records for subdivision activity in the St. Louis realty market.

Sales of lots in this subdivision are increasing daily, the indications being by fall the tract will have been depleted.

Prices and Terms Attractive.

The prices and terms at Southampton, considering its character and location, are remarkable, operators declare. The wage-earning classes are buying the lots, which are being improved with substantial homes.

The equipment of the subdivision, which includes sewers and walks, is complete.

The Mercantile Trust Co., with R. C. Buchanan as sales manager, is directing the sale of this subdivision for the Southampton Realty Co., composed of Lorenzo E. Anderson, Festus J. Wade, David R. Francis and several other prominent men, who bought it at a nominal price just before the World's Fair.

There is no diminution of the demand for lots in Bryan Park and West Walnut Manor, which are being disposed of at popular prices and terms.

Probably 20 more lots were disposed of at Bryan Park last week, while an equal number, it is understood, changed hands at West Walnut Manor.

The former is being handled by Barngrover & Specht, and the latter by the David P. Leahy House and Home Co., both being attractively situated, with adequate transportation facilities.

GRACE M. E. CHURCH BUYS HOUSE FOR PARSONAGE

Property at 6166 Kingsbury Boulevard, 12-Room House, Is Obtained for About $15,000.

The residence at 6166 Kingsbury boulevard, owned by Henry M. Wise of the Jones-Wise Commission Co., was transferred yesterday to the Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, formerly the Lindell Avenue Methodist Church. This church was recently removed from Lindell and Newstead to Skinker and Waterman, and the residence was purchased by the congregation as a parsonage. The residence is a 12-room Colonial type of home, containing two baths, hot water heat and all modern conveniences. The price paid was in the neighborhood of $15,000.

Both sides of the transaction were represented by the Butts Realty Co.

Issues Realty Bargain List.

R. A. Miller has just issued a new bargain list of choice properties in the new McCausland Avenue District, at the southwest corner of Forest Park where the city is erecting a new entrance at a cost of $30,000. Miller has sold 28 residences in this section since last fall.

WHERE SHALL I GO TONIGHT?

If it's "movies," this question may be answered for all of this week by clipping the "Moving Picture" column, first page of today's big POST-DISPATCH Real Estate and Want Directory.

$2,500,000 HOTEL TO BE BUILT AS BUSCH MEMORIAL

Block on Twelfth Street Between Market and Chestunt to Be Site.

WILL HAVE 16 STORIES

Real Estate Men Expect Nearby Property to Advance in Price as Result.

The erection of the proposed 16-story $2,500,000 hotel building to be called "the Adolphus" on the half block fronting on the west side of Twelfth street, between Market and Chestnut streets, as a memorial to the late Adolphus Busch, according to realty circles, will mark the transformation of this section of the city. The site, negotiations for the purchase of which have been completed by August A. Busch of the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Association, has a frontage of approximately 200 feet on Twelfth street by depths on Market and Chestnut streets of 100 feet 3 inches. It embraces two ownerships, the northwest corner of Market, held by the Emilie Realty Co., composed of the Lucas and Hunt heirs and the southwest corner of Chestnut, by Frank R. Ruf. The prices to be paid for the corners comprised in the half block, it was stated by the agents handling the transactions, will be disclosed only with conveyance of the titles.

Site Called Ideal.

Announcement of the project electrified realty and financial circles, which had had no inkling of it.

The purchase, with its Twelfth street frontage and with its open vista on the south, according to Frank H. Gerhart, forms a superb site for the memorial.

The proximity of the site to Union Station is another attractive feature. The hotel, it is understood, will be a twin structure to the Hotel Adolphus of Dallas, Tex., which was built by Adolphus Busch, and which is considered one of the most elaborate in the West.

Possession of the ground, which is occupied by old one-story buildings, may be had on 30 or 60 days notice.

Will Increase Values.

The project, it is predicted, will accelerate the upbuilding of Twelfth street and impart new life to both Market and Chestnut streets in the downtown district.

According to City Assessor Frank W. Schramm, it will revolutionize ground values, on Twelfth street, between Olive street and Walnut street, while the enhancement on Market and Chestnut streets, between Twelfth and Eighteenth streets, will be from 25 per cent to 75 per cent.

An influx of large commercial houses to Chestnut, which is a logical business center, is foreseen.

Originally the east side of Twelfth street, from Market to Chestnut streets, and the northeast corner of Olive and Twelfth streets, were sought successively as a site for the big improvement. The prices, however, asked for them, $4000 a foot for the Market street corner and $7500 a front foot for the Olive street corner, were prohibitive.

The Mississippi Valley Trust Co. acted for one of the lot holders.

The details of the Busch hotel, the number of rooms, etc., have not been determined, as the general plans have not yet been submitted to architects.

PITTSBURGERS PLANNING BIG REALTY CONVENTION

Delegates Will Meet in Schenley Hotel in City's Center of Beauty and Utility.

The Pittsburg Real Estate Board has provided a Central Convention Committee which is meeting daily in connection with plans for the seventh annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges to be held at Pittsburg July 8, 9, 10 and 11, 1914. A score of other committees has been appointed, each with a specific work to do.

Some of the particularly interesting features of the Pittsburg convention will be its setting in the Fifty Million Dollar "Beauty Center" (where beauty and utility blend).

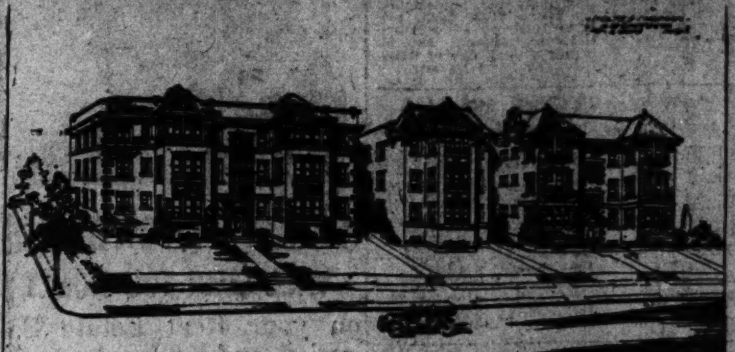
All convention sessions will be held in the Schenley Hotel. Surrounding this hotel are the Twentieth Century, Pittsburg Athletic, University and Concordia clubs, the Masonic Temple, Carnegie Institute with its wonderful collection of paintings, Pittsburg University with its great school of mines, engineering and medicine, the Eighteenth Regiment Armory, and the National League Baseball Park, which will interest many delegates.

The Executive Committee has decided to hold a four-day convention with business sessions from 9 a. m. to 1 p. m. This leaves the afternoon for committee meetings, conferences of various kinds, and such entertainment as the Pittsburg Board may provide. It also gives the visitors an opportunity to make a careful investigation of real estate values and conditions in Pittsburg, for comparison with St. Louis values.

Buys Lots at University Car Loop.

J. I. Gorman of Wellston, as agent, has purchased of J. Burt Gildersleeve, for clients, two lots located on the south side of West Portland avenue, in the section at the end of the University car loop. They are each 40 feet wide, with an approximate depth of 140 feet to a 20-foot alley, the whole lot sloping to the south to the right-of-way of the United Railways, permitting an unobstructed view over beautiful homes and the university buildings.

$100,000 Group of Apartment Houses in West End Going Up



Construction has been started by F. A. Banister at the southwest corner of Von Versen and Belt avenues on a group of apartment buildings to cost $100,000.

There will be two buildings, comprising six apartments of six rooms and solarium each; one building of three apartments of seven rooms and solarium each, and one building with three apartments of five rooms and three of six rooms with solarium each.

Some of the apartments will have two bathrooms each. Inclosed sleeping porches will be features. The solarium will be 10x13 feet and are equipped with Murphy's "In-A-Dor" beds. The living rooms in all of the apartments will be 13x18 feet, with large open brick fireplaces and mantels. The dining rooms will be 13x16 feet.

The principal rooms will have hardwood finish and cornices in the ceiling angles. The buildings will be provided with steam-heating plants and clothes driers and other modern conveniences. There will be a garage in the rear for 10 autos for the use of tenants.

The plans for the group of buildings were prepared by Nolte & Nauman, architects.

These improvements, with the group of apartment buildings recently erected by Banister at the northeast corner of Delmar boulevard and Belt avenue, at a cost of $100,000, will complete the upbuilding of the east half of the block, representing an investment of $200,000.

FEE IN MONWARD BLDG. AND SITE TO BE DIVIDED

New Company Will Take Title to Latter on 4 Per Cent Basis for 99 Years.

So soon as details can be perfected the fee simple, embracing the Monward Building and site, at the northeast corner of Broadway and Olive street, will be divided, with a new company taking the title to the site, under a 99-year lease to the building company on a 4 per cent basis.

Incidentally, the fee simple includes both the site and the improvements, or the entire property.

The site is 150x150 feet, and exclusive of the building represents an investment of $1,500,000. On this valuation the ground, it is believed, will be leased to the building company on the aforementioned basis, or at an annual net rental of $60,000.

With the skyscraper as security, the fee or site could readily be disposed of for its original cost, or perhaps at a premium.

Proposals from capitalists, according to financiers, already have been forthcoming for the purchase of the fee, at a price proportionate with the ground rental.

A part of the ground floor has been leased to the Boatmen's Bank at an annual rental of $35,000. Negotiations are pending for the remainder of the space on the Broadway and Olive street sides for which a rental of $15,000 per annum, it is believed, can be realized, the revenue from the ground floor being estimated at $50,000.

W. R. Compton & Co., brokers, it is reported, have made an offer for the ground floor space on the Olive street side of the building. Lorenzo E. Anderson, one of the largest stock and bond brokers in St. Louis and in the West, is also mentioned as a possible lessee.

The B. F. Edwards Brokerage Co., it is understood, owns stock in the building. It was originally announced this firm would occupy the space in question, which is regarded as the most attractive in the financial district for a stock and bond exchange.

A fancy price has been declined from the United Cigar Store Co. for storeroom on the Broadway frontage.

Jesse D. Dana, promoter and vice-president of the building company, said that the tower project for the Monward Building was in abeyance.

The Monward Building, with its site, represents an investment of $2,000,000.

GUARDIAN TRUST CO. SELLS HOUSES FOR CLIENT

Property on Market and Walnut Streets Are Disposed of to Paul Bloch.

The Guardian Trust Co. of St. Louis sold for Julia A. Blanke 2822-2824 Market street and 2821-2823 Walnut street, stores and flats, to Paul Bloch. The Guardian Trust Co. represented both parties. The deal was put through by Clives S. Fisher.

WILLIAM S. DROEDA REALTY CO.

The Wm. S. Droeda Realty Co., 4012 Chouteau avenue, reports the following sales:

The David P. Leahy House and Home Co. reports the following sales in West Walnut Manor and other subdivisions during the week:

Sold for account of the Compact Construction Co., two-story tile-roof brick bungalow, containing six rooms, on lot fronting 50 feet on the east line of Hamilton avenue, to Charles and Frances L. Herrick, for $2750. The purchasers will immediately take possession.

Also five-room tile-roof stucco bungalow, on lot fronting 37½ feet on the west line of Janet avenue, sold for account of the Compact Construction Co. to Mrs. Mary Walsh, for $1750. The purchaser bought for a home.

Also two-story brick bungalow, tile roof, six rooms, on lot fronting 50 feet on the south line of Oakland avenue in South Forest Park Hills, for account of the Compact Construction Co. to James and Elsie Hilcker.

WEST WALNUT MANOR.

One hundred feet on the east line of Hamilton avenue, to Andrew J. Jones, for $600. Jones bought for an investment.

Also 25 feet on the east line of Hamilton avenue, to Bertha L. Jones, for $150.

One hundred feet on the west line of Helen avenue, to August L. Koerner, for $945.50. The purchaser will improve with two five-room bungalows.

Thirty-seven and one-half feet on the west line of Hodiamont avenue, to Michael L. Mitchell, for $395.50. The purchaser will improve with a modern bungalow.

Fifty feet on the east line of Jennings Station road, to Mrs. Sarah Hahn, for $389.50. The purchaser bought for an investment.

Also lot fronting 50 feet on the east line of Janet avenue, to Bernard Nixon. The purchaser will improve with a four-room cottage.

SOUTH FOREST PARK HILLS.

Lot fronting 25 feet on the east line of Yale avenue, to John Ickenroth.

Fifty feet on the west line of Blendon place, to Ernest and Elizabeth Condon. The purchasers will improve with a five-room bungalow.

Thirty-seven and one-half feet on the north line of Wise avenue, to Mrs. G. F. Daggett. The purchaser bought for an investment.

Fifty feet on the west line of Yale avenue, to Herman Matthews. The purchaser will improve with his own home.

WELLSTON GROVE NO. 4.

Fifty feet on the north line of Ridge avenue, to Patrick Kehoe, for $895. The purchaser will improve with a five-room bungalow.

Fifty feet on the north line of Wells avenue, to V. C. Hanley, for $850.

Also 37½ feet on the north line of Ridge avenue, to Mrs. Catherine Brennan, for $655. The purchaser will improve with her own home.

JOSEPH F. DIECKMAN R. E. CO.

The Joseph F. Dieckmann Real Estate Co. report the following sales:

2122 Geyer avenue, a two-story brick building of six rooms on each floor and stable in rear for six horses, to Vaclav Kratochvil.

For account of Oscar R. Glaessner and wife, two pieces of property in Sacramento County, Cal. One tract contains three acres of land.

For account of Oscar R. Glaessner, a corner lot situated in the town of Clay in Sacramento County, Cal., 100x144 feet, to a client of the company.

2809-15-17 Biddle street; 2809 is a five-room frame cottage with a large stable and sheds in rear; lot 25x130, 2815 is a five-room brick cottage, lot 25x130 feet, and 2817 Biddle street is a four-room frame cottage; to Ben Rubins.

6168 Bertha avenue, lot 30x125, with a five-room frame cottage, to Mrs. Lucretia McInturf, for $1500.

Vacant lot on northeast corner of Webster avenue and Glasgow place, lot 50 by 130 feet; to a client of the company.

4229 Evans avenue, lot 30 by 160 feet, with two-story brick building, containing a three-room flat with bath, for account of Ida Kessler to a client.

546 San Francisco avenue, lot 30x208, to Ida Rothmund.

KOLLAS REAL ESTATE CO.

The Kollas Real Estate Co. reports these sales:

Fifty feet of vacant property on the south side of Shaw avenue, between Lawrence and Thurman, for the account of A. J. Heinrich Sr. and Jr. to L. A. Paulo, who will improve with a modern double flat.

4168 Juniata street, two-story brick building, store and five rooms above, and one-story frame store building in rear. Sold for Henry R. Rothermich and wife to Thomas F. Maloney, who purchased for investment. As part payment Rothermich received 25 feet of vacant on the east side of Michigan between Utah and Cherokee, which he will improve.

Sold the northeast corner of Thirteenth and Barton, lot 125x145 feet, improved with a three-story, 10-room residence and two-story brick garage and stable in rear, to Ida Graves, who was represented by Schwenker Realty Co. As part payment Ida Graves deed the northwest corner of Nebraska and Victor, consisting of a modern four and five room flat, containing bath, furnaces and laundry, also a two-story brick building on rear of lot containing store on first floor and three rooms and bath on second, and together renting for $80 per month.

A. R. SCHOLLMEYER R. E. CO.

The A. R. Schollmeyer Real Estate Co. reports the following sales:

4334 Laclede avenue, a 10-room house near Forest Park, from John Friel to John C. Murphy.

5308 Crest avenue, a five-room house with bath; lot 40x150; from F. A. Kaiser to Robert N. [illegible].

4952 Ellenwood avenue, a 4-room brick cottage, with tile bath, sold to Christian Remmelsberger.

Two lots in Sutton Heights; one on Etzel avenue, 30x150, to Edward H. Arnett and one on Crest avenue, 30x150, to William H. Dowall.

MARTIN-BREIT R. E. CO.

A lease has been closed by Louis Caesar Catering Co. for the building which he now occupies, being 306-10 North Sixth street. The Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co. also leased the second floor at 602 Olive street for the American Theater Curtain and Supply Co. to Mrs. Lucile Aldrich, who will open hairdressing and chiropodist parlors.

Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co. have quite a number of leases under contract which will be closed in a few weeks.

FAST GROWTH IS SUCCESS SECRET WITH JULY CHICKS

White Wyandotte Prize Winner Tells How He Does It After Egg Season Is Passed.

One of the very successful White Wyandotte growers of the country sent out his summer price lists a few days ago and one page of it contained this interesting article about late hatched chicks:

Among fanciers the month of June has always been the favorite month to hatch pullets for the winter shows. With proper care cockerels hatched in June will be in the full bloom of maturity early in January. At the Boston show last year four of my string of cockerels and all my winning pullets were hatched after the first of June. A good show bird must be developed evenly and rapidly from the time it is hatched and if it takes nine or ten months to make the growth it should make in six or seven, the chances are that it will never land a blue ribbon. A high quality bird is generally a well grown bird. So if you wish to raise June or July chicks you must bring them along rapidly and give them every chance.

To hatch out June chicks and then turn them loose with older chicks to be knocked about is simply folly as the younger chicks will never amount to anything.

Dust Hens Well.

I always use hens to hatch the late chicks and they must be kept well dusted with insect powder. When they hatch, dust both hen and chicks with insect powder again and repeat this every four or five days until the chicks are three weeks old or out of danger. As a double precaution it is a good idea to grease the head of the chick with a drop of lard. This should be done at night when the chicks are under the hen.

Place them off by themselves where they will not be bothered by the older chicks and feed on bread soaked in sweet milk and squeezed dry. For variety feed boiled wheat, cracked white corn and hulled oats. Two or three feeds a week of boiled liver will keep them growing and have no set-backs. After the chicks are two or three weeks old, give the hen her liberty to take them where she will. She may lose some of them but the ones left will get their growth and make valuable birds.

Pushing July Hatched Chicks.

The past few years my egg trade has been so heavy that by the end of June I have not nearly had my required number of chicks, so I have been hatching about 400 July chicks. These chicks have grown rapidly and when cold weather comes they are well feathered out and weigh about two or three pounds each. We house them in curtain front colony houses in flocks of 25. Mornings they are fed mixed grain scattered in the litter, also a little more at noon to keep them busy through the day. At night they are given a mash consisting of cooked vegetables, mashed up and mixed with bran, oat chop, cornmeal and fine wheat middlings.

Under this treatment they grow and develop into fine large birds. I admit they need a little better care and cost a little more to raise than chicks hatched earlier in the season, but on the other hand the eggs hatch better and the chicks have no setbacks and make rapid growth. In the past few years I recall a number of good birds that were hatched in June and July and that I sold for $75 and $100 each.

Poultry Suggestions

An onion chopped and mixed in with the mash is a good occasional feed for chicks, as well as old birds.

"Let the blessed sunshine in." People who keep the sunlight out of their houses keep sickness in, as a usual thing.

Put the chicken coop where it will be dry and warm.

The hens are not half so much to blame for poultry failures as the men who own and care for them. The hen responds either to good care or bad care.

Keep something in the grit box. Ditto the water fountain.

It is a wise plan to hatch duck eggs as soon as possible after being laid. They seem to deteriorate more rapidly than eggs of other poultry.

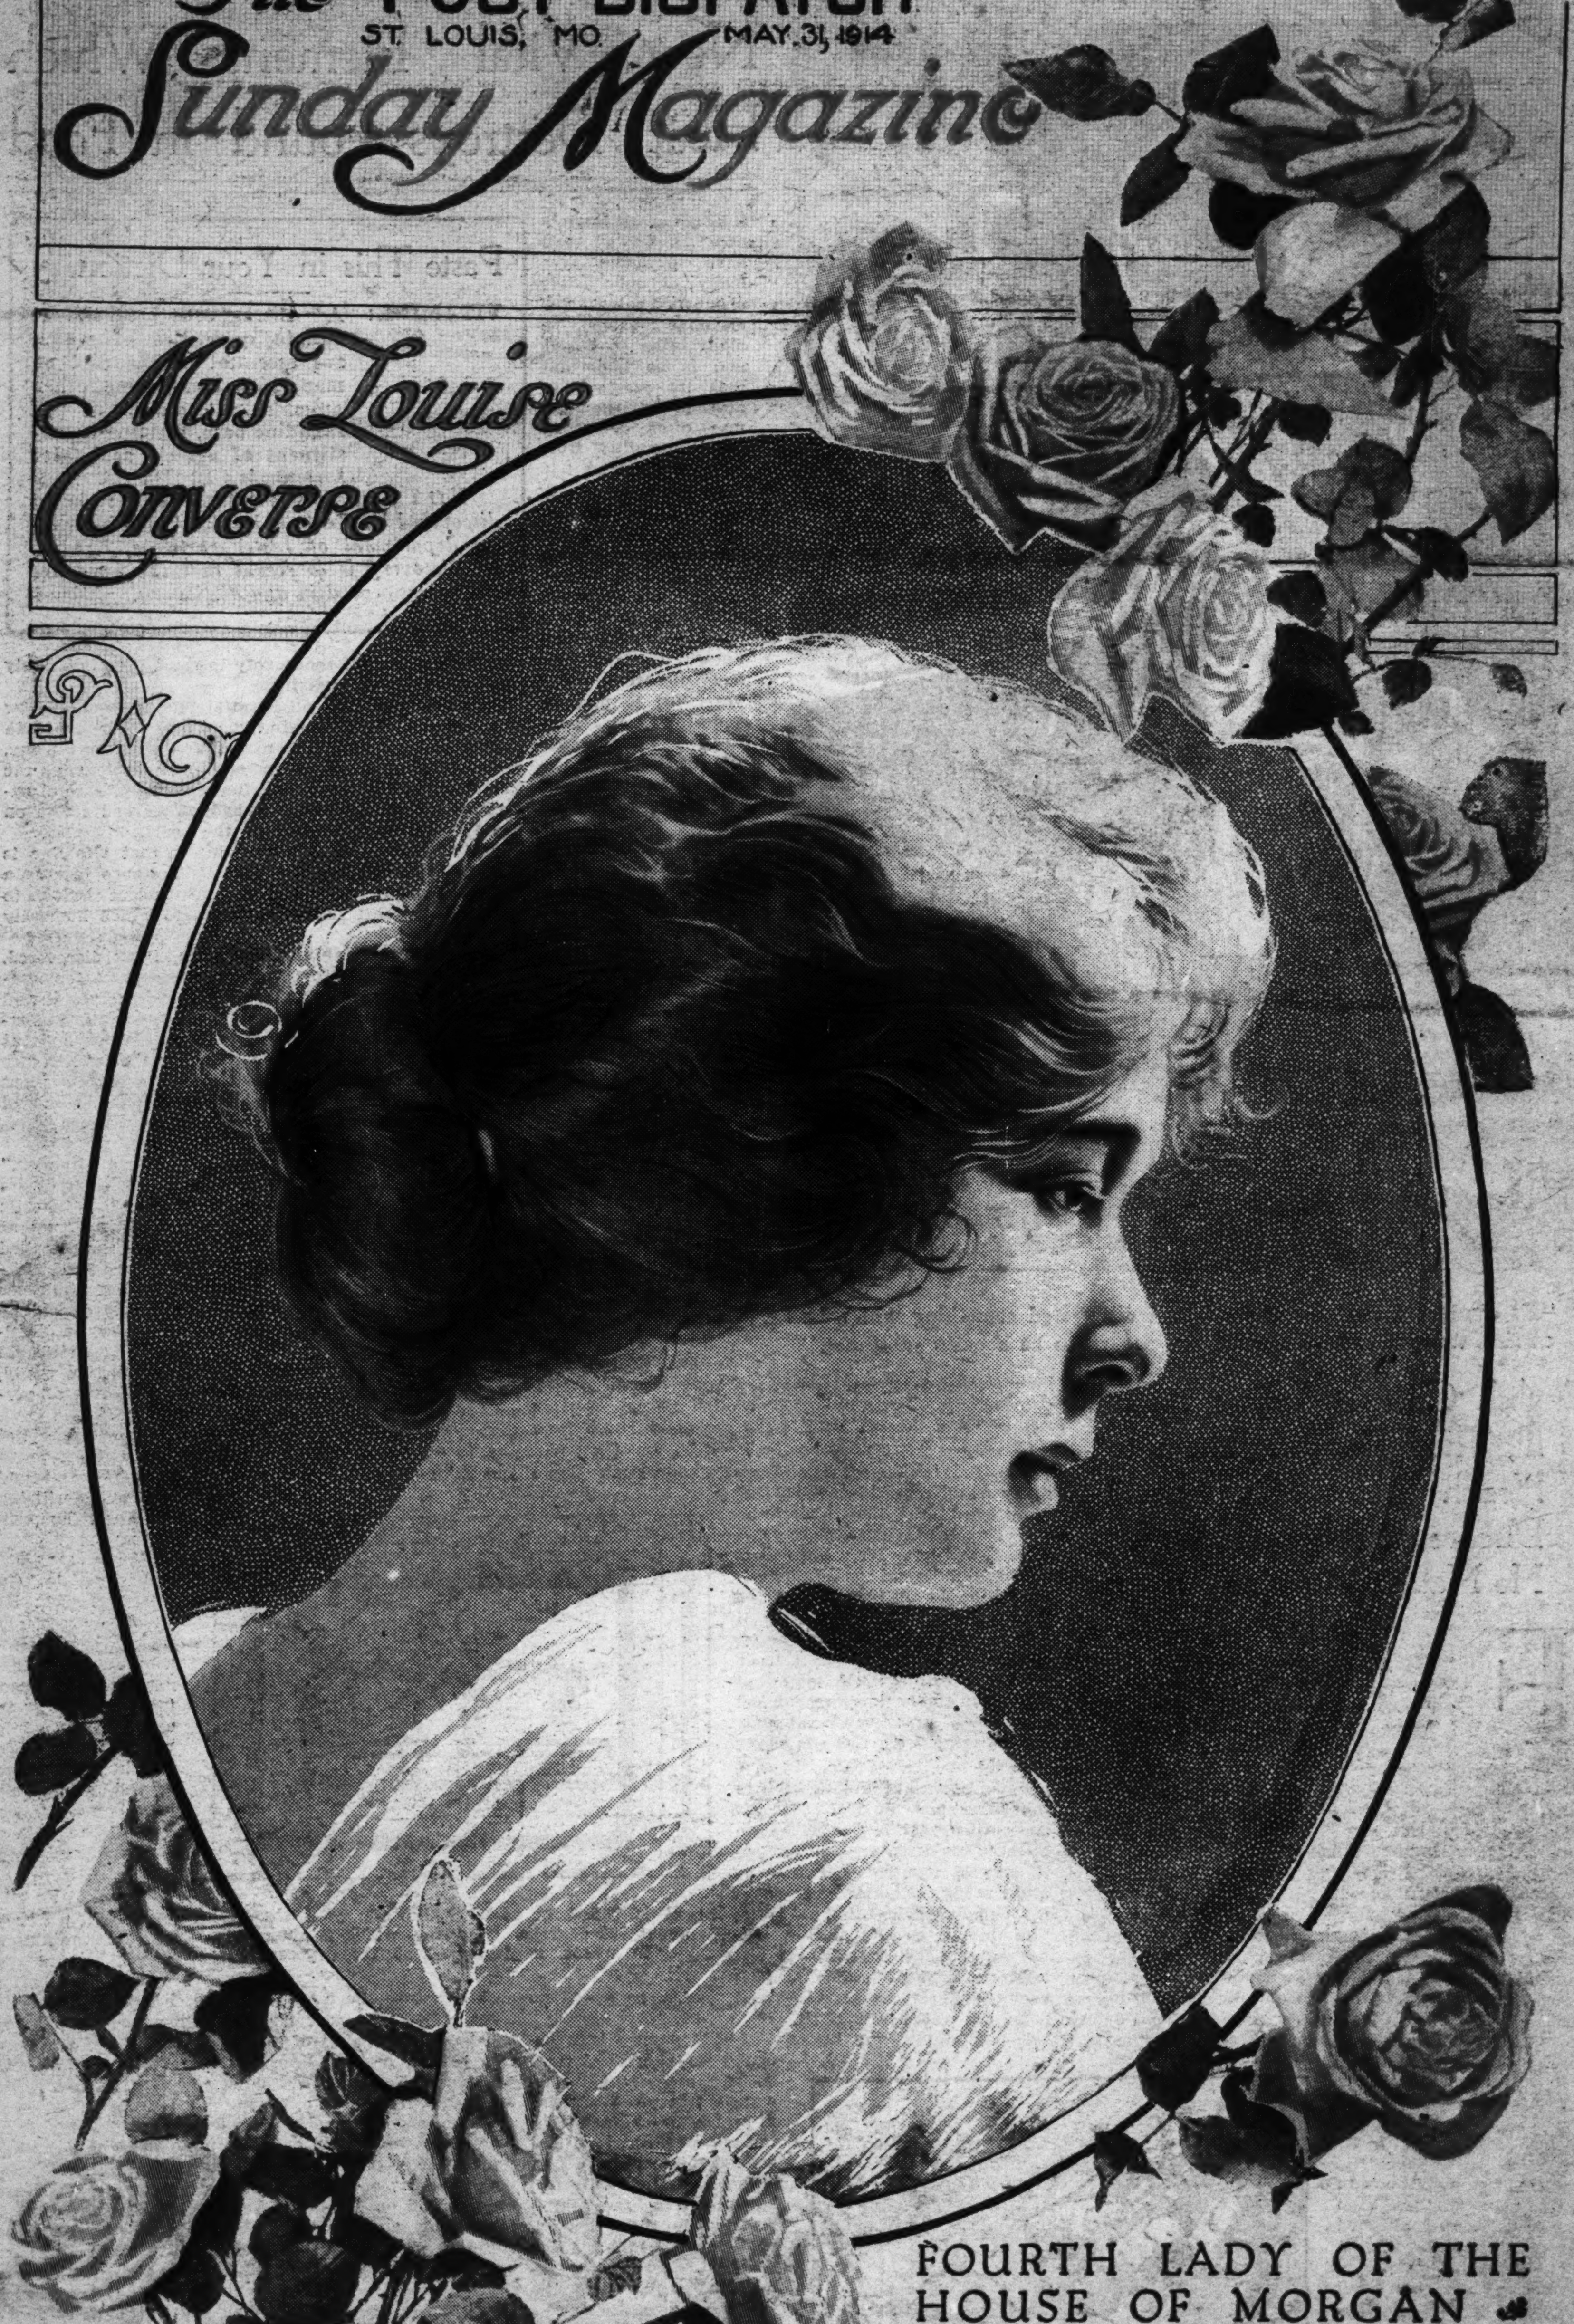
Miss Louise Converse



FOURTH LADY OF THE HOUSE OF MORGAN

Daughter of Composer of Music for St. Louis Pageant and Masque.

THE announcement of the engagement of Miss Louise Converse to Junius Spencer Morgan II, son of J. Pierpont Morgan Jr., is of particular interest to St. Louisans, as the father of the bride-to-be, Frederick S. Converse of Boston, is composer of the music for the St. Louis Pageant and Masque.

Miss Converse, who is 18 years old, inherits the good looks of her family. Her mother was one of the four Tudor sisters, who were famous for their beauty in the Boston of a generation ago. Her father's opera, "The Pipe of Desire," was presented at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York in 1912.

Like his ancestors, Junius Morgan has chosen his bride in New England. The other ladies of the house of Morgan were Miss Juliet Pierpont, who married Junius Morgan in 1836; Miss Frances Louise Tracy, who married the late J. Pierpont Morgan in 1865; and Miss Jane Norton Crew, who married J. Pierpont Morgan Jr. in 1896. Junius Morgan is 23 years old, and will one day become the master of the huge Morgan fortune.

After All, to Cook What We Eat?

New Vital Element Which Heat Destroys Found in Food

"He conducted analyses of yeast and discovered something which he at first thought to be a nitrate, but proved to be a basic substance."

English Chemist Makes Animals Ill, Then Restores Them to Health With This Newly Discovered Substance, Which He Names Vitamine :: ::

FOOD-FADDISTS have never advocated anything more revolutionary than a startling new theory to which scientists of the highest rank are turning their attention. It is that in cooking food we destroy an element which is essential to perfect health.

The question whether food should be cooked or not has been proposed seriously, not by notoriety seekers, but by conservative physicians. The London Lancet, in a recent editorial, admitted that the question is debatable. It went farther and admitted there are possible absurdities in attempts to prove, by scientific logic, that food should be cooked.

The Lancet's expression was evoked by a letter from one of its readers, a physician who was confronting serious problems in his own practice. The journal frankly said that it couldn't pass authoritatively upon the matter, adding: "These are questions which deserve careful attention, for the above considerations appear to place the contentions of some of our dietitians in a rather absurd position."

That food should be cooked has become almost axiomatic. On the surface of things, it would appear that absurdities should lie not in affirming it but in denying it. Civilized man has been cooking his food for countless centuries—in fact, the transition period between civilization and savagery is often thought of as the time when man first learned the use of heat in preparing what he ate. But science has gone on demonstrating time after time, that things men have always done or believed in have been wrong, and it may be that this notion will go the way of so many others.

An English chemist's discovery brought the whole matter up for review. Because he found in some yeast a substance which he named vitamine it is not at all improbable that we shall have to make over many of our beliefs about food values. For vitamine exists in many other foodstuffs and is so important that its presence or absence in the diet may often determine one's immunity from serious disease.

Paste This in Your Dictionary

VITAMINE: A nitrogenous substance, minute quantities of which are essential in the diet of man, birds and some other animals; a chemical of pyramidine base, forming a constituent of nucleic acid. Its formula is C16 H18 O6.

NOTE: This substance was recently discovered by Cassimir Funk, of the biochemical department of Lister Institute, London. Its discovery is so recent that the word has not yet appeared in any dictionary.

As not infrequently happens, the chemist was not looking for new substances when he began his experiments. All he hoped to do was to make a close study of already-known matters. He had discovered that yeast fed to pigeons, suffering from polyneuritis — inflammation of the nerve centers—cured them, and was trying to find out why.

Not that he was so tremendously interested in the welfare of the pigeons. His idea was that if he could determine what cured them he might get at the fundamentals of cures for men suffering from such diseases as rickets, scurvy, osteomalacia and beri-beri, the dreaded scourge of the Orient. All of these maladies are called "deficiency diseases," the theory being that they are caused by some insufficiency in food. Beri-beri, it has been determined, is caused from eating rice from which the husk has been removed. Scurvy afflicts seamen long deprived of a properly balanced diet. Osteomalacia, or spine disease, often afflicts delicate women when they do not get the proper nutrition from their food.

The Englishman, his name was Casimir Funk, began his work in the biochemical department of the Lister Institute. He conducted his analysis of yeast with the utmost care. After long, painstaking labor, he discovered something he at first thought to be a nitrate. After subjecting it to all the known tests, however, he discovered that it was a basic substance within itself, somewhat analagous to the known chemical substances, uracil and thymine, but differing from these in many respects.

Funk began his investigation in the latter part of 1911. It was not until a year later that he announced his discovery and not until several months after that he could speak authoritatively about it. Thus it happens that the term, vitamine, is so new that it cannot be found in even the latest lexicons at the Missouri Medical Society's library, 3533 Pine street, and many scientists have not yet heard of it.

In explaining why he gave it this name, Funk declared that he found it to be a nitrogenous substance, minute quantities of which are essential in the diet of birds, man and some other animals. In other words, he found it to be precisely the thing wanting in those insufficient diets which caused beri-beri, rickets, osteomalacia, scurvy and the kindred ailments. The Oriental who confines himself to a rice diet and who eats rice from which this food product has been eliminated thereby lays the foundation for the plague, which he fears most.

The pigeons, ill with scurvy, were inoculated with vitamine. They recovered their health shortly afterward.

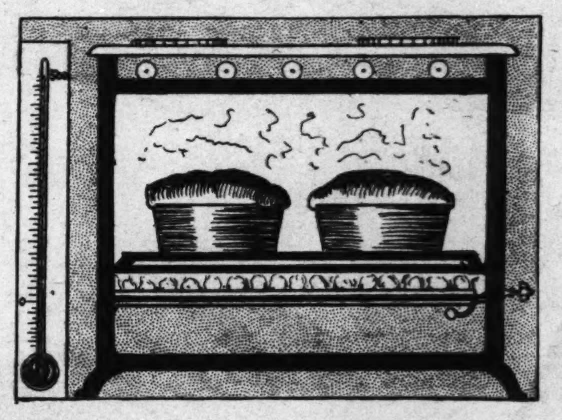
After isolating vitamine, Funk experimented on pigeons. He found that the birds inoculated with beri-beri invariably died, usually in from six to twelve hours, rarely living as long as 24 hours. Then he found that when the pigeons had become thoroughly infected they invariably recovered if given vitamine.

To make sure that no harmful effects would follow from administering vitamine in its pure form to human beings, he gave some of it to Arthur Robertson Cushny, professor of materia medica and pharmacology at the University of London, who, after a series of careful experiments, announced that it had no marked action on blood pressure, respiration or the heart.

The conclusion from all of this is that vitamine is essential to good health— that its presence insures a well-balanced diet and that its absence opens the way to some of the most serious maladies to which humanity is susceptible.

The unfortunate thing about it is, Funk discovered, that vitamine is destroyed by intense heat. A temperature of 130 degrees is sufficient to disintegrate it and deprive it of all its food value. That temperature is excelled in almost any kind of cooking. Water boils at 212 degrees, which is much hotter than the temperature at which vitamine is annihilated. It is at this point that the question as to whether food should be cooked becomes important. The editorial in the Lancet states the problem concisely.

"The isolation of that curious substance vitamine," the article runs, "has led to the conclusion that its presence in foods is of great importance, and that its removal from foods is connected in some way, not at present quite clear, with the occurrence of the so-called deficiency diseases, among which may be reckoned rickets, scurvy, osteomalacia and beri-beri. But vitamines are destroyed by temperatures largely overreached by cooking processes. If vitamines are a necessity in dietetics, the conclusion is well-nigh reached that we should eat our foods raw or uncooked. This injunction would, of course, be most distasteful to the majority of persons, especially in the case of animal foods."



Bread is baked in ovens where the heat should be about 500 degrees. Vitamine, which is abundant in wheat, is destroyed at 180 degrees.

The writer then shows that cooking meat does not add to its digestibility but simply makes it attractive and develops its flavors, besides preserving it and slightly sterilizing it. Then he continues:

"There are not many articles in a stereotyped diet which are not cooked before consumption, and this applies to vegetable as well as to animal foods, while most of the foods rich in vitamies are cooked, as for example meats, cereals, the pulses, potatoes and carrots.

"Even bread, made from rich, vitamine-containing wheat, would be vitamineless after cooking, since the temperature reached in the oven is much higher than that which has been shown to destroy this so-called vital principle. Incidentally, this observation has an obvious bearing on the controversy as to whether whole-meal bread is more nourishing than white bread.

"These are questions which deserve careful attention, for the above contentions appear to place the contentions of some of our dietitians in a rather absurd position. On the one hand, the majority of our foods are cooked, and on the other we are told that the process of cooking imperils the vitality of a substance present which is essential to the assimilability of food. If we accepted the proposition laid down, we should have to conclude that there is something radically wrong with our methods of preparing food, which seemingly ought to have favored a general distribution of deficiency diseases."

It is significant that the Lancet does not challenge the validity of Funk's claims for his discovery. The paper simply takes the position that these are matters of grave consequence that should be thoroughly studied.

A Real Cure for Baldness.

A METHOD of sewing hair in the human scalp in cases of partial or total baldness has been successfully used in several instances by Dr. Szekely at the hospital of Saint Stephane at Budapest. The number of hairs "planted" in the head of a patient has been as many as 50,000. One hundred hairs are drawn through punctures in the scalp to every centimeter, and as both ends are left free, the number is thus 200, or over 1000 to each square inch.

Painless Birth in Twilight Sleep

Two German doctors report on 5000 cases—Basic idea is use of combination of drugs which obliterates pain, but does not restrict muscular energy . .

WHEN that peril and pain which comes only to woman is no longer synonymous with agony, the world's literature will need revision to find some other standard illustration of inevitable suffering. Right now the great scientists of all countries believe they are at the threshold of a discovery in which this long-sought end will be attained.

It is too early as yet to declare positively that the discovery has been made. Certainly under the progress already reported, women in a German institution go through the ordeal without conscious suffering. The conditions under which this is brought about, however, are peculiar to the establishment. It is to be doubted that they can be duplicated by the average practitioner or in the average hospital. Yet if what is being done there can be brought within the reach of all, it will be a greater boon to humanity, if possible, than aseptic surgery and even general anesthesia. For while the average man rarely requires serious surgical attention, bringing children into the world is the lot of the average woman.

Painless birth is being achieved in the woman's clinic of the State University of Freiburg, in Germany. The fame of it has spread abroad and women are going there from all over the world. Its directors have made a life study of the matter. As yet, however, they have been unable to perfect their method so that it can be universally copied.

A St. Louis scientist of national reputation declared the results obtained at Freiburg of the highest importance. He pointed out, however, that there is danger in the public becoming too optimistic over the success of the experiments. The results thus far achieved have been brought about by the use of drugs, dangerous and uncertain within themselves. In the hands of inexperienced practitioners or employed under unpropitious circumstances, the St. Louisan intimated, these drugs might be extremely harmful. Yet there is cheer enough in the mere fact that the problems are being worked out, with fair promise of ultimate success.

The medical world has long sought an anesthetic which would destroy consciousness of pain and yet would not interfere with muscular action. The difficulty with most of the known drugs is that they could accomplish neither result without the other. Yet to destroy a woman's power of muscular action would make natural birth impossible.

The drugs with which the Freiburg scientists, Dr. Bernhardt Kroenig and Dr. Karl Gauss, have accomplished the desired results are scopolamin and morphium, the former being the more important. Neither is new to scientists, although scopolamin has been used with such variable results that most careful practitioners have been afraid to employ it.

The combination as used at the German institution results in a sort of semi-consciousness which has been named the "daemmerschlaf," or "twilight sleep." As the period of labor draws on, the woman takes several injections. Then she falls into a kind of slumber, from which she awakens with her baby, fully dressed, in her arms. With the blotting out of pain there has been in her ordeal no relaxation of muscular energy.

The method has been employed at Freiburg in 5000 cases. Analyses of the records of 3600 of these have shown that the method has not caused a single death and is not in any way injurious either to mother or baby, but that, on the contrary, it has often made it unnecessary to resort to obstetrical forceps or other surgical aids in cases wherein these things would have been otherwise required.

It is necessary, however, for the mother to put herself in the care of the experts for some time before the event. From the time she enters the institution, she is under constant observation. Either Dr. Kroenig, Dr. Gauss or one of their specially trained assistants is always at her side. This is one of the things which makes the method impossible for the general practitioner, who cannot give anything like the requisite time to each individual case.

From the moment the first injection is given the patient must receive the closest attention. The action of scopolamin is so variable that it will not affect two persons exactly alike and will not affect the same person in the same way on two separate occasions. The dosage must be changed with such delicacy as not to produce too deep a sleep or a sleep not deep enough. For if the unconsciousness becomes too profound, the muscular action is paralyzed—the most essential thing to be avoided in these cases.

In the next place, the quality of the scopolamin is of itself tremendously important. It deteriorates very rapidly and becomes useless at the slightest change. It must be kept in a particular kind of jar and must be distilled with infinite care. It is, therefore, to be handled only by experts until such time as it can be prepared and kept with such constancy as to avoid the danger of mistakes.

Its previous surgical tryout has been disappointing from these very causes. It is still used by some physicians as a preliminary for chloroform and ether anesthesia, and has been recommended as a substitute for atropine for dilating the pupil of the eye. Recently Prof. Straub of the Freiburg University has discovered a method for preserving it in solution, and if this method comes up to expectation, many of the objections to the drug will be obviated.

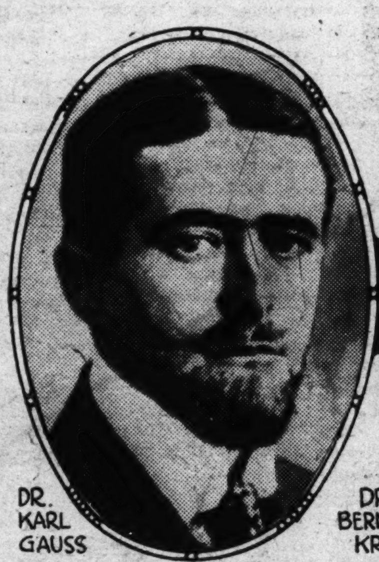
In a recent article in McClure's Magazine, Marguerite Tracy and Constance Leupp told of the experiences of many mothers who had gone to Freiburg for the treatment. Without a single exception, the authors declare, these women say they will go there again whenever occasion arises and they will advise their friends to go.

One story is told of a Scotch noblewoman who went to Freiburg, although the tradition of her house for centuries was that the heir must be born within his own castle. Her baby is a beautiful child and so pleased was she that she returned to Freiburg for her second baby.

One American wife, whose first child came to her there, returned for her second and third.

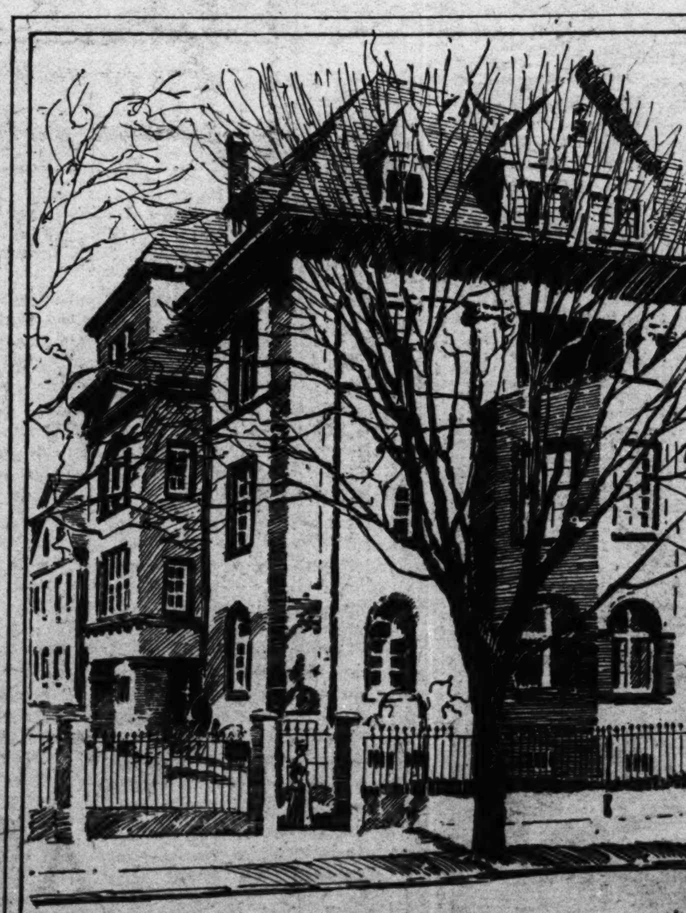
An American mother at Freiburg who was up and around the day of the baby's arrival.

Another American woman describes the pleasant surroundings of the hospital. Indeed, one of the requisites for the method is quietness and rest, and for this reason the rooms are tinted in subdued shades and there is no superfluous noise. These conditions cannot be duplicated in large hospitals, yet without them it is doubted that the "twilight sleep" can be obtained.



DR. KARL GAUSS

DR. BERNHARDT KRÖNIG



The Frauenklinik at Freiburg where "Twilight Sleep" was perfected for maternity purposes.

Each patient receives considerable attention from Drs. Kroenig and Gauss themselves. Although they are left to the care of competent nurses and assistants, in the preparation period, one of the experts is sure to be on hand as confinement approaches. The doctors are unwilling to delegate the delicate manipulation of their drugs to other hands.

Memory tests are used almost exclusively in determining when the proper dosage has been administered. In about 45 minutes after the first injection it begins to take effect. The patient is in a quiet room and begins to fall into a light sleep. The second injection is given in about an hour. Then begin the tests for amnesia.

Early in the process some easily identified article is casually shown to the patient. After the second injection it is shown to her again and she is asked if she has seen it before. Usually she has no recollection of it. So long as she has no memory, she has enough of the medicine and no more is given her until she begins to recollect things.

In the McClure article Dr. Kroenig is quoted:

"The [illegible] carrying out of the method demands concentrated attention on the part of the obstetric staff, for the purposes of perfecting our method and for giving it the widest possible application to all classes of the population. We were able, thanks to the Grand Duke of Baden, to triple the obstetric staff in the delivery room. I mention this intentionally, because I am of the opinion that, especially in hospitals with a very large number of cases, our procedure can be employed with any prospect of success only when a complete administrative reorganization has been effected in the assignment of duty in the delivery ward. If, as is the case in large hospitals, the medical man on observation duty is relieved every 12 hours, the colleague who comes on duty will not be sufficiently well informed as to the condition of the various patients in labor. Here failure was certain.

"I consequently do not consider it the result of chance that it is precisely in hospitals with a smaller number of cases that our method had been adopted. In large hospitals, with many thousands of births a year, as in the cases of the large hospitals in Berlin and Dresden, our procedure has proved a total failure.

"This is easier to understand when we remember that the surroundings of the patient have an importance which we should not underestimate for the success of the method. Sense impressions, loud noises, bright light, etc., considerably disturb the half-consciousness. When six or seven parturient patients lie side by side in one ward, it is obviously impossible to obtain an even fairly effective semi-consciousness. This makes itself felt even with the small number of patients that we have (a yearly average of three births a day). The number of cases in which we obtain loss of memory, or amnesia, is in Freiburg far smaller in those deliveries which occur in the general ward than in the case of patients treated in our private wards, where they lie in a separate room, protected as far as possible from all impressions of sight and hearing."

ocking Barbarities of Balkan Conflict
Revealed by International Investigators

Bulgarians, most merciful, but even they descended to terrible outrages in reprisal for revolting deeds committed by Turk, Serb, Greek and Montenegrin ❧ Entire villages of non-combatants exterminated, including women and babies . . .

Atrocities Reported by Balkan Commission of Inquiry

WITNESSES testified to the incredible maltreatment by Greek and Turkish soldiers of girls and women between the ages of 9 and 90.

Women of Varna saw a Turkish soldier transfix a baby on his bayonet and carry it in triumph across the village.

A Servian prisoner was thrown up in the air with cries of "Hurrah" and caught on bayonets.

A Servian soldier was put on a spit and grilled.

Jivoine Milochevits and Boiidar Savits had their tongues cut out and chopped in pieces because they had no money to buy back their freedom.

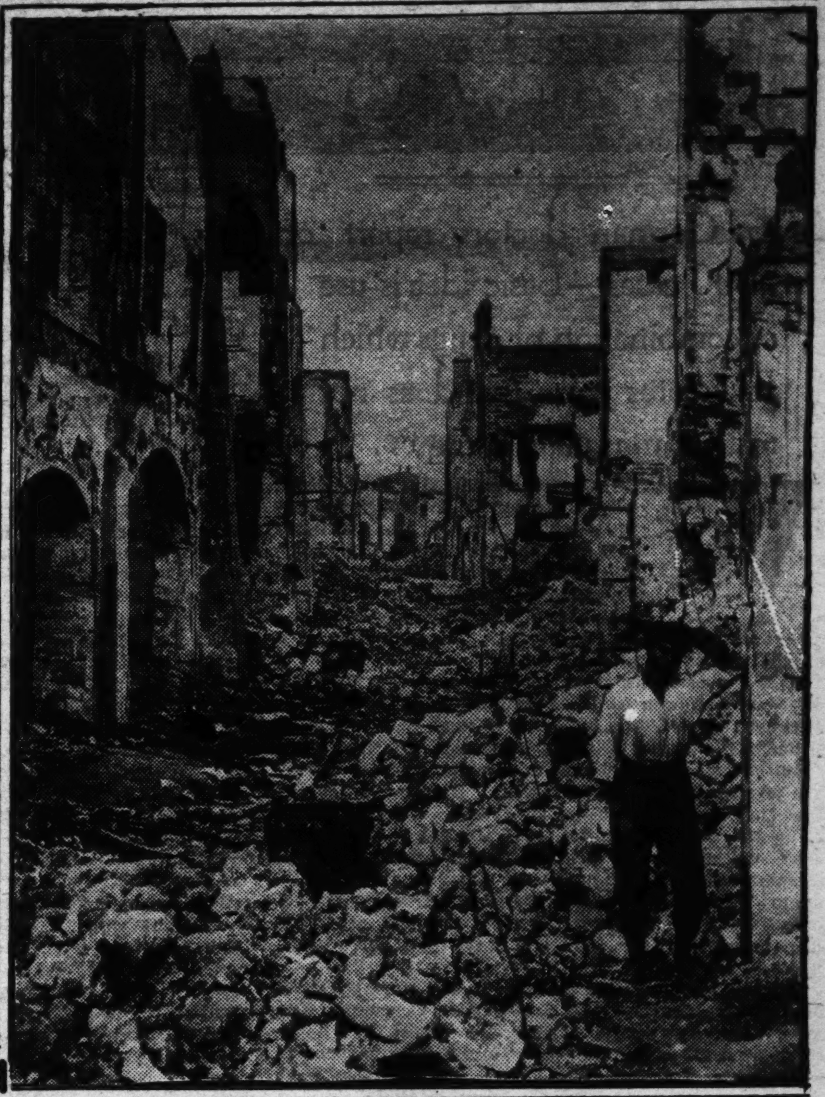
At Kalimanska Tchonka the wounded left at the village of Doulitsa had their noses and ears cut, eyes gouged out and hands cut off.

At the positions between Chobe and Topkikav mutilated corpses were found, some with the eyes gouged out, others with ears and noses cut; the mouth torn from ear to ear; disemboweled, etc.

Near the village of Dragovo a Servian corpse was fastened to a pillar with iron bands and roasted.

A Bulgarian woman testified that at Haskovo she saw the Greeks sprinkle her husband and some other men with petrol and then burn them. Other women confirmed this story, and added that the number of victims who perished in this way was 23.

A woman of Haskovo told how her little child was thrown up in the air by a Turkish soldier, who caught it on the point of his bayonet.



War's devastation—Scene in Kirk-Killiseh after it was stormed and wrecked by Bulgarian troops.

THE strangest war correspondents in history—whose purpose was not to glorify war and military genius, but to collect from the horrors of armed conflict evidence upon which to base the most powerful of sermons for peace—have just made public a report upon the war between the Balkan States and Turkey, and the strife which followed between the Greeks and Servians on one side and the Bulgarians on the other. They present unmistakable proofs that all of the Balkan allies, and particularly the Greeks, were guilty of atrocities so fiendish as to stagger the conscience of mankind.

The report is published by the Balkan Commission of Inquiry of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Notable Americans and Europeans were the investigators.

Stabbing through the glamor with which the imagination tends to invest warfare, it shows that the victorious allies were followed in their own countries not only by desolation and wretchedness, but by a social and moral disintegration which defies portrayal. This chaos, which leads the commission to the opinion that in the Balkan States "under present conditions, the case seems well nigh hopeless," is ascribed to the unspeakable barbarities practiced by the contending forces.

The ghastly fact is pointed out that these southern races, unlike northern peoples, wage war not of conquest, but of extermination. The idea of the Balkan warrior, be he Turk, Bulgar, Serb, Greek or Montenegrin, is not only the defeat and capture of his enemy, but also his death, the murder of his family, the looting of his house and property and their destruction, so that not a vestige remains—in short, the extinction of the race. This was the principle (if it be called a principle) which the commission finds was followed by all of the belligerents, excepting, in some cases, the Bulgarians.

Official denials have been issued by the sovereigns of the various States of the charges of barbarities brought against their nations by their foes. The commission has proved that the accusations were not only true, but that they erred on the side of understatement.

The report, which contains seven chapters and a preface by Nicholas Murray Butler, is the work of the following members of the commission: Dr. Josef Redlich, professor of public law in the University of Vienna, Austria; Baron d'Estournelles de Constant and M. Justin Codart, lawyer and member of the Chamber of Deputies, of France; Dr. Walther Schucking, professor of law at the University of Marburg, Germany; Francis W. Hirst, editor of The Economist, and Dr. H. N. Brailsford, journalist, of Great Britain; Prof. Paul Milioukov, member of the Russian Douma, and Dr. Samuel T. "There is no clause in international law applicable to land war and to the treatment of the wounded which was not violated to a greater or less extent by all the belligerents," declares the report.

The mail bags of the Nineteenth Greek Infantry were captured by the Bulgarians at Dobrinichte on the eve of the armistice, and were taken to Sofia and translated. "These letters require no commentary," says the commission, and publishes the following extracts, each from a separate letter:

"We picked out their eyes (five Bulgarian prisoners) while they were still alive."

"By order of the King, we are setting fire to all the Bulgarian villages, because the Bulgarians burned the beautiful town of Serres, Nigrita and several Greek villages. We have shown ourselves far more cruel than the Bulgarians."

"Here we are burning the villages and killing the Bulgarians, both women and children."

"We took only a few (prisoners) and these were killed, for such are the orders we have received."

"We have to burn the villages—such is the order—slaughter the young people and spare only the old people and the children."

"What is done to the Bulgarians is indescribable, also to the Bulgarian peasants. It was a butchery. There is not a Bulgarian town or village but is burned."

"We massacre all of the Bulgarians who fall into our hands and burn the villages."

"Of the 12,000 prisoners we took at Nigrita, only 41 remain in the prisons and everywhere we have been we have not left a single root of this race."

"The Greek army sets fire to all the villages where there are Bulgarians and massacres all it meets."

"These letters," the commission states, "relieve us of the task of summing up the evidence." From Kukush to the Bulgarian frontier the Greek army devastated the villages, violated the women and slaughtered the non-combatants.

To match these extracts, the report quotes a letter written by a Servian soldier to a friend:

"I have no time to write you at length, but can tell you of the appalling things going on here. I may say that Liouma, an Albanian region along the river of the same name, no longer exists. There is nothing but corpses, dust and ashes. There are villages of 100, 150, 200 houses where there is no longer a single man, literally not one. We collect them in bodies of 40 to 50 and then we pierce them through with the bayonets to the last man."

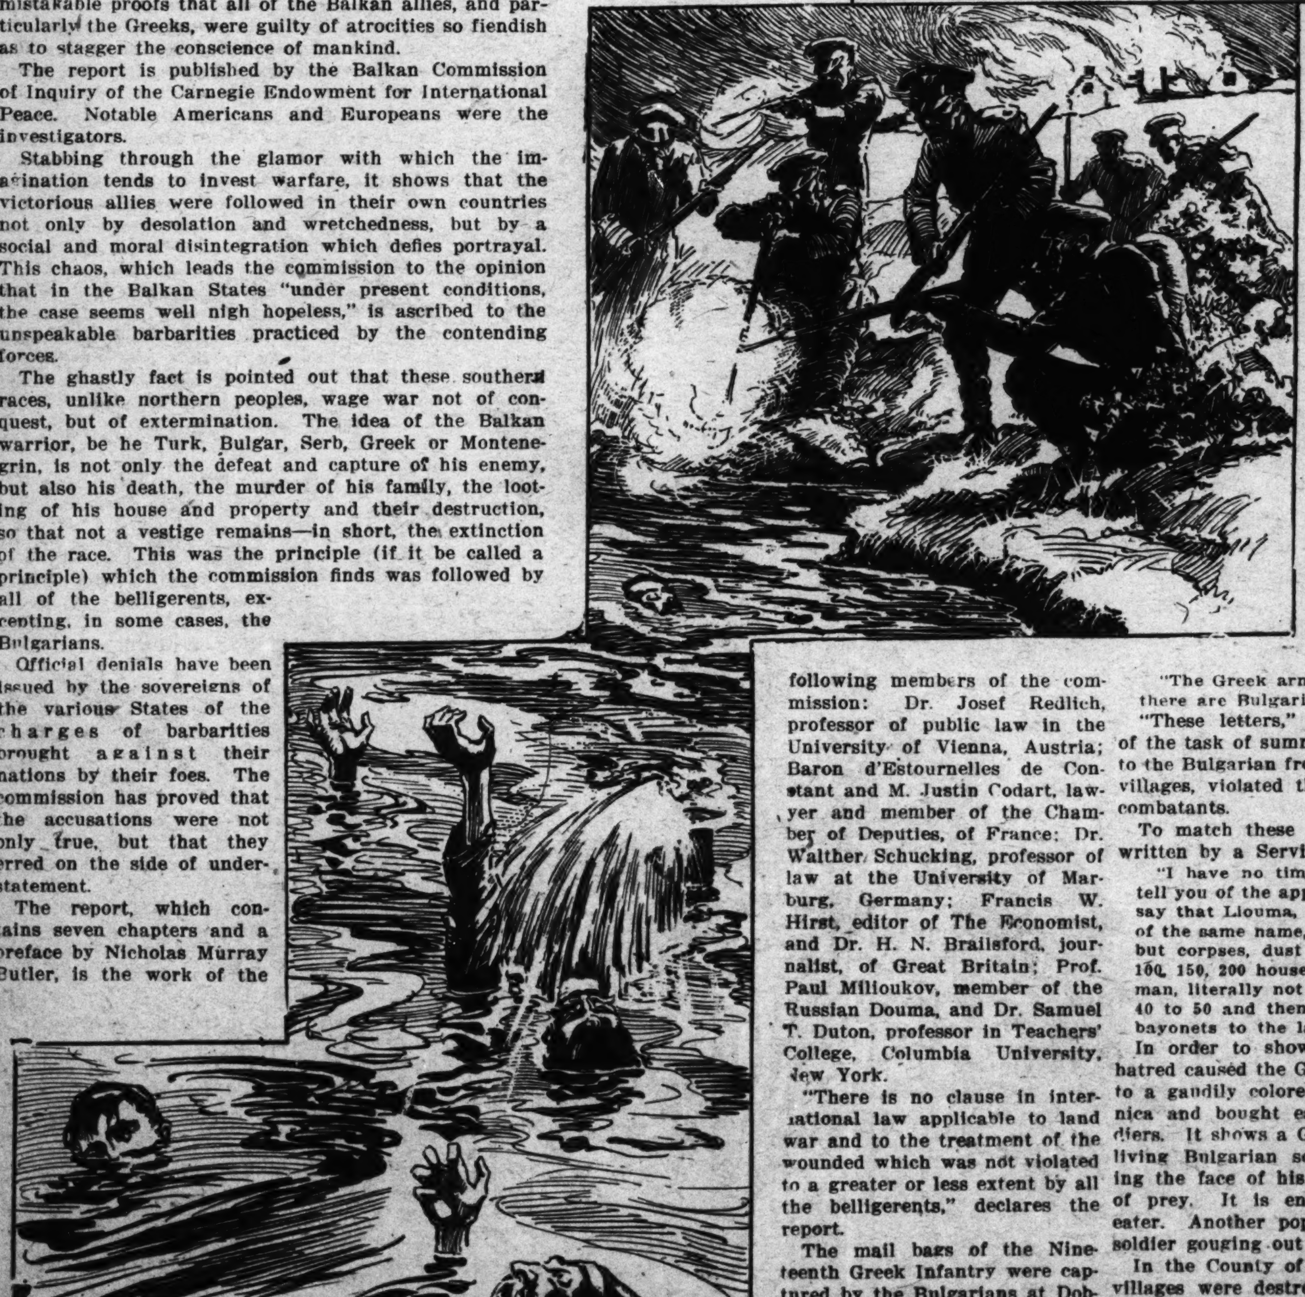
In order to show to what depths of brutality race hatred caused the Greeks to sink, the commission points to a gaudily colored poster seen in the strets of Salonica and bought eagerly by the returning Greek soldiers. It shows a Greek evzone (highlander) holding a living Bulgarian soldier with both hands and gnawing the face of his victim with his teeth like a beast of prey. It is entitled "Bulgarophagos," or Bulgar-eater. Another popular battle picture shows a Greek soldier gouging out the eyes of a living Bulgarian.

In the County of Kukush no less than 40 Bulgarian villages were destroyed. Out of the mass of evidence gathered concerning the devastation of this district the following may be taken as an example:

"Mito Kolev is an intelligent boy of 14 who comes from the Bulgarian village Cavaliants, in the Kukush district. He fled with most of his neighbors in the first alarm after the Bulgarian defeat at Kukush, but returned the next day to fetch his mother, who had remained behind. Outside the village a Greek trooper fired at him, but missed him. The lad had the wit to feign death. As he lay on the ground his mother was shot and killed by the same cavalryman.

"He saw another lad killed, and the same trooper went in pursuit of a crippled girl. Of her fate Mito knew nothing, but another witness chanced to see the corpse of this girl.

"The material corroboration of this



The prisoners were pushed into the river and soldiers on the bank fired at them whenever a head appeared.

Mito still bears evidence of his wounds—a sabre cut which all but killed him, and a slight revolver wound. A shot wound may be accidental, but a sabre wound can only be given deliberately and at close quarters. A trooper who wounds an unarmed boy with a sword cannot plead error.

"Of this particular squad of Greek cavalry it is not too much to say that they were slaughtering Bulgarian peasants at sight, and they spared neither women nor children."

The occupation of Macedonia by Greeks and Servians fostered the germs of discord among the Balkan allies which had not been stifled by treaties, the terms of which were in continual dispute. Alleged Bulgarian violations of treaties and Servian transgressions, followed by mutual demands for concessions and extensions of frontier, precipitated a war between the allies which for wanton cruelty and wholesale demolition is almost unparalleled.

The second chapter of the report under the heading of "The War and the Non-Combatant Population," is a recital of these horrors. In a review of the acts committed by the Greeks against the Macedonian Moslems, the commission had at its disposal documents of undoubted veracity which reported frightful massacres and a systematic proscription of Moslems, which it found typical of the Greeks' murderous practices.

"Our document," says the report, "gives particulars, village by village, of the Moslems who were killed and robbed. Our experience shows that lists of this kind in the Balkans are usually accurate. In the villages all these excesses seem to have been the work of local Greek bands. The most active of these bands was led by a priest and a warlike grocer who was a member of the bishop's council. The Turks indeed accused the bishop of directing all these atrocities. The burning of villages and the exodus of the defeated population is a normal incident. What they have suffered themselves they inflict on others."

One band, under a certain Doncheff, a notorious guerrilla chief, was said to have burned 345 Turkish houses in one day, shut up the men in mosques and burned them alive or shot them as they attempted to escape. A volunteer of the Macedonian Legion, who convinced the commission of his reliability, stated that while marching through Gumuljine he saw, among 50 murdered Bulgarian peasants, the dead body of a woman hanging from a tree and another (with a young baby) on the ground with their eyes gouged out.

Evidence gathered regarding the village of Akanjeli satisfied the commission that, although the village submitted from the first, it was sacked and burned; the Greek troops gave themselves up openly to a debauch of lust; and that many of the peasants were killed wantonly and without provocation. The mass of evidence, according to the report, goes to show that there was nothing singular in the cases which the commission itself investigated.

In a subsequent chapter there is an exposure of the atrocities committed at Adrianople by the Bulgarians and reprisals by Turks. The recital of murder, massacre, torture, pillage, rape and unspeakable cruelties is continued. Instances include the drowning of 45 Turks at Kavagatch by Bulgarians and the murder of 300 people in and about Rodosto as a Turkish reprisal. A Greek report states that the Turkish army killed, burned and dispersed a total population of 15,960 in the Malgara district.

That the cruelties practiced by the Bulgarians were fewer and less revolting than those perpetrated by the Turks, the Greeks and the Servians is the commission's conclusion. It produces orders issued to the Bulgarian army by Gen. Savoff, the Commander-in-Chief, and King Ferdinand himself, to show that a legitimate attempt was made to prevent atrocities. It did not follow that these orders were always obeyed. In fact, the commission brought home to the Bulgarians responsibility for the massacre of Doxato, the slaughter at Demir Hissar and the burning of Serres.

LETTERS FROM THE LIVING DEAD

Elsa Barker's Picture of the World Beyond the Grave

The author's guaranty of the authenticity of her revelation.

A MOST amazing book which purports to contain a revelation of life after death as told by one in the spirit world, has appeared recently from the pen of Elsa Barker, novelist and poetess of more than mediocre rating. Viewed merely as a work of imagination, the book is fairly entitled to the adjective remarkable. The writer, however, denies that it is a work of imagination. In a letter to the publisher, Mitchell Kennerley, she affirms in the most unequivocal terms that the story of how she came to write the book as told in its printed introduction is true in every respect. The introduction explains that when she was writing she was in a semi-conscious state, so far as her objective mind was concerned, and that she was impelled to write by the mystical power of a distinguished lawyer who had died and who had chosen her as his medium of communnication with the world he had left.

As she explains it, she was seized with an impulse to write one night in Paris. She declares her hand was grasped as if from the outside and she traced a note, which bore the signature X. Then she was reminded that she had frequently spoken to a friend of the lawyer as Mr. X. A few days later she learned that Mr. X had been dead some time when she received the message. She goes on to tell how she continued to receive these automatic messages from his spirit; how she wrote slowly and painfully at first and how, finally, the communication came easy.

The book—it is called "Letters From a Living Dead Man"—is divided into short chapters, each purporting to be one complete communication from Mr. X. The lawyer told of his death, of his reawakening in the spirit land and of his philosophical guidance there by a superior spirit, whom he calls The Teacher.

Whether the book be considered as a genuine revelation or—without impugning the author's honesty—merely the result of unknown psychological instincts it is none the less readable. If it is the former, the Spiritualist, the Theosophist, the Pantheist, the Polytheist, the Catholic, the Protestant, the Buddhist, the nature worshiper and even the Agnostic ought to find comfort in its pages, for something of the theories of all of them herein find justification.

How much credibility ought to be given to the record is a matter for individual decision. The world really understands little of metaphysics. It has long been out of fashion to brand as fakers those who profess to have come in contact, however slight, with the supernatural. Those who do not believe in spiritualistic communications sometimes ascribe these phenomena to telepathy, or else frankly say they do not know anything about it, but suppose it to be some undiscovered matter of psychology.

Many of those who actually believe in automatic writing, say that the communicated messages are filtered through the intellect of the receiver and naturally receive the impress of his mentality. In connection with this theory, it is interesting to remember that Miss Barker has strong predilections toward theosophy.

As described by Mr. X, the immediate hereafter is really an eternity of ascending planes, pretty much as Dante conceived it in the Divine Comedy. That is to says, there are several heavens, many hells, purgatories, and a great common terrain which is none of these, but is a sort of general life-after-death. The inference is that the future is pretty much as the mind of each individual conceives it, although all alike are subject to a common law of rhythm.

Eternity is described in other words as a circle. One does not spend all of it in any one place, but progresses from one arc to another, often returning to the arc from which he came. Life on earth is not merely once for an individual, but many times, the inference being that he lives again and again until his soul has reached such a growth that it may pass into some higher stage where there shall no longer be any need of a return to the earth.

Mr. X. himself does not give any coherent explanation of who or what God is. He finds, however, that the heavens are peopled with many gods. There is a sort of celestial hierarchy, beginning with great souls made perfect and growing into superior beings which are called Masters. Of these the chief, perhaps, is the Man of Galilee. Mr. X declares he has met Jesus and tells of the bliss of the saintly worshippers who, in their paradise, bow down perpetually before Him and the symbolical lamb he holds in his arms. He does not, however, go into any details of the meeting.

As to some of the lesser deities, Mr. X declares they are really those whom modern humanity has come to consider myths. They existed first and man became conscious of them through his own spiritual affinities, all the materialists say to the contrary notwithstanding. He declares that persons who have scoffed at the old folk tales of this god and that were themselves deluded, as the gods actually exist and in times have visited the earth.

A man can become a god, he explains, by developing what he calls god-consciousness. Mr. X affirms that, accompanied by The Teacher, he has stood face to face with some of the older gods. Without directly saying so, he leaves the inference that one of them was Neptune. He intimates that the various works of nature have been parceled out among the gods capable of performing them. There are planetary and household gods, too, he is informed, although he has not come in contact with any of them.

There is at least one goddess of whom he speaks often as the Beautiful Being. She is an inexpressibly radiant and joyful soul, whose chief mission seems to bring happiness to the world. Mr. X quotes several of her songs or rather poems, which, in form and matter, are strongly reminiscent of the poetry of Oriental antiquity.

Mr. X tells of reading in the celestial library a book by Paracelsus, who, it will be remembered, was a Swiss, chief of the alchemists, and died in 1541. His book was a treatise on spirits, classifying them as three in kind, human, angelic and elemental. Human spirits are those who have had the experience of life in human form. Elemental spirits are those who have more or less developed self-consciousness. Angelic spirits are spirits of high order which have not had and probably will not have earthly experience.

There is another being whose introduction into the book somehow suggests the peri of the ancient Persian mythology—one of those unfortunate descendants of the fallen angels such as the one of whom the poet Moore has written an immortal poem. Mr. X calls her a sylph. She is a sort of being which, for want of a soul, can never taste the joys of paradise or even live on earth. She has voluntarily become a messenger of a false Paris magician, who has promised her he will help her to a soul—a promise which, The Teacher points out, the magician is in no way able to fulfill.

The human spirits who have passed to the beyond are all waiting out a greater or less period before they can be born again on earth. Some of them do not wish to go back until they are finally compelled to. Others are eager for an immediate return. One such is the boy, Lionel, who, having experimented in the celestial pattern shop, is anxious to be born again so he can perfect a great invention. Mr. X draws a circle around the pattern of this invention, this being a potent charm that will make it impossible to forestall Lionel in its production.

The boy chooses his own parents. He discovers that a former teacher is about to be married to a brilliant young inventor. This pair suit Lionel's ideal and he soon leaves the spirit land to reappear on the earth as their offspring.

Mr. X's accounts of the immediate transition into the hereafter are not always convincing. The spirit entities have pretty much the same general form as they bore on earth, but are very much lighter. In one place he tells of a woman who weighed 130 pounds on earth but only a milligram in spirit land. He does not tell, however, whether that is an average ratio. The spirits are able to propel themselves to great distance at great ease.

After the first transition, Mr. X says, many persons are morbidly interested in their earth bodies and some of them, with utmost anguish, watch it disintegrate. Afterwards the wiser spirits are able to visit familiar scenes again. They are invisible to human eyes, although they are perceptible to dogs and cats—a theory long held by the superstitious of this earth.

Another old superstition is justified, if the statement of Mr. X is true, that the spirit bodies leave no shadows. Indeed, the bodies are self luminous, although their light is so submerged by the "cruder light of the sun" that they cannot see in daylight and consequently sleep while the sun is shining on the earth.

Most of the spirits in the hereafter pass their time in the pursuits that pleased them on earth. Mr. X tells of one woman whom he names "an empty china cup," because she couldn't get it into her head that anything but herself really mattered. She didn't enjoy the life beyond because it was a land of realized ideals. The intimation is that she had no ideals to start with.

Mr. X tells of one problem that puzzled him. There came to him one day two women and a man. The man had married the second woman after the first one died and now both claimed him. Mr. X hit upon the happy solution of Jesus, who, when a similar problem was put to him by Saducees, declared that in heaven there was neither marriage nor giving in marriage. The women concluded to share the husband equally between them. This was not an unmixed blessing for the man, Mr. X make it appear, as he had recollections of a boyhood sweetheart for whom he cared more than for either of his wives, but whom he did not feel free to seek.

Miss Barker's Biography

ELSA BARKER, author of "Letters From a Living Dead Man," is unmarried and lives in New York City. She was born in Vermont. She began her career as a shorthand reporter and then became a newspaper writer. In 1901 she was an associate editor of the Consolidated Encyclopedic Library. In 1904-5, at the time when most of her poems were published, she was a lecturer for the New York Board of Education. In 1909-10 she was on the editorial staff of Hampton's magazine. Her chief novel was "The Son of Mary Bethel," printed in 1909. It is a story of the return of Christ, His life in America and death at the hands of a mob. In 1911 she published a volume of stories for children. Her labor play, "The Scab," was produced in the season of 1904-'05. She has spent much time in Europe.

Choice of Old-Fashioned Costumes in Which to Deck Feminine Subjects Seems to Show That Painters, as Connoisseurs of Beauty, Believe New Styles Are Without Artistic Merit.

PARIS being the capital of feminine style, it is probably the severest possible stricture upon the new extreme modes of woman's dress that they are conspicuous for their absence in the legion of paintings of women exhibited in the art salons held there this year.

The painters, as connoisseurs of beauty, have one and all, with the exception of portraiture, ignored the present styles and harked back to the simpler and quieter costumes of a less obstreperous day. They have declined to set off their heroines by draping them in slit skirts, or panniers, minarets and balloon gowns. The inference is that they consider these to be eccentricities of attire which are unfitted for artistic treatment. Occurring, as it does in Paris, where women's styles are supposed to originate, this attitude of the professional students of beauty is the most unkindest cut of all.

Only one painter seems to have taken any notice of the extreme modes, and he did so only to hold them up to ridicule. He is Edouard Zier, whose picture, "Nature et Artifice," was exhibited at the salon of the Societie des Artistes Francais. It shows two women, one frankly nude, who represents nature, and the other, representing artificiality, who also displays as extensive a view of her charms as can be revealed by a skirt slit higher than the knee and a waist which is all but transparent. While the natural woman stands graceful and erect, her sophisticated sister has contorted herself into the fashionable posture of a letter S, with her head and knees thrust out in advance of the remainder of her figure. The contrast is carried out in the faces, that of one having an expression of sweetness and intelligence, and the other wearing a false and shallow simper. A little Cupid, at the latter's feet, is looking up at her in hearty amazement, as if wondering what sort of a rara avis this may be.

On the other hand, there are such paintings as Victor Gilbert's "Les Dernieres Roses," the two young women in which are clad in the simplest of white dresses, without a hint of pannier or slit. Such, likewise, is the costume of the pensive young girl in L. A. Tessier's "Reflets." Here is particularly noticeable the amplitude of her long skirt, in which the feet have room for movement without the outlet of a slit.

In so gorgeous a picture as "Le Chale Rouge," by H. Richer, the subejct would have permitted the painter, had he thought it artistically feasible, to indulge in bold extremes of costume. A sumptuous young woman, against a sultry background of scarlet flowers, is admiring a red shawl which she has draped about her body. But one views her gown in vain for any hint of modern dressmaking.

Even in E. Gelhay's "Le Roman-Reviere," with its picture of a young girl of today, the flowing draperies of the skirt have nothing in common with the sheathes in which young women of 1914 rejoice to encase themselves. In "Les Orasions," by E. Mavence, the artist has preferred to dress his girls in a provincial costume rather than such as can b into St. Lou Sunday mor

St. Louis

"Broadhead caught his manacled hand and shouted greetings. The slaves and guards smiled at the meeting, glad in the gladness of the white and yellow youths."

FROM the Jackson's hurricane roof James Broadhead saw a hundred spirals of smoke rising from the stone chimneys of St. Louis. The sun was coming up out of Illinois, painting the clutter of stone houses above the wharf a delicate pink, softening harsh lines and giving the scene the unreal beauty of mirage. He gazed at the city eagerly, over the long line of steamboats nosed into the bank, and was glad that here his long journey came to an end. He had been two months on his way from Virginia—long stretches of riding scarce-marked trails over the mountains of his native State, and through the wilderness of Kentucky, broken by visits to kin and friends of his family which still remembered and kept in touch with the pioneers. He was determined to begin his career in the most western American city which, it had been reported to him, must be the gateway to the greater West. On the lower deck were his negro slave and two horses that bore them on the long wilderness journey. In the negro's charge were bundles of clothing and, in Broadhead's pockets, were letters of introduction, a letter of credit for $150 and 12 Spanish milled dollars. This was his fortune until St. Louis should enlarge it in recognition of his worth. The Jackson nosed in between two steamboats and negroes sprang ashore carrying the headline. Capt. Bolivar bellowed an order, took a fresh chew of fine-cut tobacco, and called to the young man:

"Come on, Bub, we'll be getting uptown." They stepped from deck to deck of close-packed steamboats and, crossing a barge, walked down a gangplank to the narrow stone roadway called the Levee. Broadhead forgot his slave and followed the Captain up the steep bank into the narrow and steeper streets of St. Louis, his eyes bright and quick to see the busy city. All his life he had known country scenes and Lee's Courthouse—a rambling village—had been his largest city. Here at the end of his westward journey he found a metropolis that seemed to equal his fancies of Boston and Philadelphia.

It was a long, toilsome journey up to Fourth street and many times the Captain and Broadhead were compelled to jump off the road into the weeds as racing mules attached to two-wheel drays and driven by black charioteers roared down the hill to the Levee.

At the top of the hill Broadhead stopped involuntarily. On his left was the Courthouse, as we see it today, and on his right the first Planters' House, a block long four-story barrack of brick—raw as a new wound but gigantic to the stranger's eye. Down the road between the Courthouse and Planters' a file of chained black men and black women walked, captained by coatless slouch-hatted men who bore sticks of hickory. The file turned south at Fourth street and halted before the east door of the Courthouse.

"Big sale today," the Captain said. "Why, Bub, what's the matter?"

For Broadhead was staring excitedly at the chained group of slaves.

"There's Nipper," cried the young man. "Dad sold him South one day when he was mad with Nip's trifling ways. Why, Captain, we were raised together."

A yellow boy, short and slight, was waving frantically at Broadhead, who hurried toward him, caught his manacled hand and, slapping his back, shouted greetings. The slaves and guards smiled at the meeting, sensing its story and glad in the gladness of the white and yellow youths.

"Oh, Mas' Jim," cried Nipper, "is you goin' to buy me back?"

"No, Nip, I can't do that. I wish to the Lord I could, but I haven't enough money. They'll hold you at $300, at least, and I haven't got but half that in the world."

"No, no, Mas' Jim. They sell me cheap. I the no countest nigger they got. I mighty disobedient. I never do nothin' they tells me. I never learn to do no work. I little an' weak. You know how triflin' I is. You tell 'em I worst nigger your father got. He only get hundred dollars for me when he sell me South. I done knife six niggers an' I kill one. I just awful!"

"Is he as bad as that?" asked the Captain, surreptitionsly nudging Broadhead.

The young man's smile vanished and he said very soberly: "He is telling as near to the Gospel truth as he knows."

"Then I'll buy him. I got a blue mule that needs breaking and he's the only sort of boy I dare waste in that mule's company. Come on now and let's get breakfast at the Planters' House. It'll be an hour before the sale."

It was only such a breakfast as was common to those days, when the menu of American hotels in the West was the same for breakfast, dinner and supper. Great latters of game in its season, or chicken when there carried down the long table by intervals along its length. Biscuits were served by the more active table from the back kitchen with constant were eggs and bacon for those who desired them, but the game, potatoes and hot bread furnished the staple food of the many.

As the Captain and Broadhead emerged from the long dining room into the great court-like office they heard the sound of a blow and a blue-black man staggered and fell across their path. A tall blond, florid man, whose great golden mustache curled in evidence of recent barbering, sprang into view from behind a pillar and, swearing mightily, kicked the prostrate negro viciously.

"Why, Col. Norwood, how do you do?" said Capt. Bolivar ignoring the chastisement.

The blond man's anger-contorted face was in a moment smiling.

"Cap! By all that's great. I didn't know the Jackson was in. Come have a drink."

No one had given any heed to the negro who still lay on the floor and, Broadhead having been introduced, they walked toward the barroom. At its door stood a man who scarcely lifted his crown above the five-foot mark. One would judge his weight at close to 125 pounds. He was dressed in drab homespun and wore a rude fur cap, from which most of the fur was gone. He barred the way to the barroom silently.

"I beg your pardon," said Col. Norwood formally, indicating his desire to pass.

"I was hoping you would," said the little man. "What my nigger do to you to make you hit him?" His voice was soft as a girl's and Broadhead thrilled, though he could not have told why.

Norwood's back stiffened. "That your nigger? Well, sir, you better learn him with a blacksnake before you bring him to town again."

"I'm asking you what made you hit him?" said the little man in his gentle voice. His marksman's blue eye was boring into Norwood, but his face smiled.

"What made me hit him?" blustered Norwood. "Why, sir, he was in my way, sir, and I naturally knocked him out of it."

"Then he didn't do nothing to you." The little man stepped closed to Norwood and saying: "I don't allow that," slapped the Colonel's cheek.

In a lightning flash Norwood had drawn his revolver, the little man's extended hand had miraculously acquired a revolver and both men had been seized by their friends.

Broadhead's senses had scarcely time to appreciate all this before the combatants were released by their friends on a silently given parole. As if nothing had occurred Col. Norwood and Capt. Bolivar walked into the bar and Broadhead followed. As they edged into a space along the bar, that was as crowded as the nosed-in line of steamboats at the river's bank, Broadhead noted that each right hip pocket in the line bulged significantly. Each man took his straight and few had recourse to the water pitcher.

Capt. Bolivar excused himself after the first drink and went out into the office. He returned in a few moments and said:

"Davy Daniels is his name, Col. Norwood. He's from Tennessee, and he says he'll shoot it out with you in the lot after the auction or ride to Chouteau's Pond before sunset. Mr. Chard is acting for him."

"Did you tell him the lot, Capt. Bolivar?"

"I did, sir."

"Thank you, sir. Will you oblige me by taking a drink, sir?"

Capt. Bolivar took a drink and the trio crossed the street to the Courthouse, where the auction was beginning.

"My string," said Col. Norwood, indicating the group of slaves who were to be sold at auction. "Kind-a overbought myself thinking I'd break out some new land down in Ste. Francois. Been eating their heads off all winter and getting lazier and more trifling all the time. See that little yellow boy? Won him in a game with Maj. Reynolds and, sir, that was the unluckiest game of cards I ever play."

"Looks like a bad nigger," said the Captain. "Looks like good meat for my blue mule, though. When you going to put him up?"

Col. Norwood laughed amiably. "Go 'way, Captain. You don't want that nigger."

"But I do, sir. That's just the kind of nigger I want. He's bound to be cheap and if he breaks the mule I win; if the mule gets him I lose little. How much you think he ought to bring?"

"Why, Captain, if you're set on him I tell you what. Let's pitch the shoes for the nigger against $500?"

"Where's the shoes?" asked the Captain.

Norwood ordered Nipper withheld from the sale and led the way to a worn grassless plot across Market street from the Courthouse. There stood the pegs, hung with horse shoes for the delection of litigants and witnesses during intervals of attendance at court.

Broadhead's interest was divided between his anxiety over the outcome of the game and his desire to witness the auctioning of 100 negroes. He had never seen an auction as in his neighborhood few slaves were sold and those who were brought in came from Richmond or Baltimore markets, bought by the planters' brokers. From the pitching ground he could see a slave mount to the auctioneer's side on the high stone balustrade, hear the auctioneer's bellowing announcement of the slave's virtues and the laughter that his wit evoked.

But he turned from that sight and interest to the gamesters. Capt. Bolivar won the first toss, ringing the peg, arousing the plaudits of spectators. Norwood won the second and third and, being over-eager tossed his fourth far beyond the peg, while the Captain's fourth lay against it cosily. Norwood, very much annoyed, calmed himself with strong effort and tossed his last shoe cannily. It hit the peg gently with one heel and wavered in settling while each spectator held his breath hoping or fearing that it would ring; but it wavered away from the ring and lay down a foot distant.

Capt. Bolivar had no vanity to serve and in his mind his desire to win the stake was balanced by his inclination to gratify his friend's vanity in games of chance. He therefore tossed his last shoe carelessly, yet truly, and saw it fall dead between the peg and the Colonel's shoe. He had won, but he only said:

"Will you oblige me by taking a drink, Col. Norwood?"

They stopped on their way to the bar at the auction and Col. Norwood turned Nipper over to Capt. Bolivar. The yellow youth's eyes were big with inquiry, but he caught a glance from his young master and held his peace, following dutifully and unregarded behind the white gentlemen.

Broadhead, reared as he had been amid lavish hospitality, marveled at the liquor capacity of his friends. He poured little for himself and yet his head buzzed, while in nothing save that their speech might be gentler and their walk softer did the Colonel or Captain show the effect of whisky poured generously.

It was past noon before the crowd swarmed into the bar from the auction, signifying the end of the sale.

"I believe, sir," said Col. Norwood, "that we have a little appointment at this hour. May I ask you, Captain, to retire and make such preparation as you see fit?"

The Captain went about his duties and Broadhead followed Norwood, as silently as the slave, to a pasture lot west of the city jail on Sixth and Chestnut streets. They climbed the rail fence and walked toward a single tree, beneath which Davy Daniels and Mr. Chard were standing. The antagonists raised their hats to each other ceremoniously.

Mr. Chard, a giant black beard, glared at Broadhead who raised his hat to him but clapped it on again quickly and glared in his turn. "You seem to find my appearance unpleasant, sir," he said.

Mr. Chard grunted and turned his back; but at a word from Davy Daniels, heard only by his ear, he turned quickly and raised his hat awkwardly to Broadhead as though the ceremony was unusual to him and distasteful.

Norwood smiled on Broadhead as they walked apart. "I'm glad that courier did the proper thing, young sir; but I am more glad to see that you are a lad of spirit," he said.

When Capt. Bolivar arrived bearing a box of pistols the ceremony of the hats was repeated without flaw and, presently the pistols were loaded and the combatants posted just outside the shadow of the tree. There was no choice of positions as at that hour the sun was high overhead and no objects were in view to distract attention.

Capt. Bolivar was chosen to give the word from the safe shadow. As was customary in such encounters the combatants were given their pistols and placed 20 paces apart. They stood taut for an instant, pistols raised, presenting only the right side of their bodies as targets.

"Fire!" cried Capt. Bolivar.

A single report seeemed to follow the word, but smoke curled up from two pistols.

Davy Daniels jumped slightly and clapped a hand to his thigh.

Col. Norwood lowered his pistol and stood waiting.

"I find, sir," said Daniels in his gentlest voice, "that I owe you an apology. May I ask you to step to me, sir?"

Col. Norwood dropped his pistol and ran forward. "No, sir. Allow me to say, sir, you owe me no apology. But I wish to apologize to you for beating your nigger without your permission. I hope, sir, you are not seriously wounded."

They shook hands warmly and together made an examination of the wounded leg. The ball had cut an ugly hole which bled abundantly. Mr. Chard hrust Norwood aside rudely and applied a tourniquet ove

THE ACE OF HEARTS

A Story of Old St. Louis

"Broadhead caught his manacled hand and shouted greetings. The slaves and guards smiled at the meeting, glad in the gladness of the white and yellow youths."

FROM the Jackson's hurricane roof James Broadhead saw a hundred spirals of smoke rising from the stone chimneys of St. Louis. The sun was coming up out of Illinois, painting the clutter of stone houses above the wharf a delicate pink, softening harsh lines and giving the scene the unreal beauty of mirage. He gazed at the city eagerly, over the long line of steamboats nosed into the bank, and was glad that here his long journey came to an end. He had been two months on his way from Virginia—long stretches of riding scarce-marked trails over the mountains of his native State, and through the wilderness of Kentucky, broken by visits to kin and friends of his family which still remembered and kept in touch with the pioneers. He was determined to begin his career in the most western American city which, it had been reported to him, must be the gateway to the greater West. On the lower deck were his negro slave and two horses that bore them on the long wilderness journey. In the negro's charge were bundles of clothing and, in Broadhead's pockets, were letters of introduction, a letter of credit for $150 and 12 Spanish milled dollars. This was his fortune until St. Louis should enlarge it in recognition of his worth. The Jackson nosed in between two steamboats and negroes sprang ashore carrying the headline. Capt. Bolivar bellowed an order, took a fresh chew of fine-cut tobacco, and called to the young man:

"Come on, Bub, we'll be getting uptown." They stepped from deck to deck of close-packed steamboats and, crossing a barge, walked down a gangplank to the narrow stone roadway called the Levee. Broadhead forgot his slave and followed the Captain up the steep bank into the narrow and steeper streets of St. Louis, his eyes bright and quick to see the busy city. All his life he had known country scenes and Lee's Courthouse—a rambling village—had been his largest city. Here at the end of his westward journey he found a metropolis that seemed to equal his fancies of Boston and Philadelphia.

It was a long, toilsome journey up to Fourth street and many times the Captain and Broadhead were compelled to jump off the road into the weeds as racing mules attached to two-wheel drays and driven by black charioteers roared down the hill to the Levee.

At the top of the hill Broadhead stopped involuntarily. On his left was the Courthouse, as we see it today, and on his right the first Planters' House, a block long four-story barrack of brick—raw as a new wound but gigantic to the stranger's eye. Down the road between the Courthouse and Planters' a file of chained black men and black women walked, captained by coatless slouch-hatted men who bore sticks of hickory. The file turned south at Fourth street and halted before the east door of the Courthouse.

"Big sale today," the Captain said. "Why, Bub, what's the matter?"

For Broadhead was staring excitedly at the chained group of slaves.

"There's Nipper," cried the young man. "Dad sold him South one day when he was mad with Nip's trifling ways. Why, Captain, we were raised together."

A yellow boy, short and slight, was waving frantically at Broadhead, who hurried toward him, caught his manacled hand and, slapping his back, shouted greetings. The slaves and guards smiled at the meeting, sensing its story and glad in the gladness of the white and yellow youths.

"Oh, Mas' Jim," cried Nipper, "is you goin' to buy me back?"

"No, Nip, I can't do that. I wish to the Lord I could, but I haven't enough money. They'll hold you at $300, at least, and I haven't got but half that in the world."

"No, no, Mas' Jim. They sell me cheap. I the no countest nigger they got. I mighty disobedient. I never do nothin' they tells me. I never learn to do no work. I little an' weak. You know how triflin' I is. You tell 'em I worst nigger your father got. He only get hundred dollars for me when he sell me South. I done knife six niggers an' I kill one. I just awful!"

"Is he as bad as that?" asked the Captain, surreptitiously nudging Broadhead.

The young man's smile vanished and he said very soberly: "He is telling as near to the Gospel truth as he knows."

"Then I'll buy him. I got a blue mule that needs breaking and he's the only sort of boy I dare waste in that mule's company. Come on now and let's get breakfast at the Planters' House. It'll be an hour before the sale."

It was only such a breakfast as was common to those days, when the menu of American hotels in the West was the same for breakfast, dinner and supper. Great latters of game in its season, or chicken when there carried down the long table by intervals along its length. Biscuits were served by the more active table rom the back kitchen with constant were eggs and bacon for those who desired them, but the game, potatoes and hot bread furnished the staple food of the many.

As the Captain and Broadhead emerged from the long dining room into the great court-like office they heard the sound of a blow and a blue-black man staggered and fell across their path. A tall blond, florid man, whose great golden mustache curled in evidence of recent barbering, sprang into view from behind a pillar and, swearing mightily, kicked the prostrate negro viciously.

"Why, Col. Norwood, how do you do?" said Capt. Bolivar ignoring the chastisement.

The blond man's anger-contorted face was in a moment smiling.

"Cap! By all that's great. I didn't know the Jackson was in. Come have a drink."

No one had given any heed to the negro who still lay on the floor and, Broadhead having been introduced, they walked toward the barroom. At its door stood a man who scarcely lifted his crown above the five-foot mark. One would judge his weight at close to 125 pounds. He was dressed in drab homespun and wore a rude fur cap, from which most of the fur was gone. He barred the way to the barroom silently.

"I beg your pardon," said Col. Norwood formally, indicating his desire to pass.

"I was hoping you would," said the little man. "What my nigger do to you to make you hit him?" His voice was soft as a girl's and Broadhead thrilled, though he could not have told why.

Norwood's back stiffened. "That your nigger? Well, sir, you better learn him with a blacksnake before you bring him to town again."

"I'm asking you what made you hit him?" said the little man in his gentle voice. His marksman's blue eye was boring into Norwood, but his face smiled.

"What made me hit him?" blustered Norwood. "Why, sir, he was in my way, sir, and I naturally knocked him out of it."

"Then he didn't do nothing to you." The little man stepped closed to Norwood and saying: "I don't allow that," slapped the Colonel's cheek.

In a lightning flash Norwood had drawn his revolver, the little man's extended hand had miraculously acquired a revolver and both men had been seized by their friends.

Broadhead's senses had scarcely time to appreciate all this before the combatants were released by their friends on a silently given parole. As if nothing had occurred Col. Norwood and Capt. Bolivar walked into the bar and Broadhead followed. As they edged into a space along the bar, that was as crowded as the nosed-in line of steamboats at the river's bank, Broadhead noted that each right hip pocket in the line bulged significantly. Each man took his straight and few had recourse to the water pitcher.

Capt. Bolivar excused himself after the first drink and went out into the office. He returned in a few moments and said:

"Davy Daniels is his name, Col. Norwood. He's from Tennessee, and he says he'll shoot it out with you in the lot after the auction or ride to Chouteau's Pond before sunset. Mr. Chard is acting for him."

"Did you tell him the lot, Capt. Bolivar?"

"I did, sir."

"Thank you, sir. Will you oblige me by taking a drink, sir?"

Capt. Bolivar took a drink and the trio crossed the street to the Courthouse, where the auction was beginning.

"My string," said Col. Norwood, indicating the group of slaves who were to be sold at auction. "Kind-a overbought myself thinking I'd break out some new land down in Ste. Francois. Been eating their heads off all winter and getting lazier and more trifling all the time. See that little yellow boy? Won him in a game with Maj. Reynolds and, sir, that was the unluckiest game of cards I ever play."

"Looks like a bad nigger," said the Captain. "Looks like good meat for my blue mule, though. When you going to put him up?"

Col. Norwood laughed amiably. "Go 'way, Captain. You don't want that nigger."

"But I do, sir. That's just the kind of nigger I want. He's bound to be cheap and if he breaks the mule I win; if the mule gets him I lose little. How much you think he ought to bring?"

"Why, Captain, if you're set on him I tell you what. Let's pitch the shoes for the nigger against $500?"

"Where's the shoes?" asked the Captain.

Norwood ordered Nipper withheld from the sale and led the way to a worn grassless plot across Market street from the Courthouse. There stood the pegs, hung with horse shoes for the delection of litigants and witnesses during intervals of attendance at court.

Broadhead's interest was divided between his anxiety over the outcome of the game and his desire to witness the auctioning of 100 negroes. He had never seen an auction as in his neighborhood few slaves were sold and those who were brought in came from Richmond or Baltimore markets, bought by the planters' brokers. From the pitching ground he could see a slave mount to the auctioneer's side on the high stone balustrade, hear the auctioneer's bellowing announcement of the slave's virtues and the laughter that his wit evoked.

But he turned from that sight and interest to the gamesters. Capt. Bolivar won the first toss, ringing the peg, arousing the plaudits of spectators. Norwood won the second and third and, being over-eager tossed his fourth far beyond the peg, while the Captain's fourth lay against it cosily. Norwood, very much annoyed, calmed himself with strong effort and tossed his last shoe cannily. It hit the peg gently with one heel and wavered in settling while each spectator held his breath hoping or fearing that it would ring; but it wavered away from the ring and lay down a foot distant.

Capt. Bolivar had no vanity to serve and in his mind his desire to win the stake was balanced by his inclination to gratify his friend's vanity in games of chance. He therefore tossed his last shoe carelessly, yet truly, and saw it fall dead between the peg and the Colonel's shoe. He had won, but he only said:

"Will you oblige me by taking a drink, Col. Norwood?"

They stopped on their way to the bar at the auction and Col. Norwood turned Nipper over to Capt. Bolivar. The yellow youth's eyes were big with inquiry, but he caught a glance from his young master and held his peace, following dutifully and unregarded behind the white gentlemen.

Broadhead, reared as he had been amid lavish hospitality, marveled at the liquor capacity of his friends. probed the wound none too gently with the pointed end of a dagger which sprang at a touch on a button from a black handle.

He grunted and held to view the gory bullet. With Col. Norwood's kerchief he bound up the wound. Then Nipper and Davy Daniel's blue-black negro were summoned from the road to bear the wounded man to the hotel.

Having disposed of Daniels and been assured of his comfort the Colonel went about his business, conscious of duty well performed.

In the Captain's company Broadhead went about the city, found a lodging in a French boarding house at Second and Market for himself and slave and stabling for his horses hard by.

He supped with the Captain at the Planters' and eagerly accepted that gentleman's invitation to see St. Louis by night. The Captain might have taken his charge to the dances in Frenchtown as the older part of the city lying east of Fourth and south of Elm was called; but he was past the age of dancing and cared only for the excitement of the gambling houses between Chestnut and Locust on Second and Third streets. They went into several places and found them bare of patrons.

At length they arrived at the most ornately furnished of all, Bebe Davrille's parlor; the spider, a mustached and whiskered woman of great girth was surrounded by flies from the steamboats—officers and passengers. Her game was a sort of baccarat. She sat unsmiling behind a heavy table of mahogany that might serve a modern bank directorate, and dealt impassively, scooping the coin of bets in a butterfly net with the mechanical accuracy of a machine.

Broadhead risked a Spanish milled dollar and won an eagle, whereupon the fever entered his blood; but Capt. Bolivar smilingly drew him from the table. In an adjoining room the spider's husband acted as banker for three simultaneous games of poker. He sat apart from the players at a little desk and between the long intervals of applications for chips, or cashing those of departing players, sat silently asleep with open eyes, untouched by any emotion or even aware of his indifference.

Norwood sat in one game and Chard, the black beard giant, in another. A departing player gave Capt. Bolivar a seat in the game with Chard, and Broadhead, standing back of him, watched the run of luck, fascinated.

The Captain's fortune fluctuated slightly, but kept him deeply absorbed in the game so that, after a while, Broadhead's attention wandered to the game in which Norwood was winning. Twice he had driven his antagonists to replenish their supply of chips and his run of luck continuing they abandoned the game sulkily, leaving him in possession of nearly all their wealth.

Chard had been the winner in his game, although not to so great an extent. However, his fortune changed him from a grunting, surly lout to a taunting, laughing devil. One of his companions quit under the lash of his taunts, but Capt. Bolivar sat closer to the table and chewed his mustache more arduously. Norwood took the vacant place and was loudly welcomed by Chard, who had noted his winnings. The others were a pale, dark eye youth and an asthmatic fat man of uncertain age and more uncertain social position. Norwood greeted the youth, who sat huddled over his cards, moveless save when the game demanded action.

"How's it going, Knight?"

"Poorly," murmured the youth.

"Richly," cried Chard. "Knight is down to his last hundred and Pugree (the fat man) is down to his last eagle. Knight, when you're broke remember I'll give you four hundred for Fifi's Therese."

The pale youth moved his hand toward his hip, his eyes devouring his tormentor; but he did not draw. No one at the table had moved to interfere, recognizing that while one might gamble with Chard he was not a person one could meet.

Chard! Whence he had come or what his ancestry no one knew. A tradition that a man must be judged by his ancestry flavored the social life of St. Louis for, in spite of the broad bases of peasants who characterized the French foundation, there were among them a few aristocrats to look up to, and the Cavalier blood of Virginia, which was well represented in later arrivals, has always been proud of its grandfathers. Chard was as barren of background as the men one met on the plains. He had the bargaining keenness and thrift of a New Englander and the look of one; his speech was of the South, but not of any locality—slow and slurred; his manner indolent and his manners damnable. One suspected that he had been an overseer because of violent outbreaks toward inferiors and his penchant for trading in slaves; but he was familiar with all the evil of cities and gambled with more knowledge and self-confidence than any planter or overseer the town could name. He looked the circuit rider, which added to the shock when one discovered how he swore. It was rumored that he had a hand in every game and graft in the city, yet a saintly preacher publicly communicated to the Lord the generosity of Chard. How class, how pigeon-hole this mass of contradictions?

Men tolerated him but never invited him to their homes. They did business with him, sold or bought with him, banked his money and gambled in his company; but there was a line he could not cross. He did not try to cross the line. He lived in a big house on what is now known as King's Highway, a house of Phil[illegible] set in a grove of walnut, butternut [illegible] by a small city of negroes' cabins. [illegible] air in St. Louis, blooded bays [illegible] back and forth.

At 7 o'cl

editor, who took

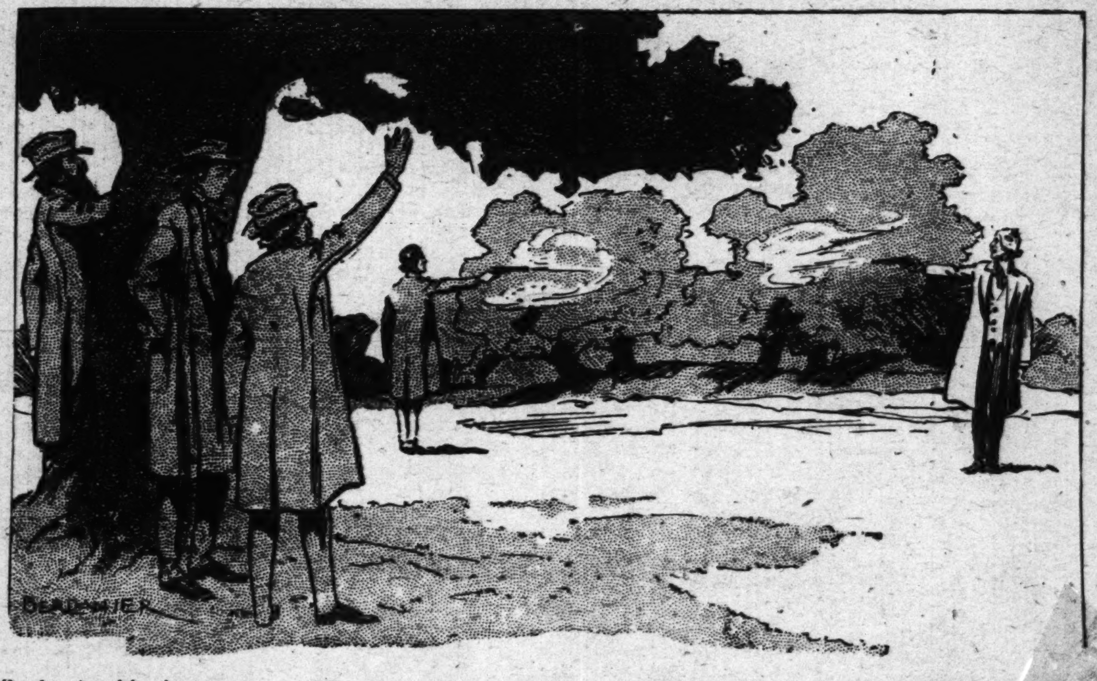
Knight's flashing eye was held by an eye as steady as his own, for Chard was not a coward. Bolivar broke their gaze, calling for the deal, and the game went on.

Pugree lost his eagle and Broadhead eagerly took his place with a resolve that he would no more than lose his eagle and the Spanish dollars. But he came so near to winning that the loss of his gambling capital seemed an accident that might be remedied in another hand. He saw fortune was favoring Knight and Capt. Bolivar reducing Chard's and Norwood's mountains of chips. When he begged the Captain to cash his letter of Credit Bolivar complied without objection and that was nearly gone before a fluke gave him a smile of Fortune. He had now $300 and so was ahead of the game; but his chips were pitifully few beside those of all his companions save Knight, who hung desperately on a few dollars.

Capt. Bolivar advised him with his eyes to quit; but Broadhead obstinately refused to see the signals. Ten minutes later, broken and somewhat dazed, he gave his place to a river gambler who played close to the table and watched Chard unceasingly.

Then began a drama of cards which remained red and vital in Broadhead's memory down to the dawn of the aeroplane age, when he was old and honored by high office.

The gambler and Capt. Bolivar had the usual luck of experience. They played warily, were content not to force fortune, but to wait, whenever the normal chances appeared to be against them. If the old poker adage "the man who knows how to play three and how to lay them down is the man who gets the money" is correct, they were accomplished players. Chard played recklessly, daring the riskiest chances. Knight's was the game of desperation, at times marked by the utmost caution and, at times, by utter abandon. Norwood handled his cards with the easy confidence of one who rarely loses. A critical observer would have declared the chances of either Chard or Knight in a contest with such opponents were very slight. Yet the same observer would have known that at any moment either of them was likely to make a coup that would send his opponents away penniless.



"'Fire!' cried Capt. Bolivar. A single report seemed to follow the word, but smoke curled up from two pistols."

Knight's last chip was gone, but he did not rise.

"Four hundred for Fifi's brat," said Chard softly.

The dark eyes of the pale youth flickered.

"Give Mr. Knight four hundred," Chard ordered the spider's husband, and the play went on. The new supply of chips dwindled fast, but nearly all went to the gambler and Capt. Bolivar, whose cautious system had its run of luck.

"Give you hundred for Fifi," said Chard, as one who is generous.

The pale youth's dark eye flickered and Chard ordered the chips, which soon swelled his own mountain. Norwood had begun to lose and his confidence giving place to ill-tempered anxiety, he cried:

"Let's make it a game. All pikers get cut. No more chips."

"I'm in," said Knight.

"With what?" demanded Chard, truculently.

"The New York row."

Chard grunted as he sank back in his chair. He and all present save Broadhead knew the New York row, as it was called: six houses of two stories, set high above Olive street, making of the basement another story; the front door reached by a flight of steps and a landing called a stoop. Knight's father, a fur trader, reputed to be a millionaire, had built them for the wonder of the city and families newly arrived from the East tenanted them at the enormous rental of $25 a month. All knew that these tenements were the last real possession of the youth whose ill fortune at cards and good fortune in capturing the fancy of ladies was a town proverb. Only heir to his father's great wealth, he had squandered it lavishly in the five years of his majority and inheritance.

"How much they worth?" Chard asked Norwood.

"Your interest in the Belle boat, my farm at Normandy, Capt. Bolivar's place on St. Ange and"——Norwood paused and looked at the gambler, who rose hurriedly, gathering his chips and saying:

"Count me out, Colonel. I'm a piker."

"What do you say?" asked Chard as he passed the deck to Bolivar for the next deal. "Make it a jackpot? One hand round and every fellow drawing to his best?"

"Suits me—it's getting late," answered Knight, his eyes jet and his face dull ivory. "But what's the use of drawing? Let the first deal stand, high hand to win as the cards come out."

Norwood was the first to take up his cards. He ran them slowly, sighed and put them down, face up. Chard ran his cards and held them in a closed fist, his face immovabl Bolivar laid his card face up and said no word, nor did anyone exult over him.

Then Knight picked up his cards one by one. When he had picked up three he smiled for the first time that night, and with trembling eagerness he grasped the other cards.

"A royal flush!" he shouted.

"What?" roared Chard.

Knight spread the cards on the table, a flush of hearts.

Norwood shouted and bent closer to make sure of ace, king, queen—he handled each in its turn—jack and ten. But Chard shouted, too, and spread before their astonished gaze an ace of hearts, a deuce of hearts, a tray of hearts, a four of hearts and a five of hearts.

"Look! Look!" shouted Broadhead, and pointed at Capt. Bolivar's spread, still upon the table before him: a deuce of spades, a four of diamonds, a jack of diamonds, an eight of clubs and an ACE OF HEARTS!

In the turmoil that followed one voice became dominant, that of the river gambler, who had dubbed himself a piker. He stood between the infuriated Chard and the coldly murderous Knight, each only holding their fire momentarily because of his interference.

"Skin the cards!" shouted the gambler. "Skin the cards!"

Broadhead seized the pack from the center of the table and ran them rapidly, tossing upon the table the joker and two more aces of hearts.

It was bewildering. Even Knight's anger-sodden brain grasped the significance of five aces of hearts. No scheme of cheating depended upon or could be safely carried out by the wily introduction into the pack of four cards of one kind. It was not credible that Chard, or anyone in his senses, would do such a thing. Even Knight appreciated that. But while they stood with mouths agape, gazing as if they could never see enough of them at the miserable red aces, the gambler laughed.

"You"—— Norwood questioned with a look.

He nodded. "Yes, I slipped them in. You see you was going too strong and you all are friends of mine and I"——

Knight dashed his fist in the gambler's grinning mouth, shrieking:

"Damn you, get out of here or I'll cut your throat."

"Ah now, lad, be sensible!" soothed the gambler, trying to hold the youth away and avoid his blows.

Suddenly Knight became aware of the revolver in his hand. He pressed it against the gambler's breast and fired. Coughing slightly, the gambler sank to the floor. There was astonishment on his face, but neither anger nor fear. He collapsed gently and when the others bent over him he was dead.

But Knight did not think of his victim.

"You—you"—— he spluttered at Chard, and running to an adjoining table, where lay a pack of abandoned cards, he shuffled them swiftly. "You—the stakes as they lay! All on a cut! Ace high!"

His eyes dared Chard to the encounter. The others left the dead man to gather around the live gamblers.

Had he been alone with Knight, Chard would have foregone the test. There was fear in his eye, but he took the cards, shuffled, almost dropped them, placed the pack on the edge of the table and cut.

Knight feverishly seized the top card and turned it—a tray of diamonds.

Chard turned the cards in his hand as a conjurer, sure of his trick, and showed the ace of hearts!

With an oath Norwood seized the pack and while the breathless spectators watched his every move he laid out the cards in suits.

It was clean.

Knight had lost.

The fear in Chard's eyes deepened, but he had never been in less danger.

"Come, gentlemen. We may need some witnesses. Let us go to Judge Lawless and have him make the deed," said Knight.

Once the richest man in St. Louis, he had become poorer than Broadhead; he had started the evening with a depleted fortune, but possessions that would have contented the young Virginian at the end of many years of toil, and ended it a murderer who had not a dollar in the world.

And Broadhead, at the end of his first day in the Gateway to the West, had recovered his boyhood playmate, after seeing him a stake in a game of horseshoes; had seen a duel fought under the Western code; had seen a murder and the drama of his man's ruin.

He was moneyless but young and full of hope. Love and life lay before him and he slept dreamlessly in preparation for a new day.

Tragedy of War Shown in One of the World's Great Paintings

"THE FALL OF LE BOURGET"

By A. de Neuville

ONE of the most dramatic and vivid battle pictures ever painted is "The Fall of Le Bourget," by A. de Neuville, which is easily the dominant work in the Vanderbilt collection. While depicting the horrors of war with unsparing realism, it is illuminated with a sort of awful radiance—that of the grandeur which goes with heroism. It is, however, a mighty sermon against the ghastliness and cruelty of war.

Le Bourget, a village in the suburbs of Paris, played an important role during the siege of the capital in the Franco-Prussian War. First occupied by the Prussians, it was taken from them in an audacious night assault, was recaptured by the invaders, and then was the scene of a bloody and unsuccessful attack from the French side. Histories of the siege devote much prominence to the two "Combats du Bourget."

In a setting of ruin and havoc, suggested by the conflagration of buildings, the painter has brought the story of Le Bourget to a powerful climax by concentrating the picture upon one incident, placed in the foreground. Says Gen. Ducrot, in "The Defense of Paris":

"Le Bourget, riddled with shell and assailed by an entire division of the Prussian Guards, had for the second time fallen into the enemy's possession. Everything appeared ended. But in the village church eight French officers and about 20 men and bring cannon before the remnant of the heroic band would surrender."

The painter, with the instinct of a dramatist, seized for perpetuation the moment of capitulation. From the door of the church two of the survivors are bearing in a chair one of their dying comrades. On either side wait the Prussian victors. The officer in the center, sword in hand, might be taken for a figure typifying the genius of war. The smooth-cheeked, dead boy lying at his feet is a tragic preachment for peace.

The capture of Le Bourget by the French came by accident. The village lay in the middle of the plain between Saint-Denis and the forest of Bondyl. The French held the country between Saint-Denis and La Courneuve; the German lines, facing them, extended from Aunay to Rainey. Between the two foes was Le Bourget, through which passed a railroad which, for the Prussians, would be the most direct route to Versailles.

It was recognized by the French that the village was a strategic point, by the seizure of which they could menace the German lines of communication to the north. Gen. de Bellemare ordered a reconnaissance to report as to the possibility of capturing the town, and at 3 o'clock on the morning of Oct. 29, 1870, a battalion of franc-tireurs, numbering about 250, set out on the errand. The possibility that the scouting party might sto [illegible] did not enter the mind of the General.

In the darkness the riflemen, in three divisions, stole near the village. A Prussian sentinel cried: "Wer ist da?" "Kamarad," answered a Frenchman, imitating the accent of a German. They advanced, and were hailed a second time. This time the French reply was, "Rends-toi ou tu es mort!" The German fired upon them, and in a moment all of the Frenchmen swarmed over the barricade. The German garrison, taken completely by surprise by so audacious an attack, took to flight, and the 250 Frenchmen, returning from the pursuit of their flying foes, remained masters of the town.

Strange to say, as a garrison for the important village, the French authorities sent raw militiamen, who, however, repulsed with great valor an assault attempted by the Prussians, many of whom fell dead just outside the entrenchments. The Germans then determined to batter the town down with their artillery.

On the next day (Oct. 30) the Prussians ranged a battery of 21 pieces on an elevation overlooking the village. Critics declare that the French should either have reinforced the village heavily with soldiers and artillery, or else have abandoned it. They took a middle course, seeking to hold the city with an inadequate garrison. To oppose the 21 guns of the enemy they had only seven field pieces and one machine gun.

"At 7 o'clock in the morning," relates Louis Jezierski, a Paris editor, who took part in the engagement, "the Prussians opened fire. While a terrible storm of shells was shattering the houses, beating down the barricades, which were wretchedly constructed of rubble and paving stone, and sweeping the streets, Prussian troops, protected by the hail of shrapnel which blinded us, advanced on the Lille highway and by the railroad to the very outskirts of Le Bourget.

"Our guns, stationed in the street in the center of the village, could scarcely reach the enemy with their infrequent shots. The machine gun stood useless, its cartridges having been wet by rain. The enemy continually advanced, and on the right appeared cavalry, preparing to seize our line of retreat upon Saint-Denis.

"The retreat was sounded, and our soldiers fell back upon Aubervilliers and Courneuve. Our artillery was able to escape intact. But a party of militia and riflemen remained barricaded in the houses."

The reference to this band, the fate of which the author does not tell, may relate to the incident described by Gen. Ducrot and made the subject of De Neuville's painting.

The journalist's estimate that from 1100 to 1200 Frenchmen were killed in the battle was probably exaggerated, as there were only 3000 French soldiers engaged, but the figures are eloquent of that morning's bloody work. He relates that as the troops retreated many of the volunteers wept silently, for the loss both of the village and of their comrades.

SYNOPSIS.

ALEXANDER MINCHIN is found dead in his London house, and his wife, Rachel, a young Australian, is arrested on a charge of murder. The public condemns her, but the jury acquits her. Her trial had been attended every day by an elderly but handsome gentleman. His name is Steel. Mrs. Minchin refuses to see him. But, entering a railway carriage, she is confronted by him. He offers to help her, telling her she will probably suffer at the hands of the "man in the street," who has been disappointed in the verdict. She again refuses. She goes to see some acquaintances who had been kind to her, but they treat her coolly. Then, tired and hungry, she goes to her old home, only to find an angry crowd assembled in front of it who are smashing her windows. She has reached the depths of despair, when she hears a kindly voice behind her and turns to see Mr. Steel.

SECOND INSTALLMENT

"DO you still pin your faith to the man in the street?"

It was Mr. Steel who stood at Rachel's elbow. There was an earnest note in the lowered voice, an unspoken appeal to her to be done with proud pretense. And indeed the pride had gone out of Rachel at sight of him; a delicious sense of safety filled her heart instead.

"I never did pin my faith him," said she.

"Yet see the risk that you re running! Listen to hat!"

It was only the second window, but a third and a fourth followed like shots from the same revolver. Rachel winced.

For God's sake, come away!" he whispered sternly.

"But what am I to do?" she cried. "Where am I to turn?"

"Mrs. Minchin," said Steel, "can you not really trust me yet?"

He stood before her under a street lamp, handsome still, upright for all his years, strong as fate itself. And yet—and yet—she trusted and distrusted him, too!

"I can and I cannot," she sighed; and even with the words one reason occurred to her. "You have followed me, you see, after all!"

"I admit it," he replied. "My dear lady, I was not going to lose sight of you tonight!"

"And why not?"

"Because I foresaw what might happen, and may happen still! Do you hear them now. Any moment they may be upon us. And there's a hansom dropped from heaven!"

He raised his umbrella, the bell tinkled, then with a clatter the horse was pulled up beside the curb, and Steel spread his hands before the muddy wheel.

"Be sensible," he whispered, "and jump in! Ah! you will trust me so far at least—I thank you from my heart!"

"Where to, sir?" asked the cabman through the roof.

"Brook street," said Steel, after a moment's pause—"and double-quick for a double fare. We shall be there in a quarter of an hour," he added reassuringly as the trap door slammed, "and you will find everything ready for you, beginning with something to eat. I, at all events, anticipated the verdict. Do you know Claridge's Hotel, by the way?"

"Only by name," said Rachel, wearily.

"I think you will be pleased. It is not like the ordinary run of hotels. Your rooms are your castle—and you needn't see another soul if you don't like. I am staying in the hotel myself, for example, but you shall not set eyes on me for a week, unless you wish to."

"But I don't understand," began Rachel.

"Nor are you to attempt to do so," said her companion, "until tomorrow morning. If you feel equal to it then, I shall crave an audience."

"One thing is certain," said Rachel, half to herself: "they can't know who I am, or they never would have taken me in. And no luggage!"

"That they are prepared for," returned Steel; "and in [illegible] a maid who is also prepared for your emergency. As to their not knowing who you are at the hotel, there you are right; it would have been inexpedient to tell them."

"Then at least," said Rachel, "I ought to know who I am supposed to be."

And she smiled, for interest and curiosity were awakened within her, with the momentary effect of stimulants; but Mr. Steel sat silent at her side.

What was his intention and what his object? To draw back was to find out neither; and to say the truth, even if she had not been friendless and forlorn, Rachel would have been very sorry to draw back now.

"Then there are one or two things that I can promise you," said Steel, with the heartiness of a man who has gained his point. "You will not be compromised in any sort or kind of way. And this I guarantee—whether you like it or not—not a single soul in the place shall have the faintest inkling as to who you are. But here we are at the hotel."

Rachel's recollection of that night was ever afterward disjointed and involved as that of any dream; but there were certain features that she never forgot. There was the beautiful suite of rooms, filled with flowers, and in one of them a table tastefully laid. Rachel remembered the dazzle of silver and the glare of napery, the hot plates, the sparkling wine, the hothouse fruit. Mr. Steel had but peeped in to see that all was in accordance with his orders; therefore not even a waiter was allowed to enter, but only Rachel's attendant, a gentle and assiduous creature, with the delicate and pretty accent of the French-Swiss.

Rachel's last memory of that eventful day was of a mild, foreign face bending over her with a medicine glass and a gentle word.

AND the same good face and the same soft voice were waiting for her when she awoke after many hours. It was a delicious awakening, recollection was so slow to come.

Presently there was a knock at the outer door, which the maid answered, returning with Mr. Steel's card.

"Is he there?" asked Rachel hastily.

"No, madame, but one of the servants is waiting for an answer. I think there is something written on the back, madame."

Rachel read the harmless request on the back of the card; nothing could have been better calculated to turn away suspicion, and there was obvious design in the absence of an envelope.

"What is the time, please?" she asked.

"A quarter to ten, madame."

"Then order my breakfast for a quarter past, and let Mr. Steel be told that I shall be delighted to see him at 11 o'clock."

* * * * * * * * * *

"The way to conceal one's identity," observed Mr. Steel, "is to assume another as distinctive as one's own."

This oracular utterance was delivered from the leathern chair at the writing table, in an inner recess of Rachel's sitting room. She herself had inadvertently taken the easy chair which was a further feature of the recess; in its cushioned depths she already felt at a needless disadvantage, with Mr. Steel bending over her, and his black eyes riddling her with penetrating glances.

"I know what you are thinking," resumed Steel; "that you had no desire to assume any new identity, and that I have taken a great deal upon myself. That I most freely admit. And I think you will forgive me when you see the papers!"

"Is there so much about me, then?" asked Rachel.

"A LEADING article in every one of them. But they will keep. Indeed, I would much rather you never saw them at all."

"Was that why you brought them in, Mr. Steel?"

The question was irresistible, its satire unconcealed; but Steel's disregard of it steered admirably clear of contempt.

"That was why I brought them, certainly," he admitted. "But I brought them with me for quite a different purpose. I was saying, however, that the best way to sink one's identity is to assume another. We'll suppose, for the sake of argument, that I was authorized by you to do what I have done. All last week the papers were full of your trial, but on Saturday there was a second sensation as well. You may not know it, but the Cape liner due that day was lost, with scores of lives, off Finisterre, on Friday morning last."

Rachel failed to see the connection, and yet she felt vaguely that there was one, if she could but recall it.

"I heard of it first," continued Steel, "late on Friday afternoon. Now, it was on Friday afternoon that you gave evidence yourself in your own defense. When you left the witness box, Mrs. Minchin, I knew that you were saved!"

"You believed me!" she whispered.

Her moist eyes saw the old-fashioned courtesy of his bow in answer, but not the subtlety of the smile that bore it company in the dark eyes.

"What is more to the point, my dear lady," he went on in words, "the jury believed you, and, I saw that they did—I saw what you had done—and took immediate measures."

Rachel looked up with parted lips.

"And who was I to take measures on your behalf?" queried Steel, putting the question for her. "I will tell you. My dear Mrs. Minchin, I had absolutely no right at all; but I had the excuse which every man has who sees a woman left to stand alone against the world. And then for a week I had seen you all day and every day, upon your trial!"

At last there was something with a ring of definite insincerity, something that Rachel could take up.

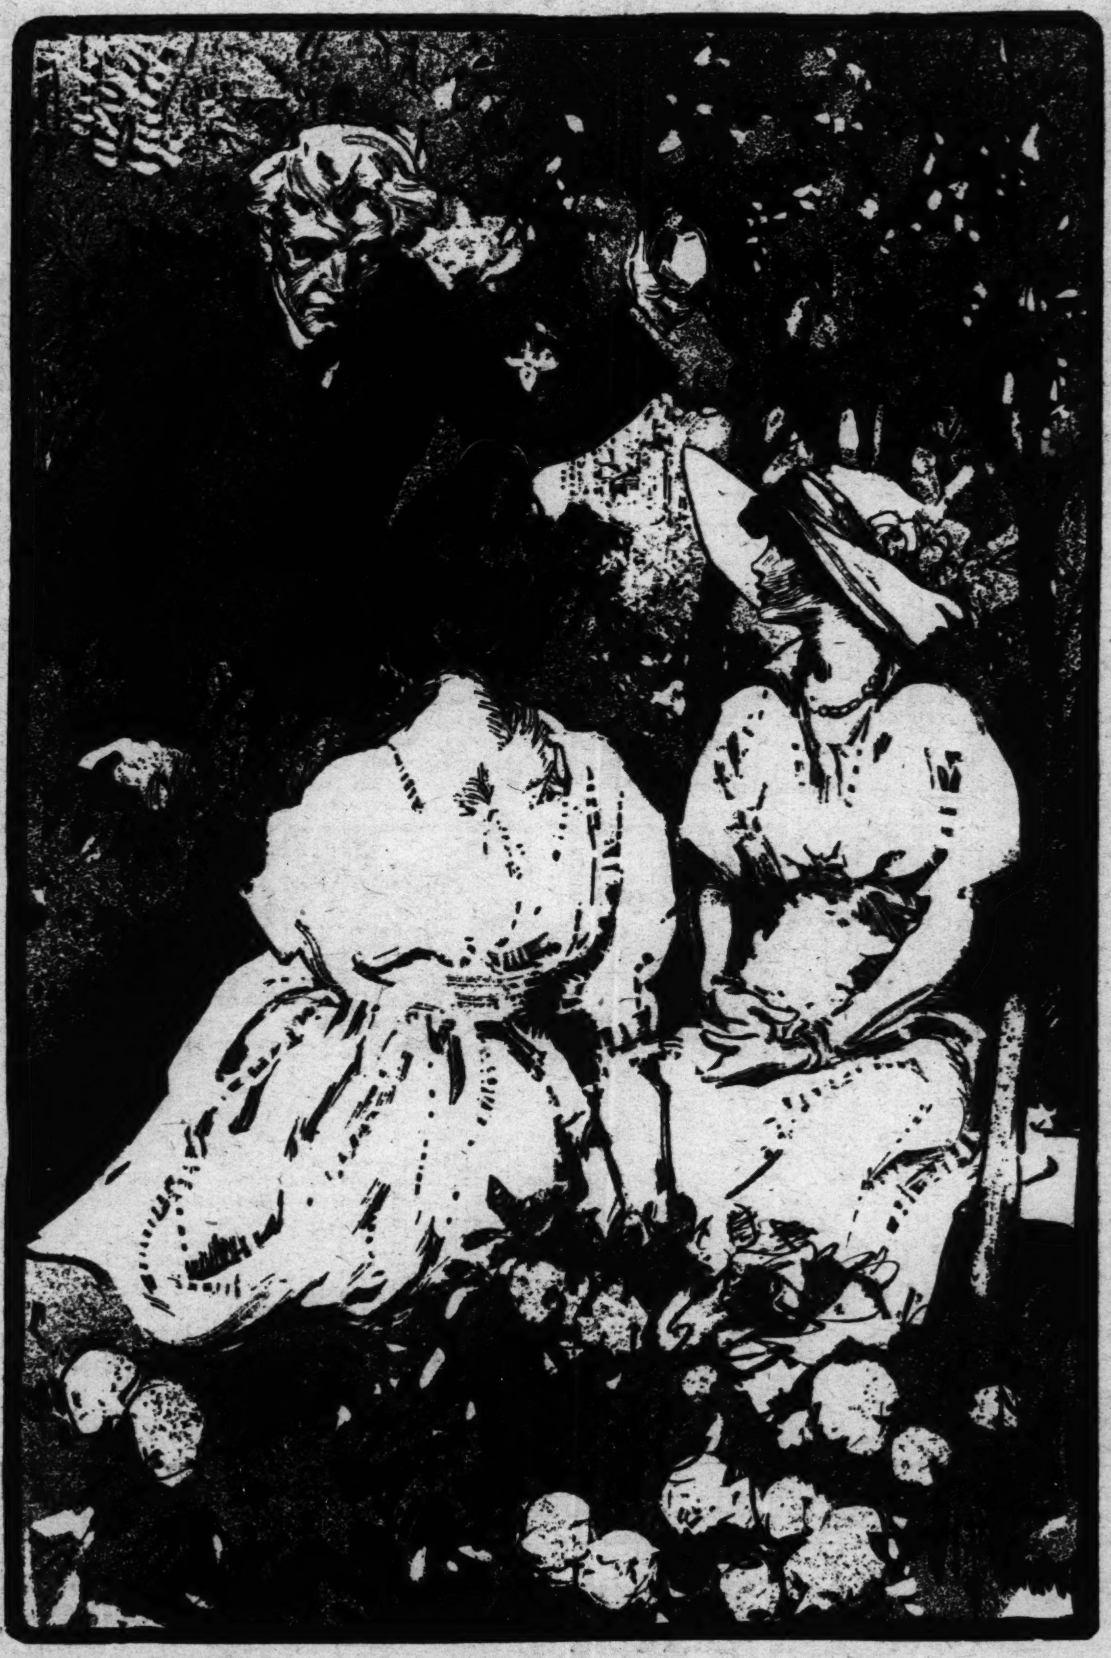
"Do you mean to say that you never saw me before—my trouble, Mr. Steel?"

"Never in my life, my dear lady."

"Then you know something about me or mine!"

"What one reads in the newspapers—neither more nor less—upon my most solemn word—if that will satisfy you."

And it did; for if there had been palpable insincerity in his previous protestations, there was si[illegible] of an



"Mr. Steel had stolen a march upon them, on the soft, smooth grass; and now he was smiling with all urbanity, as he held out his hand. But Morna had seen how his wife started at the sound of his voice.'' obvious order in Mr. Steel's downright assurances on these two points.

"I AM more than satisfied, in one way," replied Rachel, "and less in another. But never mind. What were these immediate measures?"

"I took these rooms; I had spoken of taking them earlier in the week."

"For me?"

"Yes, on the chance of your getting off."

"But you did not say they were for me!"

"No; and I was vague in what I said until then. I had a daughter—a widow—whom I rather expected to arrive from abroad toward the end of the week. But I was quite vague."

"Because you thought I had no chance!"

"I had not heard your evidence. The very afternoon I did hear it, and had no longer any doubt about the issue, I also heard of this wreck. The very thing! I waited till next morning for the list of the saved; and I picked out the name of a married woman traveling alone. Then I went to the manager. The daughter whom I expected had been wrecked, but she was saved, and would arrive that night."

Rachel felt half frightened and half indignant. Steel was standing up, looking very earnestly down upon her. And something that she had dimly divined in the very beginning—only to chide herself for the mere thought—that thing was in his face and in his voice Rachel made a desperate attempt to change the subject.

"So I am supposed to be your daughter!" she exclaimed nervously. "May I ask my new name?"

"If you like; but I am going to suggest to you a still newer name, Mrs. Minchin."

Rachel tried to laugh.

"Do you mean that I am not to be your daughter any longer, Mr. Steel?"

"Not if I can help it."

"And what do you want to make me now?"

"My wife!"

RACHEL was bereft of speech; and yet a certain sense of relief underlay the natural embarrassment caused by a proposal so premature and so abrupt.

"I want you to be my wife," repeated Mr. Steel, with enough of respect in his tone, yet none the less with the air of a man who is accustomed to obtain what he wants.

She tried to tell him it was absurd, but before the word would come she saw that it was the last one to apply. At last she told him she could not think of it; he had seen nothing of her, and could not possibly care for her, even supposing that she cared for him.

"By 'caring,'" said he, "do you mean being 'in love,' as they say, and all that?"

"Naturally," said Rachel, with great ease and irony.

"And have I said I was in love with you?" inquired Mr. Steel, with a smile as indulgent as his tone.

"It is a greater insult, if you are not," returned Rachel, speaking hotly and quickly.

"What! To offer to marry a person whom one does not—as yet—pretend to love?"

Rachel vouchsafed no reply

"Whom one only—but tremendously—admires?"

Rachel felt bound to answer him, for at least there was no insult in his tone. She raised her candid eyes a sweet brown blush upon her face.

"Yes," she said, "I think there is absolutely no excuse for a proposal of marriage if it is not founded upon love and nothing else!"

"Or its pretense and nothing else," amended Steel, with a bow and a smile of some severity. "That is a hard saying," he went on, resuming his chair, "but, before we go any further I should like to give you my own conception, not of the institution, but of the particular marriage which I have in view."

So he had it in view!

"The marriage that I propose to you," continued Steel, "is simply the most convenient form of friendship of which I can think. I want to be your friend. I was interested in your case, so I came up to hear your trial. I was more interested in your trial, but most interested of all in you yourself. All this business of the shipwrecked daughter was, of course, a crude device enough; but I had very little time to think, and my first care was that you should not be recognized here or elsewhere in my society. That was essential, and let me say that if circumstances would permit me to continue the paternal imposture, that would be quite enough for me. Unluckily, I am known in my own country as an old bachelor; so that I cannot suddenly produce a widowed daughter. What I can do, however," and Steel bent further forward, with eyes that held Rachel's in their spell; "what I can do, and will, is to go back with a lady who shall be my wife in name, my daughter in effect. We should, I trust, be the best of friends; but I will give you my word that we never need be anything more."

HE had spoken rapidly; the pause that followed lasted longer than this lengthy speech. And through it all they sat with eyes still locked, until he spoke again.

"I am going to give you a few minutes to think it over," he said, "then if you care to go into it further, I shall be most happy."

"Don't go," said Rachel, with some petulance; "that is quite unnecessary. Anything more extraordinary—but I owe you too much already to be your critic. Still, I do think I am entitled to go a little further into the matter, as you said, without committing myself."

you are."

But this time he remained standing.

"You spoke of your own country," she began. "Do you live abroad?"

There was the least suspicion of eagerness in the question. Rachel herself was unaware of it; not so Mr. Steel, and he sighed.

"A mere figure," he said; "what I meant was my own countryside."

"And where is that?"

"In the north," he replied vaguely. "Did you look twice at my card? Well, here is another, if you will do me the honor now. The initials J. B. stand for no very interesting names—John Buchanan. As for the address, Normanthrope House is the rather historic old seat of the family of that name; but they have so many vastly superior places, and the last 50 years have so ruined the surroundings that I was able to induce the Duke to take a price for it a year or two ago.

RACHEL had dropped the card into her lap; she was looking straight at Mr. John Buchanan Steel himself.

"I might have known you were very rich," she murmured, as much to herself as to him.

"Granting your hypothesis, for the sake of argument," he went on, with his simplest smile; "is it as difficult as ever for the poor rich man to get to heaven?"

Rachel spent some moments in serious thought.

"It may be very small of me," she said at length, "but—somehow—if you had been comparatively poor—I should have been less—ashamed!"

And candor begat candor, as it generally will.

"I am an oldish man," he said, "and—yes, there is no use in denying that I am comfortably off. I want a wife; or rather, my neighbors seem bent upon finding me one; and I prefer to choose for myself. Matrimony, however, is about the very last state of life that I desire, and I take it to be the same with you. Therefore—to put the cart before the horse—you would suit me ideally. One's own life would be unaltered, but the Delverton mothers would cease from troubling, and at the head of my establishment there would be a lady of whom I should be most justly proud. Mrs. Minchin," cried Steel, "the conditions shall be very rigid; my lawyer shall see to that. Let there be no talk or thought of love between us from first to last! I don't mind telling you that I admire you as I never admired any woman in the world before; and I hope, in spite of that, we shall be good friends.

"You must not think," said he, "that my proposal admits of no alternative but the miserable one of making your own way in an uncharitable world. On the contrary, if I am not to be your nominal and legal husband, I still intend to be your actual friend. On the first point you are to be consulted, but on the second not even you shall stand in my way. Nor in that event would I attempt to rob you of the independence which you value so highly. You must let me send you back to Australia." No, no, no; she could never show her face there again, or anywhere else where she was known. She must begin life afresh, that was evident.

"It was evident to me," said Steel, quietly, "from the very beginning. Hence the plans and proposals that I have put before you."

"Are you sure," she cried, "that they would not know me—up North?"

"Not from Eve," he answered airily. "I should see to that; and besides we should first travel."

"If only I could begin my life again!" said Rachel to herself, but aloud.

"That is exactly what I wish you to do," Steel rejoined quietly, even gently, his hand lying lightly but kindly on her quivering shoulder. How strong his touch, how reassuring!

"I wish it so much," he went on, "that I would have your past life utterly buried. I, for my part, would undertake never to ask you one solitary question about that life—on one small and only fair condition. Supposing we make a compact now?"

"Anything to bury my own past," owned Rachel.

"Then you must help me to bury mine, too," he said. "I was never married, but a past I have."

"I would do my best," said Rachel, "if I married you."

"You will do your best," added Steel, correcting her, "and there is my compact cut and dried. I ask you nothing; you ask me nothing; and there is to be no question of love between us, first or last. But we help each other to forget—from this day forth!"

Rachel could not speak; his eyes were upon her. She could only answer him when he had turned away and was moving toward the door.

"Where are you going?" she cried.

"To send to my solicitor," replied Steel, "as I warned him that I might. It has all to be drawn up; and there is the question of a settlement and other questions, perhaps, which you may like to put to him yourself without delay."

THE REV. HUGH WOODGATE, vicar of Marley-in-Delverton—a benefice for generations in the gift of the Dukes of Normanthorpe, but latterly in that of one John Buchanan Steel—was writing his sermon on a Friday afternoon just six months after the foregoing events. The month was therefore May.

So intent was the vicar upon his task that he did not hear the wheels in his drive. He heard nothing until the door opened and a girl in her twenties, trim, slim and brown with health, came hurriedly in.

"I'm sorry to disturb you, dear, but who do you think is here?"

Hugh Woodgate turned around in his chair and his honest eyes filled with open admiration of the wife who was so many years younger than himself and who had seen in him heaven knew what! He never could look at her without that look first; and only now, after some years of marriage, was he beginning sometimes to do so without this thought next.

"Who is it?" he asked.

"Mrs. Venables!"

Woodgate groaned and his wife's eyes sparkled.

Mrs. Venables, a stout but comely lady, with a bright brown eye and a face full of character, opened fire upon the vicar as soon as they had shaken hands.

"He is married!" cried Mrs. Venables.

"Indeed?" said the matter-of-fact clergyman. "And who is he?"

"Your neighbor and your patron—Mr. Steel!"

"Married?" repeated Mrs. Woodgate.

"This is news!" declared her husband, as though he had expected none worthy of the name.

"His marriage," continued Mrs. Venables, "like everything else about him, is 'wropt in mystery,' as one of those vulgar creatures says in Dickens. Was ever anything more like him or less like anybody else? They were married in Italy last autumn—so he says—and are on their way home at this minute."

"I imagine she is a lady," said the vicar to his tea.

"You are so charitable, dear Mr. Woodgate!"

"I hope I am," he said simply. "In this case I see no reason to be anything else."

"What—when you know really nothing about Mr. Steel himself?"

And the bright brown eyes of Mrs. Venables grew smaller and harder as they pinned Hugh Woodgate to his chair.

"I beg your pardon," said that downright person, "I know a great deal about Mr. Steel. He has done an immense amount for the parish."

There was a pause.

"Then you intend to call upon her?" said Mrs. Venables, coming with directness to an obviously premeditated point and addressing herself to Mrs. Woodgate.

"I do—I must—it is so different with us," said the vicar's young wife, with her pretty brown blush.

"Certainly," added the vicar himself.

Mrs. Venables did not look at him, but she looked the harder at Morna instead.

"Well," said she, "I suppose you are right. In your position—yes—your position is quite different!" And the sudden, half accidental turn of her sentence put Mrs. Venables on good terms with herself once more, and so she rose all smiles and velvet. "I hope you'll come and see me soon, and tell me all about her. At his age!" she whispered as she went. "At 65—if he's a day!"

A stranger would have imagined that this lady had quite decided not to call upon the newcomer herself; even Mrs. Woodgate was uncertain of her neighbor's intention as the latter's wheels ground the vicarage drive once more.

* * * * * * * *

MRS. WOODGATE paid the promised call a few days later, walking by herself along a woodland path from Marley to Normanthorpe House, and cutting a very attractive figure among the lights and shadows of the trees. She was rather tall and very straight, with the pale brown skin and the dark brown eyes which go to make up one of the most charming and distinctive types of English womanhood.

The woodland path led at last into a long avenue, and there was Normanthorpe House at the end of the vista: an Italian palace transplanted into the north of England, radiantly white between the green trees and blue sky. A cool grotto on a really hot day, the house was an icepit on any other. What a place for a sa man to build in bleak old Delverton! What a place a sane man to buy; and yet, in its cool white smo ness, its alien air—how like the buyer!

Though it was May, and warm enough for the and place, Morna got up when the footman ha her and thrust o own shoe after the other as as she could to t wood fire that glimmered under-the great marble mantelpiece. Soon she was framing a self-conscious apology for premature intrusion—Mrs. Steel was so long in coming. But at last there was a rustle in the conservatory, and a slender figure in a big hat stood for an instant on the threshhold.

That was Morna's first impression of the new mistress of Normanthorpe, a slender silhouette in an enormous hat, the light all behind her, the pilastered doorway for a frame, a gay background of hothouse flowers, and in the figure itself a nervous hesitancy which struck an immediate chord of sympathy in Morna.

She began her apology, nevertheless, but Rachel cut it very short. "My dear Mrs. Woodgate, I think it is so kind of you!" she exclaimed, her low voice full of the frankest gratitude.

They sat a little, talking of the time of year. And for these few minutes, after that first frank speech, the greater constraint was on the part of the hostess. Then all at once she seemed to throw it off.

"Come round the garden," said Rachel quickly. "I am delighted with the garden, and I think it's really warmer than the house."

Delightful it certainly was, or rather they, for the Normanthorpe gardens were never spoken of in the singular number by those familiar with their fame; they had been reconstructed and enlarged by a dead Duke with a fad for botany and kept up by successors who could not endure the cold, uncomfortable house.

"I expect you know the way quite well," said Rachel, as they followed a winding path over a bank of rhodendrons near the lake; "to me every stroll is still a voyage of exploration. Why, what have they got here?"

On the further side of the bank of rhodendrons the path had descended into a sheltered hollow, screened altogether from the colder winds. And in this hollow was a clump of attenuated trees, with drooping leaves of a lackluster hue, and a white bark peeling from the trunk; a pungent aroma, more medicinal than sylvan hung rather heavily over the sequestered spot.

Rachel stood a moment with wide nostrils and round eyes; the look hardly lasted longer, and she said no more, but she was aware that Morna had made some answer to her question.

"What did you say?" inquired Rachel, turning politely to her visitor.

"I said they were blue gums from Australia."

Rachel made no immediate comment; secretive she might have to be, but to a deliberate pretense she would not stoop. So she merely said, after a pause: "You are something of a botanist yourself, then, Mrs. Woodgate?" For they had been talking of the gardens and of their history.

"I?" laughed Morna. "I only wish I was; but I happen to remember Mr. Steel telling me that one day when we were here last summer."

Rachel opened her eyes again, and her lips with them; but instead of speaking she went to the nearest gum tr and picked a spray of the lack-luster leaves. "I smell of them," she said, as they went on; and tle incident left no impression upon Morna's ay I make a personal remark?" asked Rachel, who been admiring the pale brown face of Morna in her turn.

"You frighten me," said Morna, laughing. "But let me hear the worst."

"It's the ribbon on your hat," went on Rachel. "What pretty colors! Are they your husband's school or college?"

"No," said Morna blushing as she laughed again. "No, they're my own college colors."

Rachel stood still on the grass.

"Have you really been at college?" said she; but her tone was obviously one of envy.

"Now, don't say you wouldn't have thought it of me," said Morna, "and don't say you would!"

"I am far too jealous to say anything at all," Rachel answered with a flattering stare. "And do you mean to me that you took a degree?"

"Of sorts," admitted Morna, whose English was by no means undefiled. But it turned out to have been a mathematical degree; and when, under sympathetic pressure, Morna vouchsafed particulars, even Rachel knew enough to appreciate the honors which the vicar's wife had won.

"I am afraid we shall have nothing in common," sighed Mrs. Steel, as they neared the house. "I have no education worthy the name."

Morna waxed all but indignant at the implication; she had a morbid horror of being considered a "bluestocking." On the contrary, she was quite sure they would have heaps in common; for example, she was longing for someone to bicycle with her.

"But I don't bicycle," said Mrs. Steel, shaking her head rather sadly.

"Ah, I forgot! People who ride and drive never do." And Morna sighed.

"No, I should like it; but I have never tried."

"I'll teach you!" cried the Morna at once. "I should enjoy it very much. But"——

The sentence was abandoned—as was often the case in the subsequent intercourse between Rachel Steel and Morna Woodgate. From the beginning Rachel was apt to be more off her guard with Morna than with anyone whom she had met during the last six months; for these two were natural and immediate friends.

"You must learn," urged Morna when she had waited some time for the sentence which had but begun. "There are people who scorn it, or pretend to, but I am sure you are not one. It makes you so independent; no horses to consider, no coachman to consult! The independence alone"——

"May be the very thing for you, Mrs. Woodgate, but it wouldn't do for my wife!"

Mr. Steel had stolen a march upon them, on the soft, smooth grass; and now he was taking off his straw hat to Morna, and smiling with all urbanity, as he held out his hand. But Morna had seen how his wife started at the sound of his voice.

"I mean the bicycling," he was quick enough to add; "not the independence, of course!"

But there was something sinister in his smile, something sinister and yet not unkindly, that puzzled Morna during the remainder of her visit.

"What's that you have got?" asked Steel, as they turned back up the drive, after seeing Morna to her woodland path. Rachel was still carrying her spray of gum leaves. She said at once what it was and why she had pulled it from the tree.

"It took me back to Victoria, and you know I was born there."

Steel looked narrowly at his wife, a hard gleam in his inscrutable eyes, and yet a lurking sympathy, too.

"I don't forget," he said, "and I think I can understand. So that's a sprig of gum tree, is it?"

Rachel gave him a sudden glance.

"Did you never see one before?" she asked.

"A gum tree?" said Steel, without looking up, as he sniffed. "Never in all my life—to my knowledge!"

* * * * * * * * * *

THE county folk did call upon the Steels. The taboo half suggested by Mrs. Venables had begun and ended in her own mind, and quite early in June the Steels were bidden to a dinner party in their honor at Upthorpe Hall.

"But need we go?" asked Rachel of her husband, with open dread.

"I am afraid we must go," he said firmly, but not unkindly. "You see, it is in our honor—as I happen to know; for Venables gave me a hint when I met him in the town the other day. He will take you in himself."

"And what is he like?"

"Fond of his dinner; he won't worry you," said Steel, reassuringly. "Nor need you really bother your head about all that any more. Nobody has recognized you yet; nobody is the least likely to do so down here. I feel convinced about it, and only wish I could convince you."

And he did so, more or less; but the fear of recognition had increased in Rachel instead of abating as time went on. It had increased especially since the rapid ripening of her acquaintance with Morna Woodgate. Rachel had told her husband that she would not have Morna know for anything; and he had appeared in his own dark way to sympathize with her solicitude; but that was perhaps because he approved of Mrs. Woodgate on his own account. And so rare was that approval, yet so marked in this case, that he usually contrived to share Morna's society with his wife.

"You shall not monopolize Mrs. Woodgate," he would say with all urbanity as he joined them when least expected. "I was first in the field."

And in the field he would remain. Shortly after receiving the Venables' invitation Steel took his wife on a short trip to London. He wished, he said, to buy her something to wear.

It was something to wear upon her neck—a diamond necklet of superb stones, gradually swelling to one of the first water at the throat; and Rachel duly wore it at the dinner party, with a rich gown of bridal white, whose dazzling purity had perhaps the effect of canceling the bride's own pallor.

Mr. Venables, who, of course, did take her in, by no means belied her husband's description of him. He was a rotund man with a high complexion, and his bulging eye was on the menu before his soft body had sunk into his chair. It was a large dinner party; 22 sat down. Rachel was at last driven to glancing at the other 20.

To the man on her left she had not been introduced, but he offered one or two civil observations while Mr. Venables was better engaged, and after the second Rachel had chanced to catch sight of the card upon which his name had been inscribed. He was, it seemed, a Mr. Langholm. Rachel put the screw upon her courage.

"These cards," she said, "are very handy when one hasn't been introduced. Your name is not a very common one, is it?"

"Not very," he answered, "spelled like that."

"Yet it's spelled the same way as the Mr. Langholm who writes."

"It is."

"Then are you any relation?"

"I am the man himself," said Langholm, with a quite hearty laugh, accompanied by a flush of pleasurable embarrassment. He was not a particularly popular writer and this did not happen to him every day.

"I hoped you were," said Rachel, as she helped herself to the first entree.

"Then you haven't read my books."

"But I have," she protested, quite flushed in her turn by the small excitement. "I read heaps of them in Tauchnitz when we were abroad."

Rachel was greatly interested. She had never before met a literary man; and she asked many of those ingenious questions which seldom really displease the average gentleman of this type. Consequently they were soon in the middle of an animated conversation, and the aquiline lady whom Langholm had taken in to dinner became a close and critical follower of a conversation which without warning took a dramatic turn.

"How do I get my plots?" said Langholm. "Sometimes out of my head, as they say in the nursery; occasionally from real life; more often a blend of the two combined; Now and then there's a case. There was one a little time ago, if we had but the man to handle it."

"And what was that?"

"The Minchin case!"

And he looked straight at her, as one only looks at one's neighbor at table when one is saying or hearing something out of the common. It was an inevitable moment, come at last when least expected; instinct, however, had prepared Rachel.

"Yes?" she said, her fine eyebrows raised a little. "And do you really think that would make a book?"

It was characteristic of Rachel that she did not for a moment pretend to be unfamiliar with the case.

"Don't you?" he asked.

"I haven't thought about it," said Rachel, looking pensively at the flowers. "But it was a very sordid case."

"The case!" he cried. "Yes, sordid as you like; but I don't mean the case."

"Then what do you mean, Mr. Langholm?"

"Her after life," he whispered; "her subsequent adventures! She disappeared into thin air immediately after the trial. I suppose you knew that?"

"I did hear it."

Rachel moistened her lips with champagne.

"Well, I should take her from that moment," said Langholm.

"And should you make her guilty or not guilty?"

"Ah!" said Langholm.

"Who are you talking about?" inquired Mr. Venables.

"Mrs. Minchen," she told him.

"Guilty!" cried Mr. Venables, with great energy. "Guilty, and I'd have gone to see her hanged myself!"

And Mr. Venables beamed upon Rachel as though proud of the sentiment, while the diamonds rose and fell upon her white neck, where he would have had the rope.

"Now, don't pretend you sympathize with a woman like that," he said to her, with a look like a nudge; "and for heaven's sake don't refuse that bird! It's the best to be had now."

"Well?" said Rachel, turning to Langholm when her host became a busy man once more.

"I should make her guilty," said the novelist, "and she would marry a man who believed in her innocence, and he wouldn't care two pins when she told him the truth in the last chapter, and they would live happily ever after."

"Then do you think she was guilty?"

And Rachel waited while he shrugged.

"What does it matter what she was? Fiction is truer than fact."

"But you haven't answered me."

"OH, well, as a matter of fact, I read the case pretty closely, and I was thankful the jury acquitted her. Oh, dear, no; she was no more guilty than you or I."

Rachel finished her dinner in great tranquility, and Langholm received an astonishing smile when the ladies rose.

"You will come and see us, won't you?" she said. "I shall want to hear how that plot works out."

"I am afraid it's one I can't afford to use," he said, "unless I stick to foolish fact and make her innocent."

And she left him with a wry face, her own glowing brilliantly.

In the drawing room the aquiline lady had a word to say.

"You talked a great deal to Mr. Langholm," said she, sounding her rebuke rather cleverly in the key of mere statement of fact. "Have you read his books, Mrs. Steel?"

"Some of them," said Rachel; "haven't you?"

"Oh, no; I never read novels unless it be George Eliot. I know I shouldn't like Mr. Langholm's; I am sure they are dreadfully sensational."

"But I like sensation," Rachel said.

"So you suggested he should write a novel about Mrs. Minchin!"

"No, I didn't suggest it," said Rachel hurriedly; but two beady brown eyes were upon her, and she felt herself reddening horribly as she spoke.

"You seemed to know all about her," said the aquiline lady. "I am not in the habit of reading such cases. But I must really look this one up."

Next week's installment describes a startling discovery and a dramatic meeting which has far-reaching results.

Shocking Barbarities of the Balkan Conflict

Concerning these acts, the report says:

"The case against the Bulgarians which remains, after a critical examination of the evidence, is sufficiently grave. In each case the Bulgarians acted under provocation and in each case the charges brought by the Greeks are greatly exaggerated, but their reprisals were none the less lawless and unmeasured."

After the massacre at Demir-Hissar by the Bulgarians King nstantine of Greece announced that he "found mself obliged with profound regret to proceed to risals." It was probably to this announcement that Greek letter writers in the army referred in their nt mention of "orders" to burn and slaughter. parison of dates, according to the report, shows e Greek "reprisals" had begun some days be Bulgarian "provocation" occurred. The com finds that the Greek army inaugurated the sec ar by the deliberate burnin the Bulgarian Kukush.

tment of prisoners, particularly at Salonica, by the Greek army is thoroughly condemned by the commission. Although the other Balkan nations were guilty of the killing of prisoners, and also were guilty of reprisals for the slaughter of their nationals, all this is as nothing compared to the torture meted out to those who fell into the hands of the Greeks at Salonica. Many non-combatants were imprisoned and starved for months, others were thrown into the bay from prison ships and drowned.

One charge against the Bulgarians at Adrianople should be mentioned. Just before the occupation of that fortress by the Bulgars and the return of the Turks, 45 Turkish residents of Karagatch, just outside the fortress, were arrested by the Bulgars and bound together in groups of four with their belts. They were told that they were being taken to Bulgaria (the story comes from one of the survivors), but when the soldiers got near the bridge across the Arda they shouted "Run quickly, the train is coming!"

The prisoners crossed the bridge and reached the opposite bank. There they were placed in line, their faces to the river, and pushed into the water. While the poor devils floundered about the soldiers fired at any heads that appeared above water. The man who told this story to the commission broke his belt and floated down the stream as if dead. Finally when darkness came he was able to make his way to the bank and escape.

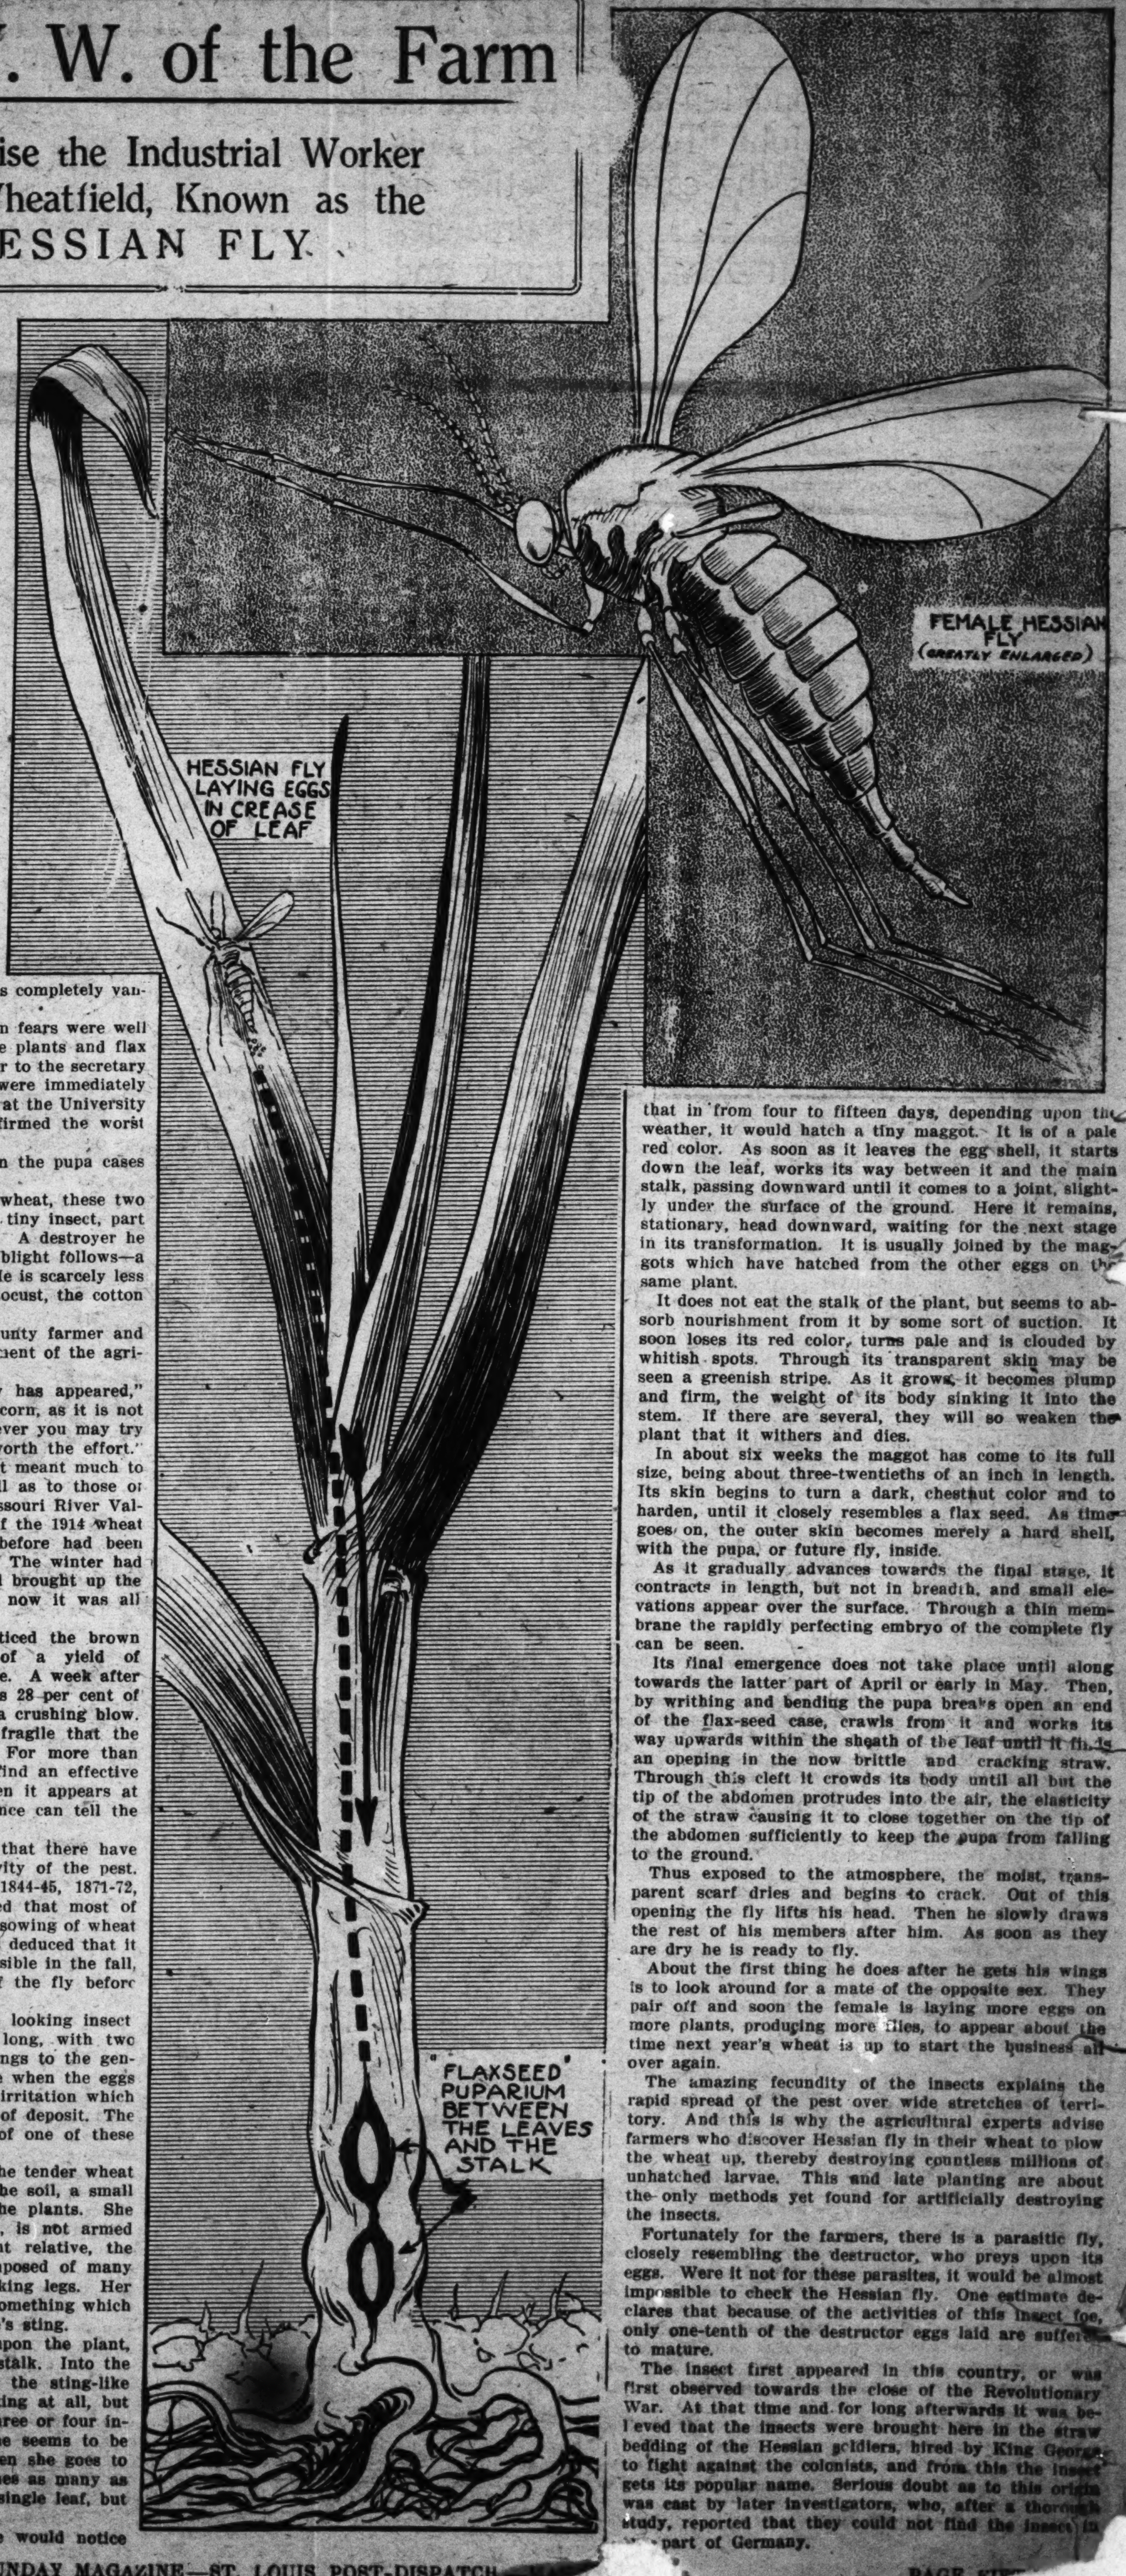
The Turkish army, when they resumed the offensive in Thrace, were quite as guilty as any other of the other Balkan armies, says the commission, in the matter of atrocities. A systematic effort seemed to have been made to wipe out the entire Bulgarian population. Villages were burned, old men and children were slain like so many animals. Says the commission:

"If the treaty of Bucharest had been in accord with fair play and justice or if the question of boundaries could have been referred to mediation there would have been stronger hopes that the inter-relation of the Balkan nations could be improved and

The I. W. W. of the Farm

—Otherwise the Industrial Worker of the Wheatfield, Known as the HESSIAN FLY

Biography of the terrible pest, only a tenth of an inch long, which at times causes loss of millions of dollars.



FEMALE HESSIAN FLY
(GREATLY ENLARGED)
HESSIAN FLY LAYING EGGS IN CREASE OF LEAF
"FLAXSEED" PUPARIUM BETWEEN THE LEAVES AND THE STALK

WHEN a Carroll County farmer noticed some brown blotches in the green of a wheat field, the other day, he was in the mist of golden dreams, for the prospects appeared good for one of the best wheat harvests in the history of that section of Missouri. The dreams began to fade at the instant he observed the splotches.

Running to one of the places, he examined the roots of several plants. There he found some small, round objects that looked something like flax seed. At this discovery his dreams completely vanished.

Unwilling to concede his newly arisen fears were well grounded, the farmer took some of the plants and flax seed to Carrollton and turned them over to the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. They were immediately forwarded to the experts in agriculture at the University of Missouri. The expert's report confirmed the worst surmises.

The flax seed were nothing less than the pupa cases of the dreaded Hessian fly.

HESSIAN FLY! To the grower of wheat, these two words spell calamity. They refer to a tiny insect, part of whose scientific name is Destructor. A destroyer he is in fact. Wherever his hosts camp, blight follows—a blight for which there is no remedy. He is scarcely less destructive than the Rocky Mountain locust, the cotton worm and the chinch bug.

"What shall we do?" the Carroll County farmer and his neighbors cried out when the judgment of the agricultural experts had been given.

"Plow up every field where the fly has appeared," was the answer. "You can plant it in corn, as it is not yet too late for a crop of that. Whatever you may try to do to save the wheat will not be worth the effort."

That was in the last days of May. It meant much to the farmers of Carroll County, as well as to those of the neighbor counties in the fertile Missouri River Valley. Great things had been expected of the 1914 wheat crop. A greater acreage than ever before had been sown. All conditions were propitious. The winter had been just right and the wet spring had brought up the young plants in lush profusion. And now it was all to be undone!

A week before the first farmer noticed the brown splotches, there were good prospects of a yield of 2,000,000 bushels in Carroll County alone. A week after it was highly doubtful that as much as 28 per cent of this crop would be harvested. It was a crushing blow.

And all because of a little fly, so fragile that the tiniest infant's hand could crush it! For more than a century science has been trying to find an effective means to eradicate the pest. Yet when it appears at the end of the hundred years, all science can tell the farmer is that there is no use fighting!

A compilation of the records shows that there have been six periods of extraordinary activity of the pest. These were in the years 1790, 1817, 1844-45, 1871-72, 1876-78 and 1900. It has been observed that most of these periods were marked by early fall sowing of wheat and late, damp springs. From this it is deduced that it is best to plant the grain as late as possible in the fall, so that the frost will kill the eggs of the fly before the larval stage is reached.

The fly is not in itself a formidable looking insect It is only about a tenth of an inch long, with two wings and long, dangling legs. It belongs to the general class of gall-flies, so called because when the eggs are deposited in a plant they cause an irritation which causes a small swelling over the place of deposit. The following is a brief story of the life of one of these insects:

One day along in the fall, just after the tender wheat shoots have forced their way through the soil, a small insect is seen hovering over one of the plants. She has a short proboscis, which, however, is not armed with bristles like those of her distant relative, the mosquito. She has long antennae, composed of many bead-like joints, and long, unstable looking legs. Her eyes are kidney-shaped and she carries something which at first sight appears to resemble a bee's sting.

After a brief hesitation, she lights upon the plant, just where the tender blade leaves the stalk. Into the ridged surface of the blade she prods the sting-like apparatus, which proves to be not a sting at all, but a tube. Through this tube she pumps three or four infinitely small, reddish eggs. Rising, she seems to be filling the tube with more eggs, and then she goes to another plant to deposit them. Sometimes as many as twenty or thirty eggs will be left on a single leaf, but this is rare.

If one observed one of these eggs he would notice that in from four to fifteen days, depending upon the weather, it would hatch a tiny maggot. It is of a pale red color. As soon as it leaves the egg shell, it starts down the leaf, works its way between it and the main stalk, passing downward until it comes to a joint, slightly under the surface of the ground. Here it remains, stationary, head downward, waiting for the next stage in its transformation. It is usually joined by the maggots which have hatched from the other eggs on the same plant.

It does not eat the stalk of the plant, but seems to absorb nourishment from it by some sort of suction. It soon loses its red color, turns pale and is clouded by whitish spots. Through its transparent skin may be seen a greenish stripe. As it grows, it becomes plump and firm, the weight of its body sinking it into the stem. If there are several, they will so weaken the plant that it withers and dies.

In about six weeks the maggot has come to its full size, being about three-twentieths of an inch in length. Its skin begins to turn a dark, chestnut color and to harden, until it closely resembles a flax seed. As time goes on, the outer skin becomes merely a hard shell, with the pupa, or future fly, inside.

As it gradually advances towards the final stage, it contracts in length, but not in breadth, and small elevations appear over the surface. Through a thin membrane the rapidly perfecting embryo of the complete fly can be seen.

Its final emergence does not take place until along towards the latter part of April or early in May. Then, by writhing and bending the pupa breaks open an end of the flax-seed case, crawls from it and works its way upwards within the sheath of the leaf until it finds an opening in the now brittle and cracking straw. Through this cleft it crowds its body until all but the tip of the abdomen protrudes into the air, the elasticity of the straw causing it to close together on the tip of the abdomen sufficiently to keep the pupa from falling to the ground.

Thus exposed to the atmosphere, the moist, transparent scarf dries and begins to crack. Out of this opening the fly lifts his head. Then he slowly draws the rest of his members after him. As soon as they are dry he is ready to fly.

About the first thing he does after he gets his wings is to look around for a mate of the opposite sex. They pair off and soon the female is laying more eggs on more plants, producing more flies, to appear about the time next year's wheat is up to start the business all over again.

The amazing fecundity of the insects explains the rapid spread of the pest over wide stretches of territory. And this is why the agricultural experts advise farmers who discover Hessian fly in their wheat to plow the wheat up, thereby destroying countless millions of unhatched larvae. This and late planting are about the only methods yet found for artificially destroying the insects.

Fortunately for the farmers, there is a parasitic fly, closely resembling the destructor, who preys upon its eggs. Were it not for these parasites, it would be almost impossible to check the Hessian fly. One estimate declares that because of the activities of this insect foe, only one-tenth of the destructor eggs laid are suffere to mature.

The insect first appeared in this country, or was first observed towards the close of the Revolutionary War. At that time and for long afterwards it was believed that the insects were brought here in the straw bedding of the Hessian soldiers, hired by King George to fight against the colonists, and from this the insect gets its popular name. Serious doubt as to this origin was cast by later investigators, who, after a thorough study, reported that they could not find the insect in part of Germany.

Three Remarkable New Musical Prodigies

One is six, the second ten and the third is now fifteen ☘ John Towers, St. Louis music master, cites the cases o other infant prodigies in music and files a protest against exploitation at too tender ages

PRESENT - DAY MUSICAL PRODIGIES

ENRICH KORNGOLD.—At the age of 15 he composed a symphony concerning which the Musical Courier says: "The finale, an allegro giocoso, presents extraordinary complications polyphonically, harmonically and above all rhythmically. The tempo changes every two or three bars—4-4, 3-4, 5-4, 7-4, and so forth. This movement makes tremendous demands upon the skill and attention of the conductor and the men in the orchestra. Nevertheless, there is something wonderfully electrifying about this final movement. Indeed, the whole composition is the work of a creative genius of a most extraordinary character. * * * It is difficult to conceive in what direction the boy could improve so far as technical mastery is concerned. He is an Austrian."

WILLY FERRERO.—Nicknamed the "eighth wonder of the world," he has, at the age of 6 years, directed the London Symphony Orchestra in several concerts. Mounted on a raised platform, he conducts the orchestra like a veteran director. In St. Petersburg he appeared before the Czar as conductor of the Imperial Orchestra. He is an Italian.

MISCHA LEVIZKI.—At the age of 10 years, he won the great Mendelssohn prize for piano playing. "An audience of critics and connoisseurs grew enthusiastic over his playing" in a concert in Berlin at which he appeared with Clara Clemens Gabrilowitsch, daughter of Mark Twain. He is a Russian Jew.

ALTHOUGH John Towers of St. Louis began his musical career when less than 10 years old, and although he is today well past the noonday of life, a hale and hearty critic despite his own theory, he has begun a campaign against "child labor" in music, which is the term he applies to that forcing of infant prodigies which he is convinced has sent many great artists to untimely graves.

Perhaps it was on the doctrine that the exception proves the rule that, at a recent recital of his pupils, the octogenarian teacher accomplished in one evening the following feats: (1) Gave an address on congregational singing; (2) sang a vocal solo; (3) played a piano selection of his own composition; (4) delivered Anthony's oration from "Julius Caesar"; and (5) accompanied his pupils at the piano. But he holds that only a few of the driven, overworked children of talent have lived to fulfill the promise of their younger years.

To support his theory, Towers has prepared a list of nearly 500 persons who showed such musical genius in precocious years as to be proclaimed child prodigies. He finds that among this pathetic group the average age of death is 33 years, while the average life of musicians who were not forced into celebrity in childhood is 67 years, or more than twice as long.

Among those whom he cites as victims of "child labor" in music are the illustrious names of Schubert, who died at 31; of Mozart, who died at 35; of Mendelssohn, who died at 38; of Weber, Chopin and Rousseau, who died at 39, and of Schumann, who died in the madhouse at 46.

The case of Karl Filtsch, favorite pupil of Chopin and Liszt, is recalled, he having died when 15 years old, but not before he had won sensational ovations at concerts in London and Paris and given promise of becoming the greatest pianoforte player the world had ever seen.

Mozart, says Towers, was killed in his prime by the weight of the stupendous labors which began when he was scarcely out of the cradle. At 3 he played the piano; at 4 he composed music which has been thought worthy of preservation; three years later, while his father was so ill that no musical sounds could be permitted in the house, the boy set down on paper a complete symphony, without the assistance of testing its intricate evolutions on the piano. In the early twenties he was hailed by the veteran Haydn as the greatest composer in the world and had already behind him many lifetimes of monumental achievement.

"These toils," says Towers, "exhausted and undermined his frail and delicate constitution, and he passed away at the unripe age of 39."

Eight years shorter was the span of life allotted to Schubert, who wrote "The Erl King" when 18 years old and who thereafter poured out with feverish prolificness an almost countless throng of songs, many of them the best ever written, piano music and orchestral compositions. Similar was the fate of Mendelssohn, who played when 11 years old before Goethe and was named by him "wonder child," and who at 17 composed one of his most perfect masterpieces, the overture to "Midsummer Night's Dream."

These are not the only tragedies of the hothouse method of forcing childish talent, according to Towers. There is a melancholy throng of musicians who lived for years of normal duration; but whose genius, having been [illegible] on relentlessly during childhood, the rich promise they showed was blighted before they reached manhood. Exhausted hopelessly by the early strain, they sank into mediocrity, and their names proved to be writ in water.

In the list of these "failures" by Towers are men whose memory is forgotten, save for an obscure paragraph in the tomes of a musical dictionary; but in childhood the renown of many of them was as brilliant as that of the children Mozart or Liszt.

There was Asioli, who at 8 years old had composed three masses, a harpsichord concerto and a violin concerto with full orchestra. There was Bachman, who at 12 successfully competed against Mozart, then 11 years old. There was Crotch, who at 4 played the organ in public concerts in London. There was Eckert, a piano virtuoso at 6, composer of an opera at 10, and author of an oratorio at 13. There was Arabella Goddard, who played the piano in public at 4 and at 8 published a book of waltzes.

There was Kellner, who at 5 played a Handel concerto before the English court; Ousley, at 8 a great organist and the author of an opera; Quantz, whose fame was once universal, but who is now remembered only because he taught Frederick the Great how to play the flute; and Camille Urso, who appeared in public as a violinist at the age of 7. Louisa Vinning sang solos in the theater at Plymouth, England, when 2½ years old, at 3 sang before Queen Victoria, receiving a diamond ring as a mark of the royal pleasure, and was toured in the theaters as "The Infant Sappho." Towers, when a boy only eight months her senior, heard her sing before an audience of 4000 in his native city of Manchester. She became mildly famous as an oratorio singer and harpist, but at 29 married and was never heard of again.

According to Towers, there are probably hundreds of children in the world today whom their parents, in their greed for fame and money, are harrying onwards to premature exhaustion of their powers or even to early death.

"Leaving the unhappy children of the mill, the sweatshop and the mine to others better qualified to speak on the subject," he says, "I venture to raise a protest against the social Juggernaut which is mangling thousands of children on the stage and concert platform out of human shape.

"There is need of immediate legislation which should be drastic and Federal. The parents of these stage atoms of humanity should be made to understand in no uncertain way that no children under a certain age say 15 years, should be allowed to exhibit themselves on the stage or elsewhere in public. At this age they will have acquired a fair education in the public schools, and, most important of all, a physical development which will stand them in stead when they begin the strenuous life, which is inseparable from the artistic life.

"Under some such dispensation, especially gifted youngsters would be enabled to learn the bent of their respective endowments and inclinations, and also have leisure to store their minds with practical wisdom which would help them hold their own when they enter the scuffling and bustling world.

"Had this common sense course been followed in the past, we should have been spared the premature loss of a large array of superendowed citizens, who left the world at the zenith of their powers and usefulness.

"My list of infant prodigies who died untimely deaths consists of persons abnormally gifted with musical aptitude, but who were overdriven in childhood. The results, as might have been expected, were woefully disastrous. They were killed by youthful drudgery, and all of them, had their energies been economized, might have ranked with the giants of their art."

However, Towers admits that some of the greatest of musical geniuses survived the forcing process and lived to old age. There was Beethoven, whose father drilled him with blows into an infant prodigy, in order to make money, but who lived to be 57 years old. Rheinberger lived to be 62 years old, Hanssens died at 69, Meyerbeer and Handel lived to be 73 and 74 years old; Joachim survived until 76; Rameau lived to be 81, and Saint-Saens is still hale and vigorous in his eightieth year.

But, as Towers observed, these exceptions scarcely count against the half-thousand gifted victims rushed into early graves or into the oblivion of exhaustion by the heartless ambition or greed of their relatives.

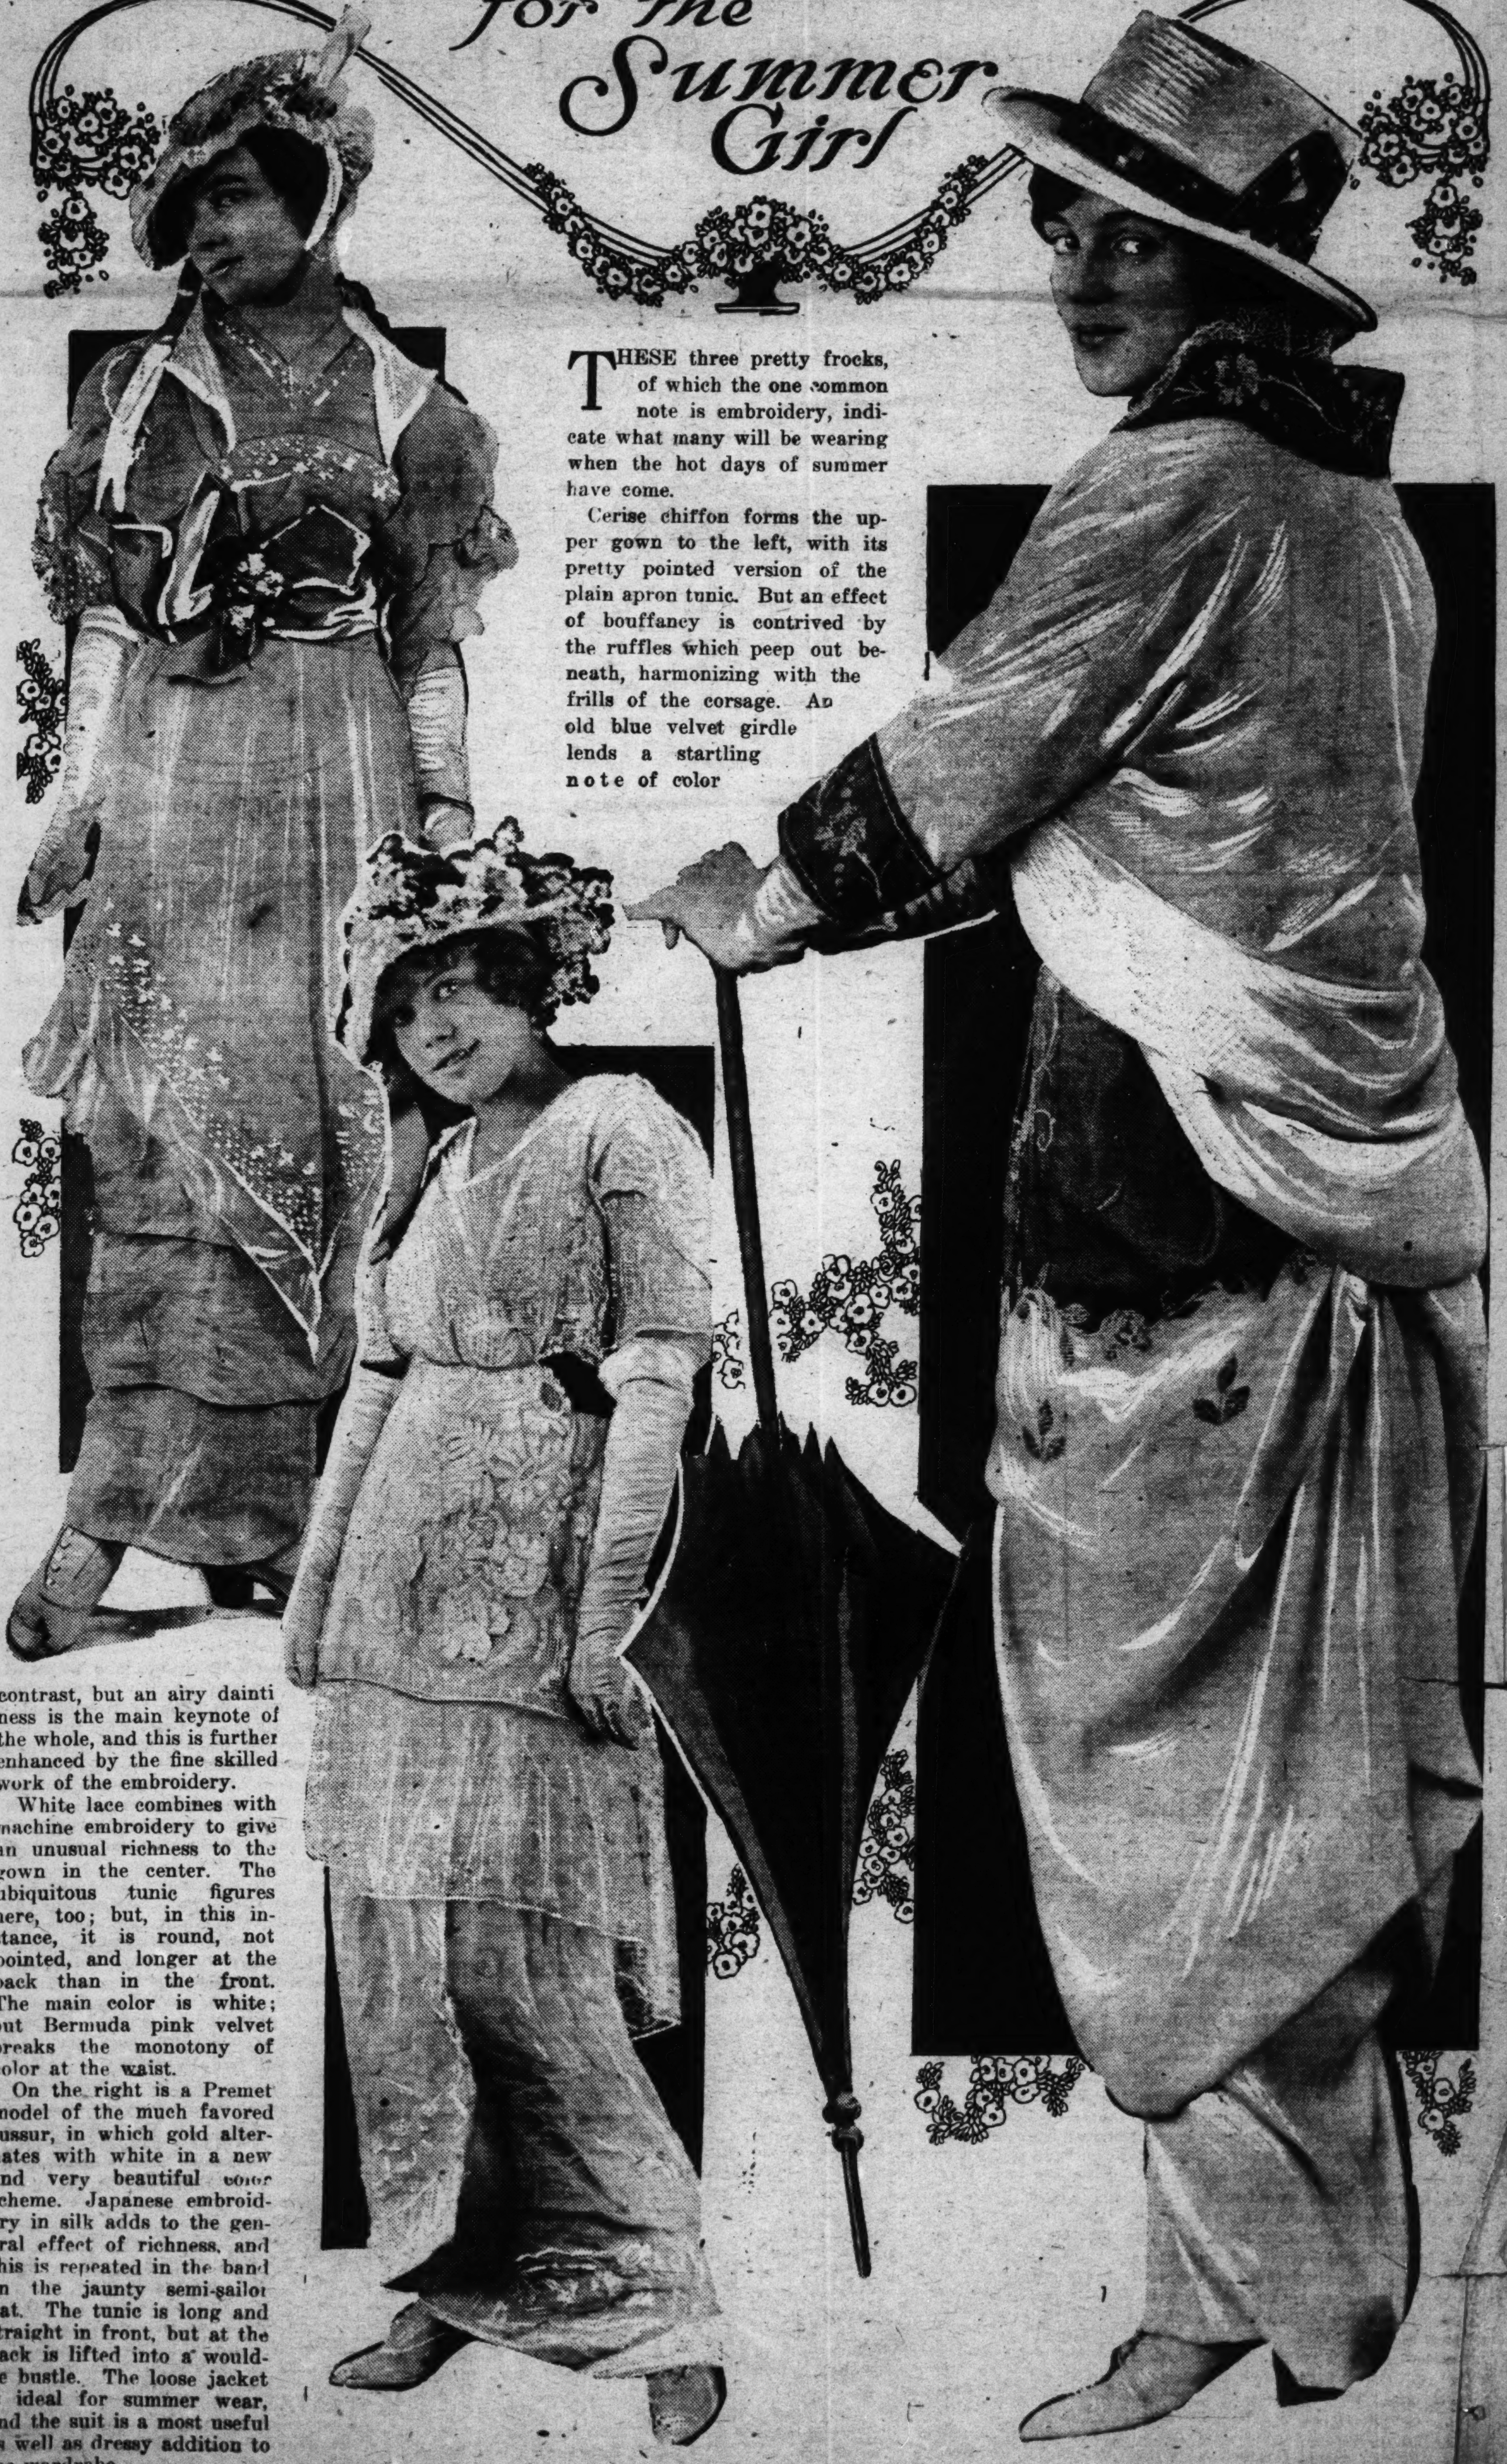
Embroidered Gowns for the Summer Girl

THESE three pretty frocks, of which the one common note is embroidery, indicate what many will be wearing when the hot days of summer have come.

Cerise chiffon forms the upper gown to the left, with its pretty pointed version of the plain apron tunic. But an effect of bouffancy is contrived by the ruffles which peep out beneath, harmonizing with the frills of the corsage. An old blue velvet girdle lends a startling note of color contrast, but an airy daintiness is the main keynote of the whole, and this is further enhanced by the fine skilled work of the embroidery.



White lace combines with machine embroidery to give an unusual richness to the gown in the center. The ubiquitous tunic figures here, too; but, in this instance, it is round, not pointed, and longer at the back than in the front. The main color is white; but Bermuda pink velvet breaks the monotony of color at the waist.

On the right is a Premet model of the much favored tussur, in which gold alternates with white in a new and very beautiful color scheme. Japanese embroidery in silk adds to the general effect of richness, and this is repeated in the band on the jaunty semi-sailor hat. The tunic is long and straight in front, but at the back is lifted into a would-be bustle. The loose jacket is ideal for summer wear, and the suit is a most useful as well as dressy addition to the wardrobe.

NOVEL THINGS WORTH KNOWING

Learning to Swim With a Circular Trolley

A NEW system of teaching boys and girls how to swim, instituted in certain Cincinnati schools equipped with bathing pools, is thus described by the Scientific American: An apparatus is employed consisting of an oval track secured to the ceiling over the pool. A dozen trolleys run on the track, and from each depends a rope with a belt attached. Twelve pupils fasten the belts around their waists and the swimming lesson is on.

They go through the motions of "sailor fashion" and the "Australian crawl" as per the direction of the swimming instructor, who keeps watch from around the edge of the pool. They cannot sink so the only thing remaining for them to do is to swim. This "water merry-go-round" has proved so successful that others like it are to be installed in schools where a bathing pool is a part of the equipment.

Nut That Is Locked by a Turn of a Screw

A NUT that locks has just been patented. It is illustrated herewith. It is claimed for it that it is the simplest, most durable and effective nut lock ever produced. It does away with the need of washers and takes up all extra play.

Its essential feature is a set screw in the head of the bolt which carries a small section of the threads of the bolt. A half turn of this screw moves these threads out of alignment, after the nut is been screwed on, thus making it npossible for anyone to unscrew the ut or for this to work loose. When ecessary to remove the nut the set screw can be inserted and a half turn of it brings the threads back into alignment. If need be, the thread in the end of the bolt can be filled with any composition to prevent unauthorized persons from meddling.

Trees Digest Food Before Eating It

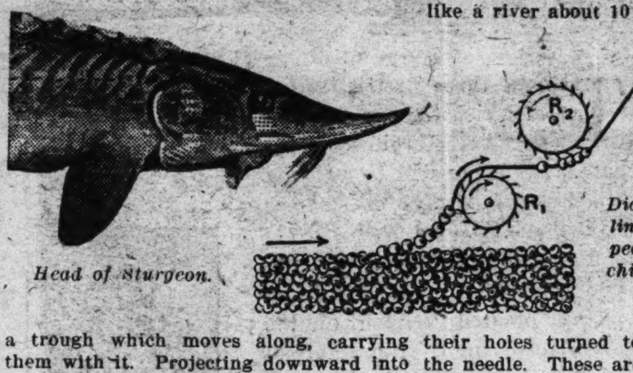
EVERY gardener knows that a tree can be fed and made to grow with increased vigor. If proper nourishment in the form or humus, nitrogen, phosphates, etc., be placed about its roots the tree will absorb this food and grow rapidly and strongly.

But how the tree feeds is somewhat more difficult to explain. In all probability the tree digests its food first and consumes it afterward. Certain it is that the average tree has no means of consuming food as a whole, as members of the animal kingdom absorb it. It is well known that the larvae of certain insects digest their food first and consume it afterward. Observation would indicate that this is exactly what the tree does. The tiny rootlets act on the substances in the earth, dissolving and breaking them up so they can be absorbed through the root pores. In order so to be taken up the chemicals must be in liquid form and devoid of all waste.

The end of each root is armed with a horny substance with which it can burrow through the hard soil in search of food. When food is found it is dissolved into a liquid and absorbed by the root fibers. From the root the food is carried by the sap to all parts of the tree.

Sturgeon's Nose Showed How to String Pearls

THREADING pearls is now accomplished by a machine, the essential part of which is a fine needle invented by Dr. Amans of Marseilles, France. The pearls having previously been bored, are poured into a trough which moves along, carrying them with it. Projecting downward into the mass of pearls are curved steel needles, their points directed up the stream of pearls. At certain points on the needles tiny wheels made of cork revolve and keep the pearls steadily moving up the needles.



Head of Sturgeon.

Diagram of the wave line needle of the pearl stringing machine.

None of this would be possible were it not for the special form of the point of the needle employed. This is exactly that of the snout of the sturgeon. In fact Dr. Amans designed it after a study of the snouts of many creatures, deliberately selecting that of the sturgeon as the best.

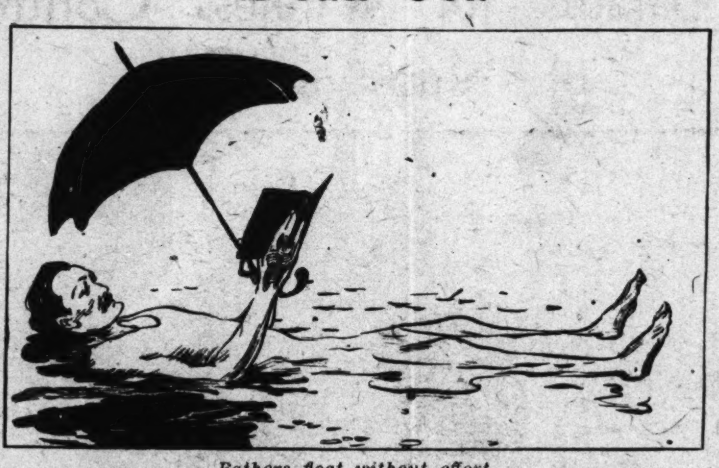
In an address before the French Association for the Advancement of Science held at Tunis last year, Prof. Amans called attention to the adaptation of the profiles of birds, fishes, beetles, etc., to their surroundings. The rapid swimming fishes have snouts designed to cleave the water with as little resistance as possible The fishes that burrow in the sand and mud in search of their food have up-turned snouts, sharp at the tip, with a decided concavity above. Prof. Amans observed that such fish plow up the mud with great ease and rise from their work without any of the mud clinging to them.

In the mass of pearls moving onward like a river about 10 or 12 per cent have their holes turned toward the point of the needle. These are caught as the current passes, impaled by the needle, pushed ahead by the revolving cork wheels, until they reach the thread, down which they fall by their own weight.

The stream form of the needle is essential. Dr. Amans patented it in France in 1901. He says that with straight needles or supple wires considerable resistance is produced and the stringing is not nearly so rapid as with the undulating needles. "The pearl-stringing machine," says he, "based upon the waving trajectory of appropri undulations, is the triumph of the principle that a waved line is the shortest distance from one point to another."

A machine in Marseilles which has 30 of these needles turns out strings of pearls at the rate of more than 50 yards a minute, these pearls being the caliber known in the trade as 3 zero, and the needles are 0.26 millimeters, or not quite one-hundredth of an inch in diameter. It takes a microscope to reveal the sturgeon snout shape of their tiny points.

Why You Can't Sink in the Dead Sea



Bathers float without effort.

THE wonderful buoyancy of the Dead Sea, that strange inland sheet of water in Palestine, is proverbial. It is some 47 miles long by nine miles wide, and lies no less than 1200 feet below the surface of the Mediterranean. It is the lowest-lying lake on the face of the globe. Its waters are so bitter that fish cannot live in them.

We get an idea of its density, says the Scientific American, when it is stated that in a ton of water from the Atlantic there is 31 pounds of salt, against 187 pounds from a like quantity in the Dead Sea. The result is that it is impossible for a human being to sink in these waters, and the accompanying photograph depicts a tourist reading his guide book while floating on the surface of the water.

New Giant Dippers for the Panama Canal

NO less than 34 men can find standing room in one of the dippers of the new Panama Canal dredges that are now being completed at the State Island Shipbuilding Co. The dippers of each of these mammoth dredges measure no less than 10 feet 9 1-2 inches in height from the bottom band to the upper edge of their manganese steel lips. They have a capacity of 15 cubic yards, and it is expected that each dredge, which has a displacement of 1500 tons, will be able to excavate about 300,000 cubic yards per month in actual operation on the isthmus.

These dredges were ordered by the Isthmian Canal Commission as a part of the permanent equipment for the maintenance of the canal and for immediate use in completing the channel through Gatun Lake and the Culebra cut.

The rock dippers are of extra massive construction and are fitted with heavy manganese steel teeth. The dippers are hung on a 3 1-4-inch single-part wire rope hoisting cable in accordance with the latest practice. These cables are the largest ever manufactured for a dredge. The dredges are designed to dig to a depth of 50 feet.

The dredges are being tested in New York harbor, after which the booms and dipper handle will be taken down and the spuds removed. The dipper handles and spuds will be stowed on the decks of the dredges and the booms and dippers shipped separately.—Engineering News.

Living Without Drinking

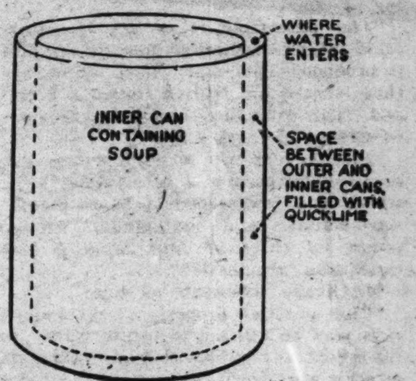
PROOF that there are animals that live without drinking is given in The Field by Dr. R. E. Drake-Brockman, who tells of the gazelles that live on the island of Saad-ud-Din, off the coast of Somaliland, where there is no fresh water at all, and where the annual rainfall is less than 2¾ inches.

Soup Can That Boils Itself Without Fire

HERE is a novel patent—a self-warming soup can—typical of the Connecticut Yankee's inventive genius and designed for tourists and picnic parties.

It is almost startling to hear that no external heat need be applied to the can of soup to warm it and that no fire is employed. But everyone has watched quicklime slake and has observed that a great quantity of heat is given off during the process.

Acting on this suggestion, the clever inventor took two open tin cans of different sizes and placed one within the other, filled the intervening space with quicklime and affixed both cans to a single cover of softer tin, having first inclosed within the inner can the food that required heating, generally soup.



WHERE WATER ENTERS
INNER CAN CONTAINING SOUP
SPACE BETWEEN OUTER AND INNER CANS, FILLED WITH QUICKLIME
Diagram of the self-heating soup can.

When the tourist or excursionist desires to use the soup, he has only to punch through the stamped circles near the edge of the soft tin cover and to pour water through them into the quicklime. Immediately the soup begins to warm and in a minute or two is thoroughly heated; then the cover above the inner can is opened and the hot soup poured out. The amount of quicklime may be regulated so as to be just sufficient to warm all the soup to about 70 degrees, a temperature at which we like to have soup.

This process of "slaking," in which heat is given off without fire, involves the study of thermo-chemistry. The reaction may be explained briefly in the following manner:

When quicklime (calcium oxide) and water come into contact they react and form slaked lime (calcium hydroxide). But the quicklime contains far more than its share of chemical energy, while the slaked lime has comparatively little. Accordingly, when quicklime is converted into slaked lime a quantity of energy equivalent to the difference in the amount of chemical energy between the two compounds of lime must be disposed of. This is given off in the form of heat, thereby warming the soup.

Platinum Is Dear Because So Rare

ONE of the difficulties in the extension of electrical and technical chemistry is the shortage of platinum, says the American Machinist. Russia is practically the only country producing platinum; it is found in various localities of the Ural Mountains. Very small quantities have been found in Borneo, Brazil, Australia and California, but of the world's total production of 13,250 pounds, more than 95 per cent comes from Russia.

Now extensive deposits of platinum have been discovered in Germany, in Westphalia, where iron, lead, copper and zinc mines abound. The platinum is present in the form of an alloy, but in sufficient quantities to guarantee profitable extraction, and it seems possible that under new methods of analysis deposits of platinum under workable conditions may be found in various other parts of the world.

NEW AND ODD THINGS IN SCIENCE

With Ultra-Violet Rays an Army Could be Blinded

THOSE death-dealing rays that H. G. Wells gave to his Martians as weapons with which to war against the earth-men actually have their counterpart in the ultra-violet rays, the power of which is only just beginning to be understood except by the scientists who have been studying them.

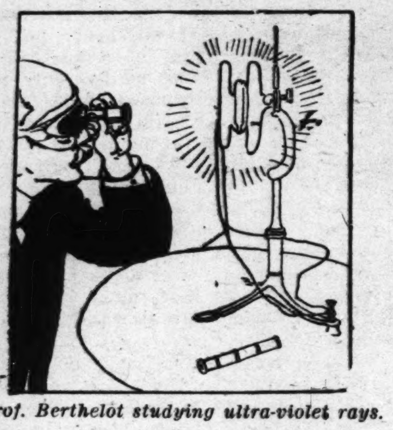
No man in the world knows more about ultra-violet rays than Prof. Daniel Berthelot of Paris, and no man can speak with greater authority. Richard Arapu, in an article in the Scientific American, quotes Prof. Berthelot as saying to him:

"The ultra-violet rays are the most rapid ethereal radiations that we are able to produce. This quartz lamp emits rays that vibrate 750 trillion times in a second. This prodigious number exceeds our powers of comprehension.

"But the eyesight is most greatly menaced by exposure to ultra-violet rays, which in a few seconds produce painful conjunctivitis and ophthalmia. An exposure of three or four minutes may cause total blindness."

Mr. Arapu comments on this:

"This peculiar property of ultra-violet rays may be utilized in future wars. In the recent war in Thrace many nocturnal attacks were made by Bulgarian troops armed with acetylene torches, the dazzling light of which blinded the enemy and made defense impossible. The invisible ultra-violet rays can be filtered from the green light of the mercury vapor lamp by a screen of suitable material and color, and it would be easy to devise apparatus which would emit a flood of these invisible destructive rays that would actually blind the enemy."



Prof. Berthelot studying ultra-violet rays.

The ultra-violet rays turn the gases of the air into foodstuffs. They make carbon dioxide and water combine to form sugar and other carbo-hydrates. Prof. Berthelot points out that "it is not too rash to look forward to the synthesis of certain foodstuffs," meaning that the day may come when our fields of grain and sugar cane and beets shall be replaced by factories in which ultra-violet rays will turn the air into [illegible]is can be done today, but a pound of such synthetic sugar would cost several hundred dollars.

Another extraordinary quality of ultra-violet rays is their power to digest food! Prof. Berthelot has inclosed sugar, butter and fats in sealed vessels of quartz and thoroughly digested them by the action of ultra-violet rays alone.

"It seems to me," says he, "that I have here touched one of the mysterious secrets of life. Food is digested by the action of the saliva, the gastric and intestinal juices, etc., which contain ferments or diastases that decompose the foodstuffs into substances that the body can assimilate. I have digested artificially by the agency of ultra-violet rays, foodstuffs of the three great classes, carbohydrates, fats and albuminoids, inclosed in globes of quartz.

"Perhaps the therapy of the future will make use of internal light baths, and dyspepsia will be treated by introducing into the stomach, instead of capsules of pepsin, tiny lamps that emit ultra-violet rays."

The Power of the Will

THE power of the will to control a badly injured body was never better illustrated than in the case of Dr. Constantin, a volunteer aviator in the service of the Bulgarian army, who was fatally wounded by a Turkish bullet while sailing his aeroplane over the trenches at Tchataldja. Notwithstanding the shock, the pain and the rapid hemorrhage, Dr. Constantine kept his nerve and was able to turn his aeroplane around, guide it back to the Bulgarian lines and volplane safely down among his friends. He died as the aeroplane reached the ground.

Fighting Warships With Bombs Dropped From Aeroplanes

A VERY realistic representation of the possibilities of bomb-dropping from aeroplanes was given at Hendon on the English Coast before a very interested audience. The battleship was a dummy, but when lit up by searchlights it looked like a real vessel against the dark background of the night. The flying machines were lit by electric bulb lamps so that their positions could be seen. Bombs were exploded in the air and on the ground.

Coherer

LAST week the Sunday Post-Dispatch told of experiments in the wireless control of ships at sea by John Hays Hammond Jr. A Frenchman, Brunet, constructed the apparatus pictured here with which he has successfully controlled the movements of a warship model in a tank. A transparent foremast contains five colored electric lamps arranged one above the other. When the vessel takes the water, a clockwork motor revolves slowly a cylinder fitted with metal studs, which successively make electrical contact with the lamps and also the various controlling instruments inside the hull. A 10-wire aerial is suspended between the masts, and is led to a filings coherer, which, in turn, is connected to a relay, local batteries and the apparatus. Directly the cylinder rotates, the first stud completes the circuit of red lamp 1; and the operator on shore, observing the light, immediately transmits a Hertzian wave from his spark coil. This wave instantaneously affects the aerial on board the little boat, enabling the coherer to pass a stronger current causing the relay to close the circuit of the motor which operates the propeller, thus sending the boat on its journey. The other lamps light up in sequence, and green light 2 and the white light respectively steer the ship to the left or right as the case may be. Red light 4 and green light 5 fire two cannon, one at the fore and one aft.

Big Doses of Radium

DR. A. SCHUYLER CLARK says he has demonstrated that radium is an efficient and satisfactory means with which to treat skin cancers if used in sufficient quantity.

The special point made by Dr. Clark is that all the cases treated by the single or massive dose method, that is to say, with one treatment of very high power, healed kindly, and none of them has recurred. He shows that many of the cases, when treated with repeated small doses, either refuse to heal or recur after a short time. The scars left by the healing after one heavy dose are smooth, nearly level and show a minimum amount of deformity.

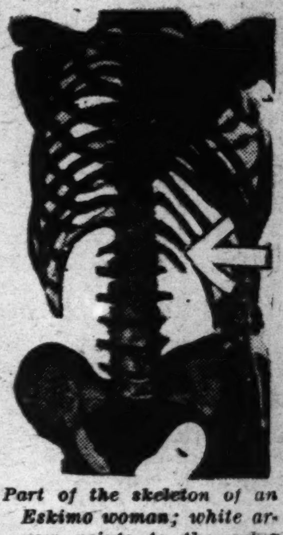
Balancing a Kayak Gave Eskimo an Extra Vertebra

"IT is no uncommon thing to hear some of our contemporaries referred to, especially in political circles, as having little backbone," writes Charles Dawson, the eminent English anthropoligst, in the Illustrated London News. "It nevertheless may come as a shock to most of us to be told that there exist human beings who literally and physically possess more backbones than their average fellow men.

"Normally, our human skeleton possesses seven cervical or neck joints (vertebrae), 12 dorsal or rib-bearing joints, five lumbar or joints of the waist, five sacral vertebrae cemented together and forming part of the hip region, and three or four caudal or tail vertebrae, in which latter respect, strange as it may seem, we exceed some of the higher apes.

"However, as above mentioned, there occurs, among other abnormalities of the human frame, a rare additional joint of the back, one which sometimes makes its appearance between the ordinary lowest rib-bearing joint and the topmost of the joints of the waist. This joint sometimes bears a pair of small rudimentary or floating ribs.

"But lately, during an examination of Eskimo remains, which from time to time have been brought from the Arctic regions, the writer noticed that representatives (male and female) chosen haphazard from a certain tribe of Eskimos living along the most northern shore of North America possessed the distinction of 13 dorsal vertebrae, with the pair of additional ribs. We have thus, in this instance, what appears to be a racial characteristic. A naturalist therefore looks for some cause which has operated in converting what is occasionally a rare variation into a fixed and permanent character.



Part of the skeleton of an Eskimo woman; white arrow points to the extra rib-bearing vertebra.

"The probable reason is not far to seek, for anyone who has learned the art of canoeing knows that the necessary equilibrium is chiefly maintained by exercise of the muscles of the waist. But the balancing of pleasure canoes is child's play when contrasted with that of the canoe or kayak of the Eskimo. The wonderful little craft laboriously constructed of driftwood spliced and overspread with dried sinews and skins, is only five or six inches deep, without keel or ballast, and would immediately turn turtle with its occupant if it were not for the wonderful skill with which he maintains his balance. And yet, in spite of this, the male Eskimo and his family, especially in their former unregenerate days, depended almost entirely upon his skill in the chase conducted from these little kayaks.

"Sometimes the death struggles of some wounded prey or a rude wave might completely capsize the frail craft, with its owner tied firmly to his seat. It is then that the power and suppleness of the Eskimo waist comes into play, for certain death follows swiftly to the hunter who cannot immediately, by a wonderful twist of his body and stroke of his paddle, restore himself and his craft to an upright position.

"It may well be conceived that under these conditions an additional joint at the top of the waist (or lumbar series), bringing with it an increase of flexibility and strength of back and waist, may have been of vital importance to a race living under such highly specialized conditions."

How to Tell Mastoiditis

THE necessity of detecting mastoiditis in its earliest stages was dwelt upon by several specialists at the recent meeting of the New York State Medical Society. Delay means a fearful operation or death. Mastoiditis is recognized by pressing the hard, ridge-like bone behind the ear. Tenderness there, especially if combined with a running ear, is an almost certain proof of mastoiditis.
